Liquor Ad Ban Passes House

By BRUCE YEMEN

A ban on liquor advertising was approved by a 37-13 vote that fractured party lines in the legislature Tuesday.

A warning from Premier Bennett that in spite of a free vote a defeat of the government would mean an election appeared to keep a number of undecided Socreds in line.

Three government members voted against the ban, which takes effect Sept. 1. They were Evan Wolfe (Vancouver Centre), Howard McDiarmid (Alberni) and Ernie LeCours (Richmond).

Herb Capozzi (SC—Vancouver Centre) spoke against the bill but abstained from the vote. Capozzi's family runs a winery.

FAVOR BAN

Others in favor of the ban were New Democrats Eileen Dailly (Burnaby North), Jim Lorimer (Burnaby-Willingdon), Bill Hartley (Yale-Lillooet) and Bob Strachan (Cowichan-Malahat) and Liberal Garde Gardom (Vancouver Point Grey).

The key vote was actually taken on an amendment by Ernie Hall (NDP—Surrey) which would have killed the proposed ban.

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson and Premier Bennett spoke in the debate on committee stage approval, with Bennett praising a Victoria Daily Times editorial and Peterson calling some of Capozzi's arguments "just a lot of hogwash."

Bennett said free votes have often been extended to members of his party but a defeat of the government means there will be an election.

SAME PATTERN

This brought a reply from Barrett who said he regretted that Bennett had reduced the issue to party politics. Both opposition parties had free votes for their members.

Arguments for an against the proposed ban followed the same pattern as those heard Monday during second reading debate.

Opponents said it wouldn't work, it was hypocritical because the government has failed to encourage moderation in its liquor sale policies, it was unfair to private enterprise and it had im-

Tobacco Also Gets Cut-Off Treatment

A total ban on cigarette advertising in the province effective Sept. 1 received unanimous final approval in the legislature Tuesday after some MLAs complained about unanswered questions raised by the bill.

Liberal Leader Pat McGeer said the bill, the Tobacco Advertising Restraint Act, is a "pretty stinky job of drafting" and urged Attorney-General Leslie Peterson to give more precise answers to opposition questions.

Peterson indicated it is "not the intention" of the bill that distributors of publications from outside B.C. should be considered in violation of the act if cigarette advertisements are contained in them.

TIME UNANSWERED

But he didn't answer McGeer's question about whether Time Magazine's edition published in B.C. for distribution in other provinces would be affected by the ban.

When Leo Nimsick (NDP — Kootenay) repeated McGeer's questions and asked whether the bill would force Time to publish outside of B.C. Peterson repeated earlier statements that the bill is intended to apply to areas of provincial jurisdiction.

McGeer said it is obvious that the province has jurisdiction over Time and then snapped:

"The attorney-general drags the whole legislature down to his level by bringing in sloppy legislation."

Gordon Dowding (NDP — Burnaby-Edmonds) said he doubts the value of the bill's reliance on injunctions by citizens to enforce the ban. The courts couldn't move fast enough to prevent the offence, he suggested.

CONCERNED

Alex Macdonald (NDP — Vancouver East) expressed concern that the injunctions might be used by "some bluenose" to have Playboy magazine taken off the newsstands, ostensibly because it contains cigarette advertising.

Peterson told Barrie Clark (L — North Vancouver-Seymour) that the bill covers cablevision programs but he said that this would be "subject to some question" in its application.

"All of the provisions of this statute must be read in the light that the province can only legislate in its own jurisdiction," Peterson said.

Premier Bennett said the reason for the Sept. 1 date for the ban is to allow existing advertising contracts to run out "so free enterprisers will have six months to go out and get additional business."

India Charges Genocide, Offers Support to Rebels

Times News Services

NEW DELHI — India today levelled charges of genocide and the "massacre of defenceless people" against Pakistan in an emotional resolution passed unanimously by the lower house of parliament.

The resolution, moved by Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, pledged India's wholehearted sympathy and support for East Pakistan in its bid for secession from ruling West Pakistan and charged the government based in Karachi is engaged in "the systematic decimation of people which amounts to genocide."

SUPPLY GUNS

This has increased speculation in the Indian capital that the Gandhi government will supply arms covertly to Bengalis fighting the Pakistani army.

In the battle zones of the eastern Pakistani state, meanwhile, government troops seem to be winning the struggle to regain control, after a bloody campaign which has killed an estimated 15,000 Bengalis since it began six days ago.

One United States correspondent who left the eastern zone Sunday reported troops were firing on people at what appeared to be the smallest provocation, buildings were being destroyed indiscriminately and the army was determined to assert its control over the 73 million Bengalis in the eastern state.

REBEL STATIONS

Information coming out of embattled East Pakistan remained fragmentary and there was no way of checking all the claims and counter-claims broadcast by the official radio and clandestine rebel stations.

While spokesmen express hope that other nations, particularly the United States and Russia, will play a role in ending the fighting, Indian officials refuse to rule out Indian support for the East Pakistanis should a prolonged guerrilla war become the pattern in East Pakistan.

Partly in an apparent attempt to goad Washington and other capitals into action and partly out of genuine bitterness, some officials are complaining that the west cares less about the deaths of brown-skinned men that it does about whites. "The conscience of the west was much aroused by Hungary in 1956 and by Czechoslovakia in 1968," one Indian official said Tuesday. "There is much more human suffering in East Pakistan today but the killing and maiming of poor brown Bengalis does not seem to stir the west."

SENTENCED to life imprisonment at hard labor today is Lieut. William Calley Jr. for the massacre of civilians at My Lai. The jury had a choice of the life term or a death sentence. See background story page 5.

New Quake Hits

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A sharp aftershock of the massive Feb. 9 earthquake rocked a wide area of the San Fernando Valley today, seriously damaging about 35 homes in the area hardest hit in last month's tremor which killed 64 persons and caused millions of dollars in damage.

DISCRIMINATION CHARGED IN TENANT ACT CHANGE

The New Democrats accused the government Tuesday of discriminating against people in low-income housing projects by removing them from the protection of the Landlord and Tenant Act.

They spoke during third reading of the government's omnibus bill, a part of which eliminates tenancy agreements signed for government subsidized housing from jurisdiction under the act.

Jim Lorimer (NDP— Burnaby-Willingdon) said the act should apply to all tenants and charged that the government was discriminating against the poor who live in subsidized housing.

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett agreed and asked Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell to reconsider that section of the bill. Barrett said the Landlord and Tenant Act appears to have been brought in to protect only the interests of the middle class.

Campbell, angry at Barrett, accused the NDP of cynically jumping on the issue for political reasons.

He said the amendment cannot be interpreted as discriminatory because tenancy agreements in housing projects are set by the federal government and follow the same provisions as provincial law as far as the required three months' notice for rent increases is concerned.

12,000 in B.C. Face Layoffs

MONTREAL (CP)—The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers called today for strike action against Canada's two largest railways Monday, April 5.

A CNR spokesman said shortly after the strike call the railway would immediately begin evaluating the effect on its national service.

The CPR curtailed both passenger and freight service in Western Canada as work stoppages by enginemen began to increase.

The walkouts have affected more than 5,000 workers in British Columbia so far, and it is expected that within a week 7,000 more will be laid off because of lack of rail cars.

Most of the workers affected are on the mainland and the interior.

SPREADS

The CPR's first reaction to growing work stoppage was to announce that transcontinental passenger service would operate only between Winnipeg and Eastern Canada.

In addition, the work stoppage forced an end to dayliner passenger service between Calgary and Edmonton.

The CPR said 95 engineers spread the walkout to five Saskatchewan points—Regina, Saskatoon, Moose Jaw, Wynyard and Wilkie.

The walkout crippled CPR operations in Regina, but the CNR continued to operate normally in Saskatchewan at that time.

All CPR operations in southern Alberta were halted Tuesday night when 26 firemen and engineers stopped working at Red Deer.

STOPPED IN B.C.

Work stoppages began a week ago in British Columbia and spread to Alberta, with more than 800 CNR and CPR employees booking off.

By today, an estimated 6,000 CNR and CPR employees were laid off in the West because of reduced traffic.

In Vancouver, engineers voted 162 to 15 to reject a personal telephone plea from Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey to return to work.

Previous talks in the dispute broke off last week after a three-man conciliation board reported it was unable to reach a wage settlement for a new contract.

Meanwhile, Mackasey told the Commons today that he considered it premature for him to participate in negotiations between Canada's major railways and striking employees.

E&N SERVICE ENDS THURSDAY

Victoria-Courtenay passenger service on the E&N is expected to be halted on Thursday as effects of the engineer bookoff spread.

At the same time the railway announced its transcontinental passenger service will operate only between Winnipeg and Eastern Canada until further notice.

Switch Crews In Victoria Out of Work

Canadian National Railways today reported about 20 persons laid off in its Victoria operations as a result of a shutdown of rail movements in the province since last Thursday.

Layoffs by the railways and associated companies were expected to accelerate next week with the calling of a national strike by locomotive engineers.

CN had about 800 laid off in its B.C. operations up to today. Those in Victoria were mainly switch crews at Point Ellice and Ogden Point yards, and some office personnel.

Meanwhile, efforts to expand the highway-oriented operations of CN Express were being made during the embargo on railway shipments in and out of the province.

HOFFA LOSES APPEAL BID

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Parole Board denied today Teamster President Jimmy Hoffa's second request for parole.

The decision ruled out any chance that Hoffa, 53, president of the nation's largest union, can seek re-election at the Teamsters' July convention in Miami.

VIET PULLOUT DATE SET BY DEMOCRATS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic party members of the House of Representatives approved today a compromise resolution calling for United States troops withdrawal from Indochina not later than Jan. 3, 1973.

The action at a party caucus is not binding. It commits House Democrats to work toward the goal of troop withdrawal and prisoner release during the 92nd Congress, which expires on Jan. 3, 1973.

ECOLOGICAL DISASTER NEAR KITIMAT

Pulp Mill Suspected in Huge Fish Kill

KITIMAT (CP) — Dead needlefish are piled two feet along a half-mile section of beach in this north-coast British Columbia community, and residents fear the headwaters of Douglas Channel have been struck with an ecological disaster.

"We have known there has been something wrong since the beginning of December when the runs of winter spring salmon failed to show up," says John Jensen, chairman of the community's pollution committee.

"I suppose the death of the needlefish could be from natural causes, but there are too many other things going wrong around here.

"The algae has stopped growing on the boats in the marina and kelp and other seaweed are dying off as far as four miles down the channel."

Jensen said things have been going wrong in the inlet ever since the Eurocan Pulp and Paper plant went into operation last year.

"Even the Indians who live three miles across the inlet are only catching a fraction of the usual number of salmon in their nets," he said in an interview Tuesday.

"I don't know of a sports fisherman who has caught a salmon this year and this is one of the last frontiers of this continent. Even the cod have disappeared."

Jensen said his committee has sent a telegram to Fisheries Minister Jack Davis and arranged through the Society for Pollution and Environmental Control to have toxicity tests made on some needlefish in the United States.

He said the local fisheries inspector is in Vancouver and no official investigation is under way.

"I don't know how long it will take to get results of the tests from the U.S. We had to go to the south because it seems no one in Vancouver wanted to do anything about it.

"The dead fish are stacked up like mounds of hay on the beach."

Shadow Mischief

Hydro Ups Price To Major Users

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Hydro has increased electrical power rates to 20 large industrial customers, including Ocean Cement in Victoria and Utah Construction and Mining at the northern end of Vancouver Island, by 12.5 per cent effective April 1, it was announced Tuesday.

The increase, announced by Dr. Gordon Shrum, Hydro chairman, will mean an additional $1 million a year in revenue for the Crown power utility.

In addition, Dr. Shrum said, Hydro has given a two-year notice to a group of large bulk power users of rate increases effective April 1, 1973. The notice was necessary because of contract terms.

He said there was no increase for general commercial and residential power users and no boost in natural gas prices.

Last spring, the traditional time for announcing power rate changes, Hydro boosted its charges between 13 and 20 per cent for residential users.

The industrial users whose rates go up Thursday are those with a load requirement of more than 5,000 kilowatts and running up to about 8,000 kilowatts. They were given the requisite one-year notice of rate change last spring.

Some of the companies involved in the increase are Utah, the refineries of Imperial Oil, Shell Canada, Standard Oil and Gulf Oil on Burrard Inlet, Canadian Forest Products Pacific Veneer plant at New Westminster, MacMillan Bloedel's White Pine plant and Ocean Cement in Vancouver, Westminster Paper, Molybdenum at Alice Arm and Kaiser Resources and Fording Coal in the East Kootenays.

The large bulk users who have received two years' notice are pulp and paper mills and chemical firms who take electrical power directly off Hydro's high-voltage transmission lines.

B.C. Hydro in the fiscal year ended on March 31, 1970, showed a loss of $408,118. Its figures for this year have not been announced, but a profit is expected.

. . . LIQUOR AD BAN

properly been put forward as a moral issue.

Several MLAs indicated they had been having a great deal of difficulty making up their minds on how to vote.

Capozzi argued that regulation of liquor advertising in print media is already sufficiently tough to ensure that no "pushing" of alcohol goes on through advertising.

Bennett rose to show the house a copy of an advertisement in a B.C. magazine which showed a pretty woman and a bottle of liquor with the words, "Guinness is an old softy . . ."

'BRAB ADVERTISING'

He asked whether members considered that the kind of "drab" advertising that some MLAs had indicated is the only kind that goes on.

"That ad was approved by the Liquor Control Board," Capozzi snapped.

Bennett replied "that's why" the bill was brought in.

Bennett went on to say he wanted to compliment the Victoria Daily Times for its lead editorial in Tuesday's paper.

He read from the editorial which was sympathetic to the proposed ban on cigarette and liquor advertising and then he said:

"For a paper that will lose some advertising, at least temporarily, this is a very heartening type of editorial."

He added that in the past he has condemned the Daily Times as a "Liberal newspaper" but he said "they show courage . . . that there is something above the dollar sign."

Barrett said that unless Bennett follows the ban with a program of "enlightened" liquor sales policies including elimination of barn-like beer parlors, "one could suspect that this was done for political motives."

Gardom indicated he was supporting the bill but called for an end to B.C.'s "behind-the-barn attitude" to alcohol.

He suggested that an alternate way of controlling the problem would be to require liquor advertisers to match their advertising budgets with equal donations to the government's efforts to fight alcholoism.

McDiarmid said he didn't believe advertising of alcohol was related to the problem of youth using liquor and termed the ban "almost a petty move." He called for a positive program to combat alcoholism.

SUPPORT

Burt Campbell (SC—Revelstoke Slocan) said his father, the publisher of the Castlegar News, had expressed support for the ban despite the fact that the amount of lost revenue from the government's policies would be exactly equal to the profit of the newspaper last year.

Bob Williams (NDP—Vancouver East) said Bennett's position was "the ultimate in hypocrisy" and he criticized "s t upor-markets" tolerated by the government and the "hotel monopoly."

"The position of the premier is as unreal as the position of the WCTU (Women's Christian Temperance Union)" said Williams.

George Mussallem (SC—Dewdney) said that even if the bill was "just a little step forward . . . we must stand together."

Wolfe said he is concerned about the introduction of "measure after measure" which cuts into the area of free enterprise. The bill is a "further encroachment of the freedom of the individual," he said.

YOUTH TURNED OFF

Hall, who said he moved the amendment in an effort to force a clear-cut vote on the issue separate from other liquor amendments, said anybody who suggests there is a moral question involved in the matter "has got to be out of his head."

He also said that if members looked closely they would discover that youth is "turning off alcohol."

"What you're advocating is darkness and ignorance and I can't stand for it," he said.

Peterson hit hard at Capozzi after the MLA had read a list of government controls already in effect on liquor advertising.

He said Capozzi was trying to minimize the advertising that is currently allowed and added:

"These suggestions that you are just trying to sell your brand to the exclusion of somebody else's brand (by advertising) are just a lot of hogwash."

Partridge Suggests Internal Tribunal

With the threat of censure hanging over the University of Victoria, president Bruce Partridge met senior faculty members Tuesday to offer a counter-proposal to the recommendations of the Canadian Association of University Teachers.

Partridge and his academic deans were reported to have put forward a proposal for an internal tribunal to hear the cases of Dr. William Goede of the English department, Dr. Tikam Jain of Chemistry and Toby Graff of Philosophy.

The three faculty members have been denied either tenure or promotion and are the central issue in a contract and tenure dispute involving nine other faculty that has disrupted the university since before Christmas.

MEET TONIGHT

The 42 tenured full professors, highest ranked academics in the university community, were reportedly meeting again tonight to discuss Partridge's proposals and the CAUT recommendations more fully.

Meanwhile Tuesday afternoon the CAUT reiterated its stand that external rather than internal tribunals represent the best solution "on a campus where extreme polarization of opinion" has developed.

Uvic Faculty Association president Don Harvey expressed pessimism, however, that the CAUT would accept Partridge's proposals.

"I do not believe that the association will countenace, nor do I believe that the CAUT executive will countenance, any proposals presented which are contrary to the recommendations of the CAUT executive.

CENSURE

"Unless such proposals are before the CAUT executive on April 2 and 3, I firmly believe they will recommend censure to the council of the CAUT in May," he said.

Dr. J. G. Kaplin, president of CAUT, said Tuesday that "no proposals were made and no agreements reached," but that Partridge requested from the CAUT members "preliminary reaction" to a plan he was intending to submit to the full professors.

He said Partridge asked the CAUT members to make no comment on the Saturday meeting until after he had met his senior faculty Tuesday.

"This condition they have scrupulously fulfilled," Kaplin said.

FREE DISCUSSION

"The CAUT believe that any proposal brought forward by any of the parties to the dispute should henceforth be subject to free and open discussion."

Partridge's plan apparently calls for the 42 full professors to form a review committee to look into all aspects of the three cases.

Harvey, speaking as faculty association president, said he has "no detailed knowledge of the plan and neither does the CAUT."

"It would be difficult, if not impossible, to find a fair tribunal after such prolonged argument," he said.

The Graduate Students' Society at Uvic Tuesday night joined the undergraduate students, AMS, faculty and faculty association in calling for acceptance by the administration of the CAUT proposals.

"Believing that natural justice has not been served by the outcome of recent discussions between the university administration and the executive committee of the CAUT concerning Goede, Jain and Graff, (the society) urge the board of governors to accept the CAUT recommendations in these cases," the motion said.

Meanwhile, a four page brief issued by Dr. S. A. Ryce, head of the chemistry department, claims the "allegation that Dr. Jain had no opportunity to defend himself is completely false."

It goes on to say Dr. Jain was voted down 10-1 by his department on the matter of granting of tenure. A 99-page file outlining reasons for not granting tenure was transmitted to arts and science dean Dr. John Climenhaga.

FINE STAGES

The document listed five stages as follows: The chemistry department voted 10-1 against tenure; the dean's advisory committee (elected by faculty) first voted against and then for tenure with a majority of one vote; the dean voted against tenure; the president opposed tenure; and finally the university review committee (also selected by faculty) ruled that both the department and the university had fulfilled all procedural requirements of the tenure document.

"Personally I am greatly concerned about the enormous waste of time, money and effort on a matter as clear-cut as a departmental recommendation against granting tenure on a 10-1 vote," Dr. Ryce concludes.

"If it is claimed that I or my department in any way denied natural justice to Dr. Jain in this application for tenure, then I demand that I be properly challenged in a court of law."

Dr. Jain refused comment when contacted this morning.

Voter Apathy Tied to Size Of Area

A University of Victoria political scientist says larger municipalities get lighter votes in referendums.

Dr. Mark Sproule-Jones, in a joint paper with Adrie van Klaveren, bases his claim on results of a survey of 109 local referendums in British Columbia municipalities between 1964 and 1968.

"Our evidence shows . . . that the greater the size of a municipality, the lower turnout in any referenda held," the paper, published in the current issue of B.C. Studies, says.

"Of the 56 referenda held in municipalities smaller than 3,000 population in size, over three-quarters (75.8 per cent) of these referenda had a turnout in excess of 50 per cent.

"In contrast, at the other end of the scale, the turnout in the 24 referenda held by municipalities varying in size from 12,000 to 60,000 only exceeded 50 per cent on seven occasions (29.2 per cent of the 24 referenda)."

ness by highway transport, expected maximum use of these facilities.

Its dayliner service between Victoria and Courtenay will halt Thursday.

Pacific Great Eastern and Burlington Northern railways have not been directly affected by the enginemen's action in booking off, but their ability to function is hampered because both connect with the trans-continental lines.

BN was still running trains on the lower mainland from Seattle and CN crews were still operating in Smithers and Prince Rupert, helping to fill pulp mill requirements locally.

In Victoria, CP Transport denied an earlier report that employees had been laid off, but a spokesman in Vancouver expected this would occur.

Victoria Elevator Co. said it still had enough grain to load for export this week, but that since railway shipments from the mainland have halted it was difficult to forecast how long its bins would hold out.

The forest industry on Vancouver Island is not appreciably affected since most movement is by truck and ocean shipping. The mainland forest industry is harder hit because it supplies the domestic market by rail.

CP Transport at Nanaimo said traffic had slowed and no eastern merchandise is being received, but trucks are still moving. There had been no layoffs up to today.

Local trucking firms such as Capital Freightways Ltd., had not been affected but expected to feel the pinch next week.

Sidney Teens' Future Bleak: Alderman

By PAT MUNSON

Sidney teen-agers are facing a bleak future, and lack of public interest in their plight could have disastrous results, Ald. Norma Sealey said today.

Recent efforts by Sanscha, Sidney's community centre, to provide drop-in facilities have resulted in a proposal so restrictive that Sidney youth council unanimously turned it down.

Another blow was struck this week when Sanscha cancelled all teen dances because of bad behavior. Sidney youth council sponsored none of these affairs.

'NO MORE'

"We are not going to hold any more dances here until the parents come down to make sure they are run properly," said Sanscha president Jack Pedlow.

The decision to cancel teen dances was made after an unruly crowd kept police and chaperones busy Friday night at a dance sponsored by an out-of-town band. An earlier Torquemaster Car Club dance posed similar problems.

Since a fire burned out drop-in centre in Sidney town hall last November teen-agers have been assisted in efforts to find a new centre by Ald. Sealey, Eleanor Sowerby, recreation commission secretary, and Hans Schneider, a private citizen.

Sanscha provided a once-a-week meeting place and the suggestion was made that a drop-in centre be located on Sanscha grounds.

But the final proposal insisted upon the youth council being sponsored by a service club which must assume financial responsibility for utilities and possible damage; that the centre be available two days a week; that a list of adult supervisors be submitted; and that the drop-in be closed before 11 p.m. on both days.

Gene Jackson, youth council president, is not surprised at his group rejecting the Sanscha plan. There were too many regulations, he said, and it was unlikely the group would be able to find a sponsoring service club.

"Maybe some more ambitious person will try to get something going, but I've got news for them. You're bumping your head against a brick wall in this town," he said.

The cancellation of teen dances means that future council activities to raise money for the centennial swimming pool fund are out, Jackson said. "But we will give them the $50 we have made so far."

Meanwhile, the young people are hanging out at a local pool hall run by Jack Scrimbit. They are not allowed to play pool until they are 14, but young people from 10 years and up crowd to the brightly-lit hall on 5th Street.

"We try to get the young ones to leave by 9 p.m.," says Evelyn Corden, who helps in the coffee bar. "But some kids don't seem to have any bedtime."

Sergeant Harry Chambers of the RCMP keeps a close check on the situation.

"The kids should have a place to go," he says, "but it is not up to the taxpayer to pay for it."

What is the solution?

Ald. Sealey says that Oak Bay Youth Centre operates its own drop-in centre with the help of an adult recreation assistant. Saanich has a municipally-operated youth centre on Burnside and plans another teen program in the centre.

"So far all we have done here is to succeed in alienating the kids," says Ald. Sealey.

Baby Among Fire Victims

BOSTON (AP) — Flames swept the upper floors of an apartment building early today. Fire officials said four persons died, 12 were injured and others were missing in the blaze of "suspicious origin."

Lieut. George Lee, public relations officer of the fire department, said there had been two other fires of suspicious origin in the five-storey brick structure during the last year.

Lee reported seven deaths at first but revised the figure later.

The dead included a baby. Neighbors said they thought most of the victims were older persons.

Many students and elderly persons lived in the block-long building. About 150 of them fled to safety or were rescued. The injured were treated for burns and smoke inhalation.

The apartments in the Back Bay section not far from the Red Sox home Fenway Park, contains 40 apartments housing about 160 persons.

Fire Chief George Paul said damage to the building was about $150,000.

Pope Attacks 'Sexuality'

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul deplored the "river of sexuality" flooding modern society and cautioned teachers today not to let sex education unbalance their students.

The Pope returned to "temptation of the flesh," a frequent subject of his speeches in recent years, at a general audience in St. Peter's Basilica.

He lamented that streets, theatres and publications are filled with "insistent, subtle and orchestrated" sex propaganda.

"There is not a book or a show," he said, "that does not contain a page of sex."

The Pope hailed sex education in schools as a "good pedagogical principle," but warned that it should not go too far.

Teachers must "keep in mind the difference of the sexes," he said.

Car Dealer Admits Misleading Ads

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Richmond used-car salesman who pleaded guilty in provincial court Tuesday to three charges of misleading advertising admitted placing similar ads in a Vancouver newspaper for the last 15 years.

Harvey Solloway also pleaded guilty on behalf of his company, Harvac Investments Ltd. to four counts of misleading advertising.

Prosecutor Paul Halprin told the court this was the first prosecution of its kind in Canada under the Combines Investigation Act.

He said that Solloway gave his residence telephone number in the ads instead of that of his company and that Solloway purported to be the owner of cars he had bought as a used car dealer from city lots.

Directors of Harvac Investments, a company with a Richmond address are listed as Solloway and a Margaret Solloway.

Solloway told Judge William Selbie "I have been advertising like this for 15 years and there are 20 others in town doing the same."

Said Judge Selbie: "You have been misleading the public for 15 years. Did you feel it was within the law? Do you think it was morally correct?"

"If Your Honor would give me some guidlines, so that others won't be prosecuted," said Solloway. "Because I feel this is a test case."

"Don't look to me for guidelines," said the judge. "Look to me for sentence."

Solloway was remanded to April 6 for sentence.

Fast Action Saves Child From Death

A three-year-old old Colwood boy was revived quickly Tuesday morning by nearby residents and workmen after he fell into a small creek near his trailer park home.

Colwood RCMP said the youngster, Burt Cline, had been playing with a friend, Joe Musselwhite, another resident of the trailer camp behind the Mountain Hideaway service station, 2892 Trans-Canada Highway.

The two moved out of sight of parents for a short time and the parents ran outside to find the Musselwhite boy pointing to the creek.

PULLED FROM WATER

Mrs. Dorothy Musselwhite, Joe's mother, waded into the water — about five feet wide and two to three feet deep — and pulled out the Cline boy.

Gas station owner, Robert Schwab, and mechanic, Ross McIntyre arrived from the station and McIntyre applied artificial resperation to the youngster. He was breathing normally when taken by ambulance to hospital.

A Thousand Miles Apart

ACCORDING TO SOME WESTern diplomats who are rated as being well informed on Pakistan matters, the West Pakistan central government can win the current battle against East Pakistan rebels, but lose the war. The reason is that apparently the 70 million residents of East Pakistan are nationalists to a man, and that now the flame of possible independence has been lit it is not likely to be extinguished until the people's cause has been won.

In some areas there reportedly was some resistance to the troops flown in from West Pakistan. But an exclusive eye-witness despatch from a London Daily Telegraph correspondent indicates that much of the killing was nothing less than the massacre of hundreds of unresisting — even sleeping—civilians. Such terrorism can burn hatreds into a population that will last for many years. A peaceful East Pakistan from now on will apparently be one kept under firm military control. How long could such a situation continue?

Apart from the domestic difficulties there would be the international repercussions. West Pakistan is dependent on large aid programs from other countries, including the United States, and if feeling abroad ran against a continuing rule by sheer force in East Pakistan, the government would inevitably be influenced. There is in addition the fact that 1,000 miles separate the East and West portions of the arbitrarily established country, with India forbidding direct supply flights over its territory.

Perhaps most decisive of all is the fact that the two populations have little in common except their Muslim religion. The East is composed of Bengalis, the West of 50 million Punjabis with a few small minorities, and they do not have a common language.

The East Pakistan people, although numerically superior, have never been able to exert control of the central government, located in West Pakistan. There have been many frictions between the two components—the recent tragedy of typhoon and flood in East Pakistan brought in its train many accusations of tardiness and inadequacy in the aid sent by the central government.

Now, under the leadership of Sheik Mujibur Rahman, the whole nationalistic pot has boiled over. Events—and newly aroused hopes—have gone too far for a return to the previous conditions. In this era of localized sovereignties, regional aspirations and resentment of distantly imposed authority, the chances of East Pakistan emerging as an independent country must be adjudged at least possible, even though far in the future.

The question is—if independence is to be inevitable—whether it can be achieved without further bloodletting which will serve no purpose. Pakistan will not be the first arbitrarily formed "nation" to find in dismemberment its only remedy for internal stresses.

Mr. Greene's Energy Policy

IN DEBATE ON THE GOVERNment reorganization bill now before Parliament, Energy, Mines and Resources Minister Joe Greene has shown himself content with the smaller role his department will play in the new scheme: he will concentrate on non-renewable resources and will leave renewable resources to the forthcoming Environment department, to be headed by Mr. Jack Davis. Presumably, too, most pollution problems will come under the jurisdiction of Mr. Davis' new department — in contrast to the present procedure which sees jurisdiction over pollution problems shared among the fisheries, northern development and energy departments.

Mr. Greene's department was created in 1966 and, more than anything else, the constant reshuffling of responsibility over Canada's energy resources illustrates the minister's remark last Monday that there is "no such thing as a static and continuing or constant energy policy." Mr. Greene is prepared to adapt his ministerial responsibilities to a role which tends to turn his department into an economics research institute, assessing the comparative costs of different programs.

His objectives are, in general, to make the use of energy both economic and consonant with national security. These two principal objectives are not always compatible — as in the case of oil. Canadian needs east of the Ottawa Valley are met by oil imports from abroad. Mr. Greene makes it clear that "we would not want complete security at the price of economic foolhardiness."

It is appropriate that Mr. Greene should be resourceful as he attempts to discern the need for and the proper use of limited resources. The minister has shown proficiency in judging standards which are suited to the time and the place in question.

His approach was expressed last session in a debate on water resources and it had a meaning which rose above the immediate occasion: "In this variegated country, it is very seldom that there is a simplistic answer for everything — that the same answer will do in all parts of Canada." Far from limiting the scope of Mr. Greene's authority, the new reorganization bill may allow him more room in which to apply new standards to scarce resources in an age of rising demand here and abroad.

In the Dock

AFTER MONDAY'S VERDICT of guilty in the court-martial of Lieut. William Calley, he said: "My Lai has happened in every war; it's not an isolated incident, even in Vietnam." It is the conscience-ridden feeling that My Lai is far from being an isolated case that is prompting American liberal opinion to point to the possibility of other massacres and other cover-ups. An uneasy conscience is prompting the United States public to consider the parallels of the Ft. Benning trial with Nuremberg, and to question the possible implication in other war crimes of officers far superior in rank to Calley.

The grim proceedings at the U.S. Army base in Georgia may serve belatedly to awaken the majority of Americans to the moral implications of a war which has become the property of Pentagon computers and of soldiers obsessed with bloody but pointless missions.

The widespread protests and inner questioning aroused by the My Lai massacre indicate that the United States still has a deep moral sense. But a moral sense must be implemented to be effective; and a nation's good reputation cannot long be proof against shocking misdeeds done in that nation's name. Much more than Lieut. Calley's life has been at stake.

Seal Hunt Protest

Early reports reaching Britain on the 1971 seal hunt in the Gulf of St. Lawrence indicate that grim cruelty still exists despite stringent regulations. Most of the professional sealers, it is said, now seem to have had some training in killing the baby seals as swiftly as possible and their work has not so far provoked criticism. Animal welfare observers report witnessing numerous instances of cruelty and much clumsy clubbing to death, also many seals left badly injured on the ice. Landsmen from the Magdalen Islands are said to be mostly to blame for the cruelty, instances of which were so bad that fishery officers out on the ice sent some hunters home and revoked their licences.

Whether or not more regulations are needed to effect it, something should be done to prevent a recurrence of the inexperienced participation of landsmen reported to be mostly responsible for this year's cruelty, some of whom admitted they were killing seals "for fun." It is in any case impracticable for a Government inspector to be behind every hunter, professional or amateur. How much cruelty therefore goes undetected? — Margaret Cooper, Secretary, Crusade Against All Cruelty to Animals Limited, London.

NO SOLUTIONS YET

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

A Sick Parliament and a Weak Opposition

JACK Davis, minister-designate of environment and one of the most powerful men in Canada, recently permitted himself a rare moment of public candor. He said, according to an obscure news dispatch, that the Trudeau government would be re-elected next year since the divided opposition parties could not hope to beat it. This is probably a safe bet as things stand now but it offers a sad commentary on our political system.

Hutchison

Certainly the government is strong (whether you approve it or not) because it is led by a strong prime minister and includes a few men like Mr. Davis. It is so strong (whether it happens to be right or wrong on any particular issue) that the opposition admits its strength by attacking it every day for being arrogant and dictatorial. And it looks even stronger than it is because of the opposition's weakness.

That, I suppose, is what Mr. Davis means when he assumes another electoral victory, but surely he is too wise to rejoice at such an easy prospect. He must know that the political system works both ways, that in the end weak opposition makes for weak government. If the present opposition were stronger the government would be stronger, too, under strict scrutiny where strength really matters.

Distinction

Here one must distinguish between mere strength in elections and real strength in policies. The government has demonstrated that it knows how to win elections but it has yet to demonstrate that it knows how to solve the nation's problems. On the other hand, the opposition has yet to demonstrate that it can win elections and meanwhile has no understandable policies to suggest.

As a result, the natural tensions that alone can keep the parliamentary process in good working order have relaxed. The government also relaxes when it need not worry (or so it thinks) about an opposition providing no alternative government acceptable to the nation. In short, the weakness of the Conservative party and the family feud raging inside the New Democratic Party are bad for all concerned.

The first victim of this unnatural situation and lack of balance is Parliament itself. Where it was once the central forum of debate, the focus of national decision, Parliament seldom interests the ordinary citizen nowadays unless it explodes in a passing fit of anger, and otherwise the newspapers give it little space.

Most of the members leave the House after the daily question period to attend the various committees that work hard but are almost unknown to the public. The ministers retire to their own departments or to the mysterious cabinet committees in which all vital decisions are made. Or if the ministers have anything important to say they do not usually say it in the House but in the lobby outside before a television camera.

Permanent Change?

Their transfer of debate and decision from a downgraded Parliament to its various upgraded organs has become obvious to everyone. The interesting question is whether we are witnessing a temporary phenomenon or a permanent change in the system. As it seems to me, a remote observer, the answer is as obvious as the question — a permanent change has occurred.

It is blamed by the opposition on the arrogance of the government, its insatiable appetite for power, its contempt of parliamentary forms. The government argues in reply that the nation's business has grown too vast and complex for action, or even for proper explanation, in the Commons and must be settled elsewhere by men who understand it. This does not mean, the government says, that the new system is any less democratic than the old. It is only more businesslike and efficient.

Instead of wasting its energies in the House it conserves them for use in the modern apparatus of power. Instead of talking, it acts. Instead of debating lofty general principles it devises specific solutions for our problems.

Does it indeed? If the solutions are being devised, the public has not seen them yet in any of our truly basic problems. But that should surprise no one when those problems cannot be quickly solved by any imaginable system and must be lived with for a long time to come.

So we have a wonderful apparatus of investigation. We have no answer to our deepest questions. Neither has any other country in the world, because the questions outrun human inteligence in a race which intelligence, so far, seems to be losing.

Still, we are making gains of a sort. We lack solutions for all the major problems but at least we have a better knowledge of them, a sudden realization that they are far more difficult and intractable than we used to think in our days of innocence.

From better knowledge perhaps we can expect better policies and even a better society later on. It is clear, however, that we shall not get the answers from Parliament acting as a public forum and focus of decision. The answers are being prepared, insofar as they can be prepared, in a different place, mainly in the cabinet committees, above all in the dominant steering committee of some eight men whose names are secret.

It is too early to say whether the changed system will work satisfactorily, whether the final result will justify all the elaborate and expensive machinery. In the end Parliament must judge it, since the nation has no other means of judging it. Hence the weakness of a Parliament without an effective opposition is a very grave weakness in the system whatever shape it is actually taking for the future.

Any government that rejoices because it is temporarily safe in electoral politics is a very foolish government, already infected with the fatal disease of hubris. The Trudeau government may not have reached that point yet but, if it ever does, only Parliament, as the people's ultimate spokesman, can cure it by surgery or execution. In the meantime the parliamentary physician himself is sick and only a fool can find any satisfaction in that sickness.

FROM WASHINGTON

By JAMES RESTON

Failures From a Divided Command

NOTHING is harder to conduct than coalition warfare with divided counsel and command. This cost the Allies hundreds of thousands of lives in the two world wars, when the separate nations could not agree on who had the decisive voice on the battlefield, and it is clear from the recent operations in Laos that the United States and South Vietnam are now running into that dangerous problem in the final phase of the war.

Reston

It is clear from the private testimony of top U.S. military and civilian officials that South Vietnam invaded Laos with about half the troops available to the enemy, and that Gen. Abrams, the U.S. commander, wanted them to commit a much stronger force, and remain longer in the battle, but that President Thieu of South Vietnam chose a different course.

This is probably only a foretaste of unavoidable problems ahead. The more responsibility Saigon takes for the conduct of the war, the more it will want to determine the strategy. As President Nixon has made clear, he will, of course, insist on retaining control over where and when and in what numbers U.S. planes and airmen are used, but by the same token, President Thieu will insist, as he did in Laos, on deciding how many men to use and when to advance or withdraw.

For a while, the White House and the U.S. military officials in Saigon were giving the impression that the withdrawal from Laos, a vital month before the coming of the monsoon rains, had all gone "according to plan," but lately the Pentagon has been taking a more candid and believable line, at least in private.

Secretary of Defence Laird, for example, told reporters on Capitol Hill that the invasion of Laos was cut short because of "the tremendously vicious and violent reaction on the part of the North Vietnamese, and also the fact that the South Vietnamese feel that they have carried out a primary objective of the operation — that is, to disrupt the logistics supply routes."

This is a much more reasonable explanation of the adventure than the optimistic official reports out of Washington and Saigon just a week or so ago, but it doesn't tell as much as officials here are now saying in private conversation.

Underestimated Enemy

First, it is conceded here now that somebody — whether the American or South Vietnamese command is not clear — understimated the strength of the enemy forces in the area. Nixon said on television early in the invasion that the North Vietnamese would have to stand and fight or face the prospect of having their supply routes cut.

Even before Hanoi demonstrated that it was willing to accept the battle, despite the overwhelming air power of the United States, General Abrams urged President Thieu to be sure he was going in with enough men to drive across Laos to the westernmost trails.

When the North Vietnamese did put up stiffer resistance than expected and also demonstrated that the U.S. helicopter fleet was vulnerable to mass gunfire from the ground, Abrams tried again to get the Saigon leaders to rush in many more troops than Thieu thought advisable. So the battle was broken off, not without achieving some of its objectives, but clearly without realizing the Pentagon's hopes.

For one thing, given another month and deeper penetration into Laos, it had been planned to seed most of the trails with all kinds of concealed explosives that would have hampered the continued use of these supply routes even after the end of the monsoon rains. Some of this, of course, was done, but not nearly to the extent General Abrams wanted.

The result is that while both Washington and Saigon are claiming, no doubt with some justification, that they have interrupted the enemy supplies and killed over 13,000 of his men, and gained time for the continued withdrawal of American forces, both allied camps are more disappointed than they let on in public, and both are now tending to blame the other for not doing more.

Unequal Sacrifices

Nevertheless, this is what usually happens when there is no unified command and when the sacrifices of one ally are much greater than the casualties of the other. The U.S official casualty list is a little over 50 Americans killed in the invasion, the official South Vietnamese count is 1,146 South Vietnamese killed and 245 missing. Even within the ranks of the American Expeditionary Force, there are complaints of unequal sacrifices, for the burden is now falling on the U.S. Air Force, while the Army is holding the line and otherwise engaged in less risky assignments.

Nor is there much likelihood that the future will correct the problem of divided commands. For while Washington and Saigon may for the moment have a common objective, the more Nixon pulls out of South Vietnam, the less he will have to say about what goes on there. As he approaches the U.S Presidential election of 1972, the more eager he is likely to be to reduce his forces; but as President Thieu approaches the South Vietnamese presidential election of September, 1971, the less he is likely to want to risk a military disaster. In fact officials here have reasons for believing that this was very much in President Thieu's mind when, faced with stiff resistance from the enemy and advice from General Abrams to commit more troops to the battle, he chose to minimize his risks and withdraw.

DENNIS THE MENACE

"DOES A PAL YELL AT A PAL IF HIS PAL BROKE HIS GOLF CLUB ?"

Looking Back

From the Times of March 31, 1911:

NEW YORK — Wall Street today is buzzing with the report that Morgan, Rockefeller and Kuhn Loeb interests are planning to force all the small banks and trust companies in the country out of business.

The ostensible purpose of the combination's move, Wall Street believes, will be to prevent scandals in the banking world, but the real purpose, it is said, is the formation of a money trust to dominate the country and to gobble up the proposed central bank.

The Real Guilt Lies With Those Who Give Orders

By STANLEY KARNOW

Nearly a decade ago, a Yale psychologist by the name of Stanley Milgram conducted a study that was remarkably prescient. He demonstrated in the laboratory what Lt. William Calley and his unit would later dramatize at My Lai — that man's behavior is almost invariably dominated by authority rather than by his own sense of morality.

This suggests that the real guilt for the slaughter of civilians in Indochina, whether in My Lai incidents or through B-52 raids, lies less with those who obey than with those who issue orders. Moreover, the guilt is shared by a nation that closes its eyes to atrocities, as the United States has for years.

The Milgram study, borne out as it has been by the realities of Indochina, also suggests that Americans cannot plausibly brand the Nazis as a singular breed of "war criminals" when they have shown themselves to be equally disdainful of human life.

In his original experiment, described as a "study of destructive obedience," Milgram assembled a group of school teachers, salesmen, engineers and other "average" Americans. Their task was to put a series of questions to students, and administer electric shocks ranging up to 450 volts to those who wailed to answer correctly.

The shocks were fake. But this was unknown to the "examiners," since the student victims were instructed to simulate extreme pain.

Eichmann

While many perspired, trembled, stuttered and groaned, none of the 40 examiners stopped short of administering 300 volts to his victim — and only 14 refused to go all the way up to 450 volts even though, at that level, the victims were supposed to be suffering extreme shock.

Had he anticipated Indochina at the time of this experiment, Milgram might have pondered on the degree to which a group of average Americans willing to torture their fellow citizens would go if instructed to punish "gooks." My Lai has, of course, since provided him with an answer.

Looking back at his study against the perspective of the U.S. experience in Indochina, Milgram submits that Americans are now beginning to realize the hollowness of their claim to ethical purity.

"If we now recoil at our own conduct," he says, "it is because we perceive that we are just as capable as the Nazis of committing crimes in the name of obedience."

Comparing Calley to Eichmann, Milgram explains that neither was a ruthless man but "functionaries" performing their duty rather than displaying personal hostility towards the innocent people they killed. Moreover, each employed euphemisms to justify his actions as constructive.

Eichmann, in Nazi rhetoric, was engaged in eliminating Jewish "vermin" in order to achieve the final solution. In GI jargon, Calley was destroying "gooks" in order to "waste the enemy" as part of a "search-and-clear" operation.

In addition, Milgram points out, both denied at their respective trails that they were responsible. Each insisted that he had been acting under orders. In short, they asserted, they were merely cogs in a larger machine.

To be sure, there are parallels between Calley and Eichmann that do not meet. The American officer and his men were operating in the heat of a battlefield, while the Nazi was working within the context of a coldly scientific system dedicated to the extermination of a selected segment of the human race.

But if Calley's resemblance to Eichmann has its limitations, there is nevertheless a similarity between the mechanical impersonality of the gas chamber and the dispassionate technology of the B-52 silently dropping its bombs from 30,000 feet on so-called "free-fire" zones.

And there is also a similarity between the B-52 bombardiers pushing buttons on their control panels and the "grunts," like Calley, squeezing the triggers of their machine guns at My Lai and other villages. They are all simply obeying orders.

"When you think of the long and gloomy history of man," wrote C. P. Snow, "you will find more hideous crimes have been committed in the name of obedience than have ever been committed in the name of rebellion."

In the long and gloomy history of the U.S. involvement in Indochina, it might be added, the responsibility for crimes committed "in the name of obedience" must certainly go higher than Calley.

Russia Gets Involved In African Civil War

By DAVID ROBISON

For the first time in Soviet history Russians are fighting and bombing Africans.

In the past six months, according to U.S. intelligence sources, 100 to 200 Soviet army advisers have been directly planning and participating in the counter-guerrilla operations of the Arab-led Sudan army against the Africans of Southern Sudan.

A larger group of Russians, 300 or more, have piloted and serviced Soviet-built helicopters and bombers supporting combat operations in the south, according to American intelligence specialists.

'Advisers,' Pilots

Up to 1,000 Soviet military men in all are estimated to be supporting the Sudan army — counting advisers, pilots, ground-crew and missile technicians — several hundred of whom are believed to move into the south regularly.

In the north, at Port Sudan on the Red Sea, the Russians are building a naval base and installing SAM-2 anti-aircraft missiles to defend the area. The missiles were presumably detected by U.S. electronic surveillance, since air force sources in Washington state that their presence at Port Sudan is a certainty.

The Soviet motive is believed in Washington to be two-fold: first, to establish a strongly defended base from which Soviet naval power can be projected into the Red Sea and the Persian Gulf, and second, to bottle up the Israelis in the Red Sea area. The Soviets are thought to want to influence Africa, continue to dominate the Arab world and leapfrog beyond the Mediterranean and the NATO system. But first the Russians must secure their base in Sudan, according to this analysis, by helping the Sudan army to crush the southern guerrillas.

The Soviets are the principal backers of the army regime of Gen. Gasfar L. Numeiry that seized power in May, 1969, declaring that it would bring "Arab socialism" to Sudan. The government has expanded the fighting against the Anya-Nya guerrillas, who are the military wing of the African movement in the south. United Nations estimates place the number of civilian casualties of this nine-year-old war at more than 500,000.

Want Autonomy

The southerners have demanded full regional autonomy, meaning control by southerners of the army, police, civil service, schools and economy in the south, as well as freedom to practice Christianity and speak English, as opposed to the north's Islamic religion and insistence on the use of Arabic throughout Sudan.

The south's six million Africans are also hoping to develop an underground black-power coalition with the three-million non-Arab blacks in northern Sudan. This grouping is actually in numerical majority (nine million of Sudan's 15 million population) but has little power. Sudan's institutions are dominated by the six million northern Arabs.

The Sudan's Red Army advisers are based at Juba, the largest southern town. Juba had an airfield long enough to handle Soviet MiG jet aircraft.

'Copter Gunships

From the airport Russian officers have accompanied Sudan army units into combat in the last five months. These units have been transported in Russian MI-8 helicopter gunships with rockets, flown by Russian pilots.

When western journalists have been taken aboard for guided tours of Sudan army posts, the crews have been composed of Sudanese, Russians and Egyptians. Nevertheless, Washington specialists are convinced that in combat the helicopters are flown only by Russians because the Sudanese have no experienced helicopter pilots.

U.S. defence analysts believe that the Soviets will not extract themselves easily from this war. They assert that the southern Sudan is too large to be controlled effectively by the 35,000-man army.

The Anya-Nya guerrillas, numbering around 8,000 armed soldiers, have received Israeli airdrops of rifles, light machine-guns and bazookas in the past year, brought twice a month by an aircraft flying from a neighboring east African country. Though poorly trained, the guerrillas are believed capable of fighting for years, tying down both the Sudan army and its Soviet advisers. Consequently, the war is increasingly seen as an extension of the Middle East conflict.

NUMEIRY

Vietnam Parallel

Though the scale of Soviet activity in Sudan is relatively small compared with the present U.S. role in Indochina, it is being compared in Washington with the beginnings of the U.S. intervention in support of South Vietnam in 1960-61.

In Sudan the Soviets have already provided their own advisers, helicopters, pilots and bombers. Khartoum is as unstable as Saigon used to be, with nine coup attempts reportedly made by Gen. Numeiry's opponents since he assumed power.

The Charity That Begins at Home

The Globe and Mail

Over the next year and a half about $16-million is going to be paid to roughly 600 Canadian suppliers by MLW-Worthington Ltd. of Montreal. Another $14-million will be used to keep the company's work force of about 1,000 busy at its Montreal locomotive works. And about $4-million will be channelled out of the country to buy material and equipment that Canadian suppliers can't produce.

In the process company officials estimate that 1.4 million man-hours of work will be generated in Canada.

This is the other side of a foreign aid venture undertaken by the Canadian International Development Agency in Africa. It's a classic example of serving a distinct need in Africa and at the same time pursuing Canadian self-interest.

The venture involves the sale by MLW-Worthington of 54 diesel locomotives to Nigeria and 35 to the East African Community of Tanzania, Uganda and Kenya. They are being bought with CIDA money: interest-free loans repayable over 50 years.

Both Nigeria and East Africa called for tenders of the sale of the locomotives and in each case MLW-Worthington ended up low bidder in a competition that included prominent firms in England, Germany and France. So there can be no nagging worries that the federal government is indirectly trying to shore up a lagging or uneconomic industry.

At the same time it should be realized that MLW-Worthington probably would not have got the contract had CIDA not been prepared to provide attractive loan arrangements. The financial terms are extremely important to capital-short and underdeveloped nations. In their view loan arrangements offered by host countries are an essential element to be considered in assessing any bid.

The result of the locomotive deals is that the African states are getting machinery necessary for their economic growth on terms that will not create a drag on their economies. MLW-Worthington is getting a market price for its locomotives and the Canadian government is injecting about $30 million into the Canadian economy to provide employment and a wide range of sales by suppliers while at the same time being assured that its original outlay will be recovered. Then there are the added benefits to Canada of developing trade links which may expand in the future and creating a market for locomotive replacement parts.

So we're puzzled when people like Eddie Sargent, Liberal member of the Ontario Legislature for Grey-Bruce, moan that they have had a bellyful of cabinet ministers spending money on foreign aid while unemployment rages at home. Can't they see that employment is being provided at home?

Perhaps Mr. Sargent's problem lies in not understanding the locomotive business, so let's take shipbuilding. Collingwood, about 40 miles from Mr. Sargent's home in Owen Sound, has a shipyard. Suppose Trinidad wanted a freighter built and the Collingwood shipyard was low bidder but wouldn't get the contract without CIDA financing. Would Mr. Sargent oppose the loan?

Fortifying the Faith

By ART STOTT

The very small grandchildren are too young to grasp the concept of the Easter Bunny. The older ones are moving into the age of skepticism in which the desire to acquire goodies is confronted by burgeoning forces of reason. It's quite a conflict. They know that once they deny the faith, they lose the benefits. This adds a note of current crisis to the spring festival we have fostered, with few interruptions, at Cigarmakers' Bay for 30 odd years.

* * *

We plan to go to the lake again for Good Friday and spend the weekend there with at least three of the grandchildren, two of them in the age of doubt. And we will proceed with the ritual that has been appealing for the last three decades. To us who are older, the pagan ceremonies are a delight because they are devoted solely to the enjoyment of the little people who, for a few years at least, share a fair fancy.

Our procedures are simple. The afternoon before Easter, we bundle the youngsters up in their warm clothes and rubber boots. Then we set off along the wood's trails, gathering druid's beard hanging from the limbs of old trees. It's a quest merry with young laughter as the children tumble in the underbrush, reach for and cannot quite catch the festooned lichen hanging grey-green in the branches above them, and shout with glee when they finally bring down a big skein.

Some seasons, when Easter is late and spring is early, the route takes us through trails bordered by the three-pointed stars of trilliums, creamy above their broad green leaves, and by yellow wood violets clustered at the foot of big firs. We find the bush in beginning leaf, as the poet said, "in a mist of green with nothing perfect," and occasionally we are among birds, calling soft-voiced in the tune-up to spring-song.

* * *

The spongy path, carpeted with last year's leaves and fir needles, is soft underfoot. The small sounds of water gurgle on the way to low ground joining streamlets that run into the lake.

There is a remote chance only of wildflowers sprinkled through the woods at Shawnigan this Easter and no assurance of many birds. Two snowfalls last week and continued cold and drenching rain have turned the ground soggy, kept the lake high and retarded growth. Little short of a miracle can bring the conventional decorations to the Easter scene there.

* * *

Yet we will make our pilgrimage. We will gather our druid's beard, and we expect the voices of the young to compensate for any absence of birdsong.

Back in the cabin, when our harvest has been completed, we will spread out the soup bowls to line with the lichen, making nests that, year after year, are mysteriously filled overnight with colored candy eggs, chocolate chicks and baby rabbits. Easter morning will dawn again with its pagan miracle. The children will enjoy their candies and find a double reason for faith — first because the eggs are tasty, second because it pleases the old folks.

If the weather is fair enough, there may even be a special egg hunt, though that is an event inappropriate in heavy rain.

So we make our plans, conscious of the tenuousness of belief which gives them justification. But the weekend, come good weather or bad, will have its compensations in any event.

There is satisfaction merely in the simple accomplishments of keeping warm by an open fire, finding new relish in wholesome food prepared for appetites made ravenous by the cool, clean air and outdoor exercise. And, premature or not, it will be an occasion to open the camp formally, readying it for brighter days to come. Perhaps there will be an opportunity to wet a line and help two boys to learn a little more about fishing.

* * *

In the early night, when the children have found the comfort of their sleeping-bags, there will be a quiet time for their elders to sit around the fire, listening to the crackle of wood and watching the lancing flames until the fuel falls into its mound of glowing coals.

In them we will see the pictures of Easters past, of other children who have known carefree happiness in the small festivities. It seems worthwhile to preserve the ritual — as long as the little ones will permit it.

Federated Wants to End Agreement With Javelin

VANCOUVER (CP) — Federated Mining Corporation of Vancouver has taken steps to cancel a $7.5 million option agreement giving Canadian Javelin Ltd., and its subsidiary Bison Petroleums and Minerals Ltd., the right to acquire all federated assets through a share exchange.

Federated president James Farrell said that a letter was sent to Javelin's Ottawa office informing them of the decision.

Farrell said Federated directors decided at a meeting here that Canadian Javelin be given notice that a memorandum for an option agreement "dated Oct. 3, 1970, be declared void because of a total failure of consideration."

He said that under the agreement Canadian Javelin was required to provide $300,000 and supply Federated with development and technical staff to bring Federated's Camsell River property into a profitable operation position. The silver property is situated some 250 miles northwest of Yellowknife in the North West Territories.

Farrell said Canadian Javelin had failed to live up to these terms and Federated directors reached their decision on the basis of legal advice "from several lawyers."

Federated announced last month that it was obtaining $250,000 from three of its officers. Farrell, David N. Brown and John C. Brown said they agreed to put up the money by purchasing company debentures bearing interest at 9% per cent and payable Nov. 30, 1975.

PEMCAN

A preliminary assessment of bringing natural gas out of the Arctic by pipeline will be done by Pipeline Engineering and Management Services of Canada, a consortium of major Canadian engineering firms, on behalf of Gas Arctic Systems Study Group.

The consortium will look at pipeline routes from King Christian Island to the Gas Arctic Prudhoe Bay line, and from King Christian to existing systems via Boothia Peninsula skirting Hudson Bay.

Newfoundland Tel.

A $7.5 million issue of 8% per cent first mortgage sinking fund bonds by Newfoundland Telephone Co. Ltd. is being offered by a group led by Pitfield, Mackay, Ross and Co. Ltd. and Nesbitt Thomson Securities Ltd. The issue will mature in 1992.

Proceeds will be used for modernization and expansion of plant after retirement of bank loans incurred in the company's previous expansion.

Calgary Power

Calgary Power Ltd. will ask for a rate increase next year.

The increase would be the first in the company's 60 years, said president A. M. Howard.

It is necessary to maintain financial stability and allow the company to attract large amounts of investment capital needed for expansion.

The company, provides more than two-thirds of Alberta's electricity and has compensated for higher costs in the past by internal economies and volume growth.

Net income last year rose $1.1 million to $11.7 million or $1.12 a share after a dividend of 85 cents. Gross revenue was up 11.3 per cent to $56.8 million.

Cominco

Cominco Ltd. reports a slight increase in 1970 sales and total revenue but a sharp drop in net earnings.

Consolidated sales it an all-time high of more than $264 million, up about 6 per cent over 1969. Total revenue of almost $270 million was up about 5 per cent.

Net earnings were off approximately 20 per cent, at $24.3 million, or $1.45 a share, down from $1.81 in 1969.

B.C. Coal

Coal production in B.C. last month reached 344,775 tons, or more than four times the quantity mined in February, 1970, which was 84,521 tons. All came from the Michel collieries of Kaiser Resources.

Coke production, also from Michel, amounted to 15,462 tons, up from 14,990 tons.

Pine Point

Pine Point Mines Ltd. had net earnings of $20.78 million in 1970, the company reports.

Net earnings in 1969 were $18.46 million.

Per-share earnings climbed to $4.60 in 1970 from $4.09 in 1969 and sales rose to $47 million from $43 million.

Cominco Ltd. owns a majority interest in Pine Point Mines and manages the Northwest Territories lead-zinc operation.

Grenmac

More geophysical exploration is required for its Hunt group of claims in Kamloops mining district, reports Grenmac Silver Mines Ltd., of Calgary.

The company has finished the first phase of a program carried out by ELC Geophysics Ltd.

It also is negotiating with owners of adjoining oil leases to its Innisfail, Alta., prospect to acquire interests in drilling a test well.

Further corporate developments include negotiations to buy Pigeon Mountain Recreations Ltd., a change of name to Buckeye Explorations Ltd. and acquisition of 10 per cent interest in an option to buy Washington coal lands.

W. German Bank Drops Prime Rate

FRANKFURT, Germany (UPI) — The West German central bank today lowered its prime bank rate from 6 per cent to 5 per cent.

A bank spokesman said the central bank council also lowered the Lombard rate from 7.5 per cent to 6.5 per cent.

The Lombard rate is the rate commercial banks use in borrowing from the central bank with securities as collateral.

The measures had been expected in recent months but until his announcement following the bank council's regularly fortnightly meeting, bank president Karl Klasen had resisted the move.

He argued that it was too early to ease the monetary restrictions imposed on the economy until it was clear that they had fulfilled their purpose of reducing West Germany's economic boom to manageable proportions.

A-G Won't Run

REGINA (CP) — Attorney-General D. V. Heald announced in the legislature Tuesday he will not seek re-election.

The member for Lumsden since 1964 when the Liberals swept into power to end 20 years of CCF rule, gave no reason for his decision.

"This is a very difficult decision for me because the past seven years in the legislature and as a minister of the crown have been most rewarding, challenging and fulfilling of my life," he said.

WELDWOOD LOSS

VANCOUVER (CP)—Weldwood of Canada Ltd. reports a net loss of $1,399,000 or 46 cents a common share for 1970, compared to net earnings of $6,026,000 or $1.98 a share the previous year.

Net sales in 1970 were $119,748,000, compared with $137,078,000 in 1969.

In its annual report to shareholders, the company attributed the loss to "severely depressed conditions" in its main marketing areas caused by tight money and the resulting drop in construction.

Irish Republic Ties With North Within 10 Years

By ANDREW TORCHIA

DUBLIN (AP) — Premier Jack Lynch of the Irish Republic says he believes reunification of his country with Northern Ireland is "longer than five or 10 years" away. But in the interim he would accept federation for a limited period as a step toward unity.

The pipe-smoking premier gave his views in a private interview in his office in Leinster House, home of the Irish Parliament.

Lynch said he would welcome direct contacts with Brian Faulkner, the new prime minister of Northern Ireland, and that he thought Faulkner "would likewise like to maintain contact with me," on mutual problems.

Lynch said Faulkner appears to be "on the right track" with regard to the civil rights demands of the Roman Catholic minority in the North even though he is committed to keeping the Protestant-dominated country under British rule.

Here are some questions and answers during the interview:

Q. Would you agree to some other arrangement, like federation, as the solution for Ireland?

A. I do not think federation is generally acceptable as a final solution. Federation would be acceptable for a limited period, leading ultimately to complete unification. As an intermediary step, there could be a council for Ireland, with representation from both sides, to deal with mutual problems and make recommendations in certain limited areas for the respective governments to implement.

Q. How do you size up the new Northern Ireland government?

A. Faulkner is a realistic man. He wants to retain links with Britain but he is committed to achieving full equality of the treatment of all people in Northern Ireland.

Q. Would you seek greater co-operation with Northern Ireland where possible?

A. We already have co-operation in promoting tourism, electricity generation and fishing administration. I would be prepared to extend it. One instance could be industrial promotion and another could be tariffs.

Q. How would you look on direct rule of Northern Ireland from London, a step opposed by the Unionist party ruling the North?

A. If I thought direct rule opened the way more expeditiously for the reunification of Ireland, naturally I would welcome it.

Q. The Irish Republican Army is outlawed in the republic, yet its members continue to speak out. How much popular following and influence does the IRA have?

A. To the extent that we can prevent illegal activities, we take all steps open to us. The IRA following is very, very limited, with a membership of only a fraction of one per cent of the population. Often the great bulk of their membership is made up of young people who don't continue as members. They can only retard the movement toward peace reconciliation.

Q. What do you see as Ireland's future role in the world?

A. A lot of emerging nations look to Ireland as an example of a country under domination for centuries now being able to manage its own affairs. The more we progress, the more the emerging nations see that they can do it, too.

Autistic Society Seeking Volunteers

The Society for Autistic Children, set up last year to care for children with the rare psychiatric illness, is looking for volunteers for the special classes being held at the Queen Alexandra Solarium.

Four months ago the class began with three children, it has slowly increased to six and it is hoped to phase 10 of some 15 autistic children in the area into the program eventually.

It takes two volunteers for each child. The children are usually exceedingly withdrawn but with above average intelligence.

A society spokesman said Tuesday that volunteers are needed to replace university students who either have to discontinue the work because of exams or who will be returning to their homes.

The spokesman said there had been a great improvement in the children since the class was started, and to make sure they didn't slip backwards, the class might be continued through the summer.

Volunteers should phone 385-1282.

Top Speaker Ottawa Bound

An all-expense-paid trip to Ottawa is in store for Joan Lord of Cypress Road, North Saanich, who won the Sidney Rotary Club public speaking contest this month.

While in Ottawa, Miss Lord, a Claremont Senior Secondary school student, will be guest of Ottawa Rotary Club and, with more than 250 students, will tour the capital city. The program is part of Rotary's "Adventure in Citizenship" and each participant will write an essay after their Ottawa visit. Winner of the essay competition wins a $600 educational scholarship.

Others who competed for the Sidney Rotary sponsorship were Vicki Foerster, Colleen Jacobson, David Lawrence and Elsie Stockman. Adjudicators were Dick Batey, Elsie MacAulay and J. J. Armstrong.

Travel Club To Be Formed

Victoria's George Willis, a veteran of 32 years in the travel business is organizing Canada's first 747 Club.

Willis proposed to provide tours, cruise, travel and hotel information in conjunction with group rate fares of major air lines companies.

The non-profit club will hold monthly meetings featuring lectures and travel films. The first meeting is planned for Friday at 8 p.m. at 850 Fleming Street for the nomination of officers.

Arramgements for a seminar in Harrison Hot Springs will be made at the meeting.

Scouts, Guides to Receive Awards

Seven Girl Guides will receive gold cords and four Venturer Scouts will get Queen's Venturer awards at a ceremony at Government House Wednesday, April 4, at 2.15 p.m.

Lieutenant-Governor John R. Nicholson will present the awards.

The ceremony will be attended by 95 Girl Guides and 13 Venturer Scouts.

This will be the first year that Queen's Venturers will be participating in the ceremony as the Queen's Scout award has been discontinued in the new Scout program but placed in the Venturer program as a challenge to older boys.

Gold Cords will be presented to: Bonita Jane Cronk, 4864 Townsend Drive, Patricia Mary Kelly, 4190 Blenkinsop Road, Clare Kennedy, 4961 Lochside Drive, Alison C. Nicholson, 1529 Monterey Ave., Margaret Jean Oliver, 2550 Cavendish Ave., Jill Singleton, 1931 Bowker Place, Catherine Williams, 2574 Cavendish Ave.

Queen's Venturer awards: Patrick Shea, 431 Beckwith St., George Markides, 3985 Cedar Hill Cross Road, Christopher Kissinger, 3941 Cumberland Road, Kenneth Smith, 4454 Narvaez Crescent.

The Venturers and Guides will attend a luncheon at the Empress given by the B.C. government. It will be held on the same day, starting at 11:15 a.m.

Before the Judge

Richard W. Ballard, 24, of 1150 Summit, was fined a total of $575 by Ostler when he pleaded guilty to impaired driving, refusing to give a sample of his breath when asked to do so by a police officer and driving without a licence.

Court was told that the accused was driving a car about 9:20 p.m. Monday on Johnson near Broad which hit a parked car.

Ostler banned Ballard from driving for six months.

* * *

John B. Baird, 42, of 248 Michigan, was fined $250 and prohibited from driving for two months in traffic court by Judge E. F. N. Robinson for driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 per cent.

Leonard Jack Kelley, 30, of 519 Foster, was fined $350 and prohibited from driving for three months by Robinson for impaired driving.

* * *

A 32-year-old serviceman appeared in Victoria provincial court Tuesday charged with the attempted rape of a 15-year-old girl Monday.

Judge William Ostler remanded Robert McIssac, 219 Meade, to April 6 for preliminary hearing. The judge set bail at $3,500.

The accused was undefended in today's appearance.

McIsaac told Ostler that he had been in the armed forces for 15 years and had been in Victoria the last five years.

Prosecutor J. W. Anderson said the man, who appeared in uniform, certainly had roots in the community but the seriousness of the offense should be considered in setting bail.

* * *

Eugene Tom, 21, of 1002½ Balmoral, was given a suspended sentence and placed on a one-year probation for breaking, entering and theft.

The charge involved Arrow Furniture, 1321 Government, and McDonald's Furniture Mart, 1420 Broad, from which two radios, worth $164, were stolen March 1.

Earlier the accused's brother pleaded guilty to a two-count charge of mischief and breaking and entering and theft.

He was given a suspended sentence and placed on 18 months' probation.

Later, Eugene admitted he had a part in the offence.

He said he had taken the radios after his brother had kicked in the door window. He gave the articles to his brother and ran away.

DESIGNED FOR B.C. coastal waters by Victoria Naval Architect William Garden this 40-foot motor cruiser made her debut in Sidney this week. Built with a high speed trawler-type hull and powered by twin turbo-charged diesels, the trim cedar craft has a top speed of 20 knots. An extra touch of luxury is a built-in hot water furnace and fireplace with diesel range as an option. (Dane Campbell Photo.)

TRIBUTE PAID TO FORCES

OTTAWA (CP) — The armed forces have clearly demonstrated their usefulness in containing incidents of domestic violence which may recur in future, says Prime Minister Trudeau.

In a letter to Gen. F. R. Sharp, chief of the defence staff, Mr. Trudeau says:

"I think we all have to realize that bombings, kidnappings and other acts of violence are possibilities we may have to face again in the future.

"The armed forces have clearly demonstrated . . . the invaluable contribution they have to make towards the containment and eventual solution of this difficult problem."

The letter, dated Dec. 22, 1970, and published in the February-March issue of Sentinel, a magazine of the armed services, pays high tribute to the work of the armed forces as aids to civilian authorities during the Quebec kidnapping crisis last fall.

"The skill and good sense with which the many operations in support of the police in Quebec and Ottawa were handled is a clear reflection of the training and morale of your men. You must be as proud of them as I am."

Bishop Martin Services Held

Funeral services were held in Christ Church Cathedral today for Anglican Bishop Henry David Martin,' 2715 Beach, who died Saturday at the age of 81.

On Thursday a memorial service will be held in his old church of St. George's in Winnipeg with interment following in that city's St. John's cemetery.

Martin became known all across western Canada through his radio programs, Eventide, which he broadcast from Winnipeg in the 1920s for eight years.

Close friends believe it was the popularity he gained through his 30-minute programs that helped him become the seventh Bishop of Saskatchewan August 22, 1939.

RETIRED IN 1959

When he retired in 1959 it was the ending of 44 years in the ministry.

Born in Marylebone, London, Eng., Martin came to Canada in 1911 to study for the ministry at Wycliffe College in Toronto. An outstanding athlete, he became the college's boxing champion.

Ordained in 1915, he served curacies in St. Luke's, Saint John, N.B., and at St. James Cathedral in Toronto.

His appointment in 1917 as priest in charge of Holy Trinity, Winnipeg, was the beginning of 42 years of ministry in the prairies. He was rector of St. George's from 1918 to 1939.

CHAPLAIN

During that time he also served as chaplain of the 5th Artillery Brigade for 13 years and he became an RCAF chaplain in the Second World War. He was appointed to a honorary canonry of St. John's Cathedral in Winnipeg in 1932.

An enthusiastic advocate of the ecumenical movement, Martin was present in Amsterdam when the World Council of Churches was formed. He also attended the second session of the WCC at Evanston, Ill.

As chairman of the General Synod Committee on Ecumenical Affairs, he represented the Anglican Church of Canada on the Central Committee of the WCC.

He is survived by his wife, Kathleen, 2715 Beach, their two daughters, Mrs. E. H. Williams of Vancouver and Mrs. J. H. C. Harradence of Prince Albert, Sask.; six grandchildren, and in England, by two brother C. C. Martin and Edward Martin, as well as a sister, Mrs. Charles Parker.

Many friends from the prairies were among those who attended his funeral service, held in Christ Church Cathedral today.

Sisters Die

CATANIA, Sicily (Reuter) — Two young sisters, aged six and nine, died after accidentally washing their hair with weed killer. The bottle they used was labelled soap powder. Three of the girls' brothers were reported critically ill.

Arts Centre Plays Taken to Schools

By KATHY DENMAN

OTTAWA (CP) — The National Arts Centre's youth program began with the idea of stimulating attendance by young people at theatrical, music and dance performances.

But Jean-Yves Hardy, youth program co-ordinator, decided that wasn't enough.

"The more we get involved, the better," he says.

The original system of reduced prices for Ottawa-area youngsters has been enhanced by taking the arts to the schools.

Students can stay in the audience or have a chance to be part of a cast or production team..

This year, 18 different professional companies are scheduled or have appeared for in-school performances. They include Les Grands Ballets Canadiens, Opera Ottawa, Theatre des Lutins, the Canadian Mime Theatre and quartettes of different sections of the centre orchestra.

MEET THE PERFORMERS

The performances, co-sponsored by the Ottawa school boards, last about 50 minutes and are geared to the different grade levels. They are given in either French or English.

After the performance, students may ask questions and meet the performers. In the music programs, individual orchestra members demonstrate and explain the different instruments.

Last November, a Student Young Company was organized to help budding young actors and production teams. Drama students are recommended by teachers from each school and then auditioned by the company's director, Ron Singer, and an advisory committee. The number is cut to about 25—16 actors and nine for the production team.

Students chosen for the company rehearse at the arts centre. Production teams work with professional lighting and stage men. They then tour Ottawa schools with the production.

MISS SOME CLASSES

They miss three weeks of classes but Mr. Hardy believes they make up for this by gaining invaluable experience which they can pass on.

One student has come for rehearsals from Pembroke, 80 miles northwest of Ottawa. That meant a lot of commuting for the boy, but the school evidently felt it was worth it.

The company went on to its second group of students who put on their first performance in early spring. Even the press releases are student-written.

The cast and crew of the French-language counterpart of the Student Young Company are rehearsing for a production in April.

Mr. Hardy said the defence department has asked whether one of the groups could do a tour of Canadian Armed Forces bases in Europe, but no decision has been made yet.

Ron Singer will also be directing Ontario Youtheatre this summer which will be using the mobile theatre or "portage" at the centre. Students from all over the province will get a chance to audition.

GET PACKAGE DEAL

The youth program offers students a package deal of five preview concerts by the centre orchestra for $5. The concerts are solely for students and people over 65 and consist of the same program that adults pay up to $6 each for on other nights.

He said the average attendance for these preview concerts is about 1,000 but he expects that number to double next year when the program gets in full swing.

Russia Defused Mid-East

LONDON (WP) — Russia has sent 200 of its pilots and 150 MiG-21J fighter-interceptors to the United Arab Republic and supplied it with $2.5 billion in military aid in 1970, according to the authoritative Institute for Strategic Studies annual survey.

The document published here points out that the sheer volume of military support is without precedent and that "never before had the Soviet Union injected anything like the quanitity of sophisticated military equipment into a non-communist country in such a short time."

"Also, with the exception of the 1962 Cuba missile crisis, the U.S.S.R. has never deployed such large numbers of its own military personnel outside the Warsaw Treaty countries. They total 12,000 to 15,000 in SA-3 missile crews and 4,000 "advisers."

LESSEN CONFLICT

Nevertheless, the annual survey suggests, in a sophisticated argument, that the intent of this intervention, or at least the effect, was to lessen rather than increase the likelihood of conflict.

It induced greater caution by Israel at a time when it was bombing Egyptian targets at will, as close as five miles to Cairo — and, by implication, greater caution on the United States.

"It also removed from the U.A.R. the sahdow of effective surrender and replaced it with a feeling of new strength. The Egyptians found themselves able at last to afford flexibility in their reaction to proposals for peace, while the Israelis, as their military options diminished and the risks attached to them increased, found themselves urged by prudence in the same direction . . .

DETERRENT

"More substantial and more direct Soviet involvement thus seemed to combine the purposes of defence and deterrence, even if at the cost of increasing the risk of Soviet embroilment if the cease-fire should end and deterrence fail."

A corallary, though is that the intervention left the U.A.R. with "if anything, even less independent ability" to defend itself against Israeli air attacks than it had 12 months earlier. Now, there is a significant potential power of the Soviets to deter or restrain Egypt from military action across the Suez Canal — which depends for success on air cover — by threatening to withhold or withdraw its air forces.

FREEDOM MORTGAGED

"In some sense, therefore, the U.A.R. had mortgaged its freedom of military — and even political — action to its Soviet ally in return for protection against the Israel air force. Conversely, the Soviet Union, whether or not its ability to deter Israel would stand the test of time, seemed during 1970 to have established a very real ability to constrain, if it wished, the military policy of the U.A.R."

In all, according to the institute's cataloguing, the U.S.S.R. has put $4.5 billion in military aid into Egypt since the six-day war of 1967.

Besides the MiG-21J interceptors with greater speed, longer range and better armament than the MiG-21C or D, it has supplied ZSU-23-4 four-barrelled 23mm anti-aircraft guns, previously furnished only to Warsaw Pact allies; "improved" SA-2 missiles; and some 75 to 85 SA-3 surface-to-air missiles (presumably all manned by Russian crews) with far better lower altitude capabilities.

Also, there have been reports of sightings of the SA-4 "Ganef" missiles before the end of 1970. In all, there are some 500 to 600 surface-to-air missile launchers covering the western approaches to the canal, 200 of them within 19 miles.

SIX AIRFIELDS

The survey said the Soviets had established six airfields between the Nile and the Canal controlled exclusively by their troops, since last March.

If in fact the Soviet supply constituted an "out-flanking" of the United States, the report argues, "there was little to suppose that this was the motive."

Instead, Russia was faced with the possibility of losing control of a "client" which would have been on the point of desperation had the Israeli air attacks continued.

Instead, its policy seemed to have had "a more powerfully restraining influence upon both Israel and the U.A.R than any other party was able to exert."

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, MARCH 31, 1971 —PAGE 15

NATHAN'S STORY

For Hate or Love —Do It Your Way

By Jack Scott

It's been gratifying this week to read the many tributes to Nathan Cohen, the Toronto Daily Star's outstanding drama critic, who died last Friday at 47. No one would have been more surprised at the depth and sincerity of their feeling than Nathan, himself.

Few people outside the newspaper business would know it, but Nathan paid a high price for integrity. He had decided very early in his career as a critic that he would do it his way. If a production or a performer did not meet his standards he could be merciless. It was a philosophy we argued about many times when I worked in an adjoining office.

Then, and now, I favored a double standard of criticism. Local or amateur theatre, as I saw it, should be given every possible encouragement, however awful their offering. Only big-city professional productions should be exposed to the full critical treatment. Nathan could never agree. Excellence was the goal. Therefore there could be no equivocation.

The inevitable result was that a great many people, in every branch of entertainment that he touched, had him enshrined as Number One on their hate list. Nathan was not only aware of this, but far more sensitive to it than he would admit. Once, in the last month that I worked with him, a time when he was managing his prodigious output with the full knowledge that he was a very sick man, he joked, "Really, I'd hate to be the guy who has to do my obit. He'll have to look under rocks to find anyone with a kind word."

Scott

That, of course, has not been the case. Many of these tributes are from men and women who had every reason to think of him as "Nasty Nate." They demonstrate, perhaps, that however acerbic a critic may be he will be respected if he is consistently honest. There was never any question of that with Nathan.

But I wonder, too, if he could have anticipated this and I find myself thinking of one of his favorite show business stories, a story he told to illustrate the diminishing returns of affection that may come from uncompromising dedication.

The story concerned the long-time head of one of the major Hollywood studios, a man of genuine brilliance, but ruthless in his pursuit of plaudits and profits. With just a scribble of his pen he made and broke some of the great stars of his day. He drove his producers, directors and casts without mercy. He was a man totally devoid of loyalty, compassion or kindliness in his single-minded goal of turning out box-office hits.

When the great man died, said Nathan, the studio public relations department was given the task of preparing an obituary for the press. One after the other, every producer, every director, every actor adamantly refused to say a charitable word about the man. He had been a monster in life, let him remain a monster in death.

In desperation the public relations men went to the studio barber. For every working day through two decades the same barber had shaved the studio boss. It was widely believed that he, alone, knew the real man beneath the impenetrable facade. Surely he would have some final eulogy to fill this void of affection.

The barber pondered long and deeply when the question was put to him, as Nathan told the story. Finally his face brightened and he made his last judgment.

"Well," the barber said, "he was not hard man to shave."

Another Toronto celebrity who has made a career in abrasive controversy yet somehow built up a vast reservoir of affection is the redoubtable 71-year-old Gordon Sinclair, though he may never know it for a certainty until it is too late. I give him no more than 30 years.

Wherever he goes in Canada, a newspaperman who has worked in Toronto is always asked: "What is the real Gordon Sinclair like?" Victoria is no exception.

Someone once called him "The Prince of Phoneys" and that may explain why he is so cherished by those who know him. The world is full of hateful, mean-tempered men aspiring to be lovable. When you find a lovable man aspiring to be hateful you have something very special.

Gordon works hard to keep Canada's worst-kept secret that he's everybody's sweetheart. Someone sometime has put the notion in his head that if he ever dropped the mask and revealed himself as nothing but a wonderful little guy he'd be left without an act. But the truth is, we all know the secret.

I never ran into Gordon in Toronto without reflecting that there was a Sinclair in every man's childhood, a fat, flat-faced, jug-eared Alfred E. Neuman kid who was always thumbing his nose over the fence and pulling the girls' pigtails, the kid with the only football in the block, the only rotten kid in your life that you ever remembered in later years with something very close to love. There are kids who just can't get hated no matter how they try.

Almost anyone in newspapering, radio or television seems to have a personal story of some kindness or helpful gesture by the diminutive ogre.

★ ★ ★

My own memory involves the first morning I was to begin writing a daily column for the Star. I was as tense as a schooboy about to be issued with his lined scribblers, his 3-b pencils and eraser. The idea I was nourishing for my first piece had suddenly begun to seem as forlorn as a little lost lamb.

I had arranged to have a coffee that morning with Gordon and he instantly sensed my mood.

"There's no question about it," he reflected, his bow-tie trademark bobbing and weaving. "First things are always the hardest. You gotta remember, though, that they're often the most rewarding as well. I remember in '35, the year after Lou Marsh died, the Star put me on sports. I was the world's worst sports writer, bar none. They sent me down to New York to write a feature about the New York Americans. On the train coming back that night I just sat in front of my typewriter staring at all that blank paper. Hell, you've had that happen. Stared all the way to Buffalo and then the idea came to me. Filed my story in Welland, right on deadline. And d'ya know, it wasn't a bad story at all. So you see, there's really nothing to give you the yipes

"First things—boo, boy," the Prince of Phoneys went on. "They're the richest of the experiences we ever get. There's a line in Shelley I remember — 'the first sweet sleep of night.' That's what life is like. The openers are the sweetest. You just never recapture that first, fine, careless rapture. By God, Jack, I envy you starting out on this thing."

I know now that it was entirely for my benefit — sort of a gift, you might say — but it got me through that toughest of all days.

Some phoney. Some ogre.

Dale Kuster: was it short sight or long hair?

Kuster's Last Stand

Fired Fireman Pickets for 'Justice'

By PAT DUFOUR

A fired fireman took up his stand outside the Saanich firehall today and began picketing the department and the union to which he'd belonged for four years in a last-ditch stand to "get justice."

Dale Kuster, 25, was quiet-spoken when he stated his case — but determined.

Kuster was hired in January 1966 and fired June 30, 1970.

The reason for his dismissal, the department said, was that he wore glasses.

Kuster thinks otherwise.

"There are at least half a dozen men in the department who wear glasses, including the chief (Fire Chief Joe Sutherland)."

Kuster contends that it was because he started to wear his hair a little longer and grow a moustache.

•

Local 967 of the International Association of Firefighters at the outset were solidly behind Kuster.

As he talked to reporters today the ambulance he used to be assigned to dashed out in answer to an emergency call, the man he used to work with, Arthur Fryer, at the wheel.

Kuster said: "By rights I should be in the back of that ambulance. I really loved my job — helping people — I gave it everything I had."

Unemployed since June, Kuster has been forced to give up his part-time studies at the University of Victoria where he was majoring in political science and economics.

He's picketing the union because it's done a complete turnaround, he said.

"After voting to back me all the way, the president, Bill Holmes, told me in October that I was no longer eligible for assistance.

•

"He gave me no real reasons — it was a very ambiguous thing."

Sutherland said Kuster's allegation that it was dislike of his long hair and moustache that caused his firing is "just a red herring."

Kuster was dismissed because his eyes were not up to the standard required for firemen, he said.

"We told him when we took him on that his eyesight didn't meet the standards. We said that if he could tolerate wearing contact lenses while he was on duty this would be all right."

Sutherland said Kuster wore contact lenses up "until about the August before he was dismissed" and then returned to wearing normal glasses.

Asked why the union supported Kuster's claims at the time of dismissal, Sutherland said, "I imagine they went along with his red herring."

Waterfront Funds On Way—Haddock

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

Mayor Courtney Haddock said today the city will get from the province the urban renewal money needed to spring construction of the Reid waterfront development.

Haddock made the statement following a half-hour meeting in his office with Vancouver developer J. A. Reid.

Asked to confirm a report that Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell today asked the city to submit its urban renewal fund request within 24 hours, Haddock would only answer that "he wants to know what we're thinking."

DRAWINGS READY

But he added, "we are going to get it."

The money is needed to help the city buy the Ocean Cement Ltd. waterfront property to make way for Reid's $25 million commercial-residential complex.

Reid confirmed that he will present drawings of his revised complex April 8 to city council.

He later invited Ald. Peter Pollen to examine sketches of the new plan in the city's planning department offices.

The city is hoping that at least part of two Vancouver urban renewal projects will be turned down by the province, making money available for Victoria.

Campbell has stated he gave Vancouver until the end of April to complete its plans or else lose the initiative to Victoria. He has also said money may be available to Victoria over and above the amounts originally promised to Vancouver.

'Include Me in Lunatic Fringe'

David Anderson, MP for Esquimalt-Saanich, said today if Alberni MLA Howard McDiarmid wants to include him in the "lunatic fringe" it's fine with him.

He was commenting on statements by McDiarmid in the legislature Tuesday that people who want the Nitinat Triangle in the Long Beach National Park represent the "lunatic fringe of the environmentalist movement." (See Page 38.)

"If he wants to include me in the lunatic fringe, I have no objections," he said.

Anderson said McDiarmid's statements did not make sense.

He said McDiarmid is handling the controversial issue badly and isn't helping to settle the matter amicably.

"The matter of including in the park the three lakes in the Nitinat area should be discussed on a reasonable basis by both sides," he said. "The logging companies and the people both have good cases."

Parks are held in perpetuity and are a continual asset, he said.

ST. JOSEPH'S STILL IN DOUBT

Hospital Board Strives for Fall Building Vote

By DON VIPOND

The Capital region's hospital board may be ready to present ratepayers with a building program they can vote on this fall.

But it will depend on whether the board can pull together an orderly image of solid progress in hospital development, something it feels is vital before ratepayers are likely to approve a multi-million dollar spending program.

"We have to be able to present a sensible and reasonable plan to people," Jim Cumming, chairman of the regional hospital board, said Tuesday.

The fall, he said, is the earliest that may be possible.

Royal Jubilee Hospital and the new hospital to be located in Central Saanich are at work on plans to be covered in the referendum. Gorge Road Hospital and Lady Minto Hospital at Ganges may have plans ready, said Cumming.

•

But plans at St. Joseph's Hospital are the unknown quantity and if they aren't ready they may have to await another referendum.

Talk of a referendum underlines two developments in area planning of hospital expansion since the regional hospital board took on that task three years ago.

The first is that the lengthy differences between the regional board and St. Joseph's Hospital have done more than delay development at that hospital. They have been a factor in stalling the referendum, thus contributing to the delay in hospital growth throughout the region.

•

There has been a general conviction on the regional board that all the concusion and bickering has left a bad taste in the mouth of the public, making it unlikely any referendum could gather the 60 per cent majority needed to launch Greater Victoria on the next stage in hospital improvement.

Summarizing the differences between the regional board and St. Joseph's directors is like trying to explain the theory of relatively in 30 words or less. But a core issue is the question of control, more accurately degree of control, both of the present hospital and proposed additions.

Even intervention by Health Minister Ralph Loffmark hasn't been able to untangle the problems.

The second development bearing on the next referendum came last week when the regional board announced it was looking for another site for the 150 extended care beds which had been allotted St. Joseph's under a program to build 600 beds in the region for chronic care patients.

•

At the same time the board said it wants to consolidate on a new site the 75 beds earlier allotted to St. Mary's Priory.

That move, with apparent blessing of Loffmark, means the regional board may soon be in a position to say to ratepayers:

"The 600 beds we proposed for extended care patients are now on the way. There are 300 under construction at Gorge Road Hospital. There are 75 firmly planned for the new hospital in Central Saanich. And there will be 225 on the third site.

"So let's get on with building badly-needed additions for acute care patients."

Before the regional board can paint this picture, it has to find the third site and it is hard at this right now. After the difficulties trying to acquire land alongside St. Joseph's, it will likely seem easy.

Where does all this leave St. Joseph's Hospital?

The regional board has made it clear there's no thought of abandoning the hospital as a major acute care centre, scheduled for extensive expansion.

But as matters stand, it will have to expand on its present site, meaning it will physically rise rather than spread.

Arthur Mayse . . .

AT THE START OF THE month, a Victorian I know wrote a business letter, in English, to the Montreal-based branch of an American company.

He got a reply this week. When he showed it to me, he was angrier than I've ever seen him before. This surprised me, because he isn't a hothead. In a lengthy acquaintance, I've found him to be tolerant and open-minded.

The fact that the outfit had sent him a form letter which failed to answer his specific questions was merely annoying. What burned this English-speaking, British Columbia-domiciled Canadian was the language of the form.

It was written in French.

"If they'd used both languages, I wouldn't have minded," he said. "We aren't a bilingual country, and nothing they do in Quebec or at Ottawa is going to make us so. But if they want to pretend, I'll go along. Not with this, though. This sort of thing — this crazy attempt to force French on us as the working language of Canada, turns my stomach."

He then showed me a letter which, along with the French-language screed, has now sizzled its way through the mails to company headquarters in Washington, D.C.

It does more than convey his sense of outrage and insult. It states certain facts as opposed to the Quebec-Ottawa fiction. It also makes plain that any firm seeking to do business in all provinces had better not ignore those facts if it wants to keep his business.

The chief of them is that French-speaking Quebec is but one province of Canada, and that the vast majority of Candians elsewhere communicate, and expect to be communicated with in the language of their daily use.

The writer asks for a non-form reply, in English.

Did this normally mild citizen blow his cork without sufficient reason?

I don't think so. I'm inclined to regard that form letter in French as a last minor straw in a lading that began with Pearson's folly and continues, accelerated, through Trudeau's retreat.

We will survive recession or depression.

I hope we can hold together in spite of the arrogant claims of one province to nationhood, and all the attendant blackmail, waste, panic and assorted nonsense that have stemmed therefrom.

None of these manifestations are likely to make any thoughtful Canadian forget the fact of Quebec's need.

We ask only that other needs be also recognized — that British Columbia, a province not without its troubles — get her share of job-producing contracts dealt from the federal deck. Also that other provinces be similiarly recognized.

Prince Edward Island badly needs her causeway to the mainland. She should have had it long ago. Cheated of that vital link, her prospects grow steadily poorer.

The Maritimes at large and the prairie provinces could use heftier transfusions.

But if anything can break our union, it will be this Quebec-inspired, Ottawa-fostered insistence in the teeth of sense and reality that English-speaking Canadians submit to having the French language rammed down their throats.

We can handle political differences. They keep us heathier and livelier.

Religious differences pose no problem: Canadians take them in stride.

This matter of intrusion on language rights is something else again.

Ten years back, perhaps even five, my easy-going friend might have laughed off the form letter from Quebec.

The fact that he didn't reflects a state of mind and conveys a warning that Ottawa would do well to heed. The wise old saw sums it up pretty well — you can lead a horse to water, but you can't make him drink.

I hope we escape the national tragedy that continued failure to heed by those with power to remedy a dangerous situation may be preparing for us. But each incident involving language, a commodity of explosive potential, leaves me less optimistic that we will.

PLENTY OF DEFENSIVE HELP from Chilliwack clubmates helped goalie Dave Maynard thwart Victoria Cougars in B.C. Junior Hockey League playofff. Some of that assistance came on this play Tuesday at Memorial Arena while Bruins were on way to 4-3 victory that eliminated Cougars. With Maynard down after making save, Reg Carmichael in on spot to clear puck out of danger while Victoria's Ted Lowe (19) waits for possible rebound in his direction.

Cougars (Ghost and All) Buried Deep by Bruins

Players Issue Ultimatum Before Losing Semifinal

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Victoria Cougar players dug up an old ghost and it may be a decision that will haunt them for a long, long summer.

"Summer" arrived at precisely 10:18 p.m. Tuesday night, the moment the claxon sounded in Memorial Arena to herald a 4-3 Chilliwack Bruins' victory and the demise of the Cougars.

Unbelievably, the team that finished 59 points behind the Cougars eliminated the Coastal Division-winning Cougars in the first round of the British Columbia Junior Hockey League playoffs. In five games!

The red-faced Cougars stepped aside in favor of a squad that they manhandled 12 straight times during the regular season, and then made it 13 with a 6-4 victory in the series' opener.

The 0-13 record failed to dismay the Bruins. They put together a modest, four-game winning streak (5-0, 5-4, 4-1, 4-3), but it is enough to send them into the coast final against either Vancouver Centennials or New Westminster Royals.

The Bruins earned full marks, but the Cougar players made the bed in which they will lie all summer.

Victoria players revived an old feud 40 minutes before Tuesday's game. They asked for Ron Maxwell's reinstatement as coach. Maxwell was relieved of coaching duties Feb. 1 and replaced by Mike Shabaga.

They players met at Maxwell's house earlier Tuesday before putting their demand to an astounded Eric Bishop, the Cougars' general manager.

Bishop refused.

Players Demand Cubs Not Be Used

The players then went to their dressing room, about 40 minutes before game time, and informed Shabaga that they were vetoing the coach's decision to use any affiliated players recruited from the junior "B" Cubs.

Shabaga had intended to bench defenceman Dale Pennock and wingers Pat Askew and Scott Munro for ineffective play. Both Askew and Munro along with forward Lonnie Miles, had sat out Monday's 4-1 game in Chilliwack.

Team captain Gerry Bond and assistant captains Ted Plowe and Bob Mayer informed Shabaga the players unanimously voted against the use of any junior "B" players.

Shabaga had planned to dress the Cubs' Wayne Hendry, Jim Wilkinson and Ron Poole.

All three played strong games in Chilliwack on Monday night.

"The players asked to go with the guys that brought them this far," said Shabaga. "I had misgivings but they were determined, and I thought it might work.

"After they made their request, I could not play the junior Bs. The regulars might have crucified them during the game."

The regulars almost pulled off a continuation of the series. Even Shabaga and Bishop both were quick to admit the Cougars "gave it a whale of a try."

In the final analysis, the Cougar players are facing that long summer because of their "loyalty" to each other.

Senseless penalties taken by Munro and Askew proved disastrous. While the two Cougars were cooling their heels in the penalty box, little Larry Davies scored Chilliwack's winning goal, breaking a 3-3 tie with only 18 seconds remaining in regulation time.

Referee Missed First Penalty Call

Munro levelled Chilliwack's Kim Kriehbiel with a lusty cross check. Referee Barry Balance missed that infraction but a moment later, at 17:01 of the third period, detected Munro committing an infraction against a second Chilliwack player.

Munro was assessed a five-minute major for "butt-ending."

A minute and a half later, the penalty-killing Askew was slapped with a very-obvious charging penalty.

Despite playing shorthanded two men, the Cougars twice were able to ice the puck and overtime seemed imminent until speedy Mike Randolph was able to muster the Bruins for one final rush with less than 30 seconds to play.

Randolph fired the puck into the corner. He checked a Victoria defender before the Cougar could clear and Davies alertly punched the puck home for a wild scramble at the side of the Victoria net.

Randolph figured in all four Chilliwack goals. He scored Chilliwack's third after setting up Rick Metzler and Kriehbiel for the first two.

All four Chilliwack goals came while Cougars were shorthanded.

The Cougars were tagged with eight minors and the major to Munro while the Bruins were slapped with only four minors.

Plowe was off for Chilliwack's first and third goals while Pennock was in the penalty box on the second.

Bond, Mayer and Greg Robinson scored Victoria's goals. Those three, along with Tommy Keep, Chris Riddell and goaltender Ed Forslund, played well for Cougars and tried hard.

Disappointing Performance by Stars

But there was disappointment in the performances of Munro, Askew, Bruce Cowick and Plowe.

Cowick literally coasted during the most of the game while Plowe tried hard, especially in the first period, but couldn't shake a scoring slump.

Victoria's big gun with 60 goals during the regular campaign, Plowe has failed to score in Cougars' last seven games. He managed only two assists in the five games against Chilliwack.

Finally, and from Chilliwack's standpoint, there was a poetic justice to the Bruins' triumph.

At game's end, five Bruins were injured. Coach Orv Litchfield compensated for the shortage by successfully manipulating two lines and drawing heavily on the hearts and desires of his players.

Denis Andersen, a series standout, was lost at the 4:30 mark of the first period. Hit hard by Randy Bock, Andersen suffered a "deep charley horse" and is expected to be sidelined for about two weeks.

Then Rich Kramp, all by himself when he tripped behind the Victoria goal, suffered a knee injury at 1:30 of the second period. He stayed on the bench but saw only limited duty

Defenceman Roy Carmichael suffered broken teeth and a badly cut mouth and forward Ross Smith suffered a broken nose when cross-checked by Victoria players in the third period. Kriehbiel was the fifth player forced to go to the dressing room after being checked by Munro.

Davies, the scoring hero for Chilliwack, also was on the receiving end of two brutal hits. Bock tagged the little guy with a hard check, then Pennock came along a few minutes later with a hit that dropped Davies.

But Davies, exemplifying the spirit shown throughout the series by the upstart Bruins, came back to score Chilliwack's biggest goal of the season.

Rockets Take Off In Final Period

VERNON — Kamloops Rockets turned on the power in the third period Tuesday to defeat Vernon Essos 5-4 and win their best-of-seven B.C. Junior Hockey League Okanagan Division semi-final, 4-1.

Behind 3-1 at the end of the second period, Rockets evened the count within nine minutes and went ahead 5-3 by 11:24 when Tim Peck notched the winning goal.

Jerry Holland scored twice within five minutes to pace the thrid-period rally while singles came from Gary Howett and captain Lyle Harpe.

Rod Cox, Glen Walton, Jim Lawrence and John Price counted for Essos.

Kamloops now takes on Penticton Broncos, 4-0 winners over Kelowna Buckaroos in the other divisional semi-final, for the right to face the Coastal Division champion for the league playoff title.

Series Opens At Penticton

PENTICTION (CP) — The British Columbia-Alberta junior hockey playoff between Penticton and Red Deer will open here April 5, the B.C. Junior Hockey League has announced.

Second game in the best-of-seven series will be played here April 7.

If either team wins both games, the third game will be played April 10 in Red Deer. If the first two games are split, the third game will be held here April 8.

BILL WALKER

This is sort of like halftime — the Easter break. The hockey season is winding up, and the baseball season is all wound up, and ready to go.

And what happened in hockey, from that beginning long ago? The picks here last fall for playoff berths were absolutely correct except for Toronto in place of Detroit in the east, and Philadelphia in place of Los Angeles in the west. Sorry about that.

But now for baseball. What has it done for itself in the off-season? Not much, really. In football, most of the changes implemented through the years have been for the fan. In baseball the management and the players have all the say.

If there is a sense of excitement most of the time in football, and hockey, there isn't always in baseball. There is too much time when absolutely nothing is happening. That is the most-often heard knock against the sport, even though it is nice sitting out in the sun.

It isn't necessarily that baseball is a dull game. It isn't really. It's just that sometimes it is too long. For example, when fellows like Bob Gibson of St. Louis are pitching, there is no shilly-shallying around. Gibson gets on the mound, throws the ball, and is always ready to throw it right away again. It is on record that most of the games Gibson pitches in are concluded in two hours or less. Others should be made to do the same.

•

There was a point raised a while ago by Bill Veeck, the former major domo of the Cleveland Indians. It is his contention that baseball could do away with the relief pitcher's warm-up pitches. Veeck's argument is that the relief pitcher has been heating up in the bull-pen anyway, and probably has thrown upwards of half a hundred pitches when he is called for duty. Why should he need to throw eight more?

Multiply that number of pitches, and the time they take, by five or six, which is often the number of reliefers two teams use: add the time comsumed to get them from the bullpen to the mound, and it is little wonder that some games drag on, and on.

Veeck asks another simple question to illustrate his point.

"Does Johnny Unitas warm up on the field, and is the game held up while he practices with his receivers?"

Veeck, it also will be recalled, was the first to propose inter-league play. That was in 1952. The idea is still considered "visionary" in some quarters. Not in football. The two rival leagues finally learned to live as one. And profitably, too.

It is understandable that the dollar flow in baseball tails off once the pennant races have been more or less determined. This comes under the heading of "winning" and is why the leagues were split into the two division in the first place.

On the other hand, it was strictly unfortunate that there was a more noticeable drop in revenue in the playoffs, and that it was felt more deeply. But this was not the fault of baseball. Rather it was to the game's everlasting credit.

•

Economics are the basic reasoning. Because in the past two years the mini-playoff series in the two leagues have been won in three straight games, and the world series in five. This works out to a total of 22 games out of a maximum of 34. And teams can't make money on that schedule.

"Which is great for the honesty of baseball," commissioner Bowie Kuhn has commented, "but it has left the larder lean."

For next season, it is said that the teams will compete in three division leagues. This will be baseball's new look. And it may be fine for the gate, too. But why not throw in some inter-divisional competition as well? The fans would love it, and this would be good for the gate. That is almost certain.

At any rate, this is baseball's problem. The wheels grind slowly, and not always full circle. Just as too many games linger on too long.

Meanwhile, the New York Mets and the Los Angeles Dodgers will prevail this season in the National League, east and west. The Dodgers to overcome the Cincinnati Reds is the surprise there.

In the American League, it appears unlikely that the Baltimore Orioles can be headed off, unless Detroit can get the job done.

Their counterpart from the west will be the California Angels, who will outfinish the Minnesota Twins.

All of which you may not agree with, but that's the way it works sometimes. In the spring.

First Shutout Eludes Canucks

Times News Services

Vancouver Canucks had one hope shattered but another one kept alive on Tuesday night at Minneapolis.

The Canucks in edging Minnesota North Stars, 2-1, just missed recording their first-ever National Hockey League shutout. Murray Oliver scored the only Minnesota goal at 14:07 of the third period to end goalie George Gardner's bid for the shutout.

Wayne Maki opened the scoring for the Canucks in the first period and Rosaire Paiement made it 2-0 in the second.

However, if the Canucks lost the blanking, they still retained a chance of finishing in sixth place, ahead of Detroit Red Wings. They now trail the Wings by a single point.

"Who wants to finish last?" said Vancouver coach Hal Laycoe of the first-year club.

IRKED BY CHARGES

Meanwhile, coach Jack Gordon and general manager Wren Blair of the North Stars were rankled by suggestions the Stars were jockeying to finish fourth in the western division and thereby miss playing Chicago Black Hawks in the quarter finals.

"I'm not happy about the loss a bit," said Gordon after the Minnesotans shelled Vancouver goalie George Gardner with 43 shots.

UNGER IMPRESSIVE

Garry Unger, who was tagged by coach Scotty Bowman as "my kind of player," when he arrived in St. Louis following a late-season trade with Detroit Red Wings, contined to impress.

The Edmonton native scored the winner in a 4-3 thriller with Los Angeles Kings.

The goal was Unger's 27th of the season, a far cry from the 42 he tallied as a Red Wing last year. But the 23-year-old centre got off to a slow start at Detroit after missing most of the pre-season camp while recuperating from a swimming pool accident.

Unger's game winner came just 2½ minutes after Eddie Joyal had tied the game for the second time as the surprising Kings outshot St. Louis 36-31 in the game.

Knicks Pad Lead; Errors Aid Bucks

By The Associated Press

New York Knicks cleared a major hurdle in the defence of their title and Milwaukee Bucks turned San Francisco miscues to their advantage in National Basketball Association action Tuesday night.

Willis Reed and Dick Barnett combined on five straight free throws to break a 101-101 deadlock and send the Knicks to a 113-107 victory over Atlanta Hawks and a 3-1 lead in their Eastern Conference semi-final playoff.

Two crucial San Francisco turnovers late in the game helped Milwaukee grab a 114-102 victory over the Warriors. The Bucks now lead the best-of-seven Western Conference semi-final 3-0.

In other games, Bob Love scored 17 of his 36 points in the final quarter in leading Chicago Bulls to a 112-102 victory and tie their Western semi-final with Los Angeles Lakers at two games apiece, and Baltimore Bullets routed Priladelphia '76ers 120-105 for a 3-1 lead in their Eastern semi-final.

Reed's free throw with 4:10 remaining gave New York a 102-101 lead which Atlanta never overcame.

Barnett added two free throws with 3:13 left and another pair with 2:47 remaining before Reed's tip-in 40 seconds later made it 108-101 and iced it for New York.

SLOW MOTION ON SOCCER TV PERIL TO REFS

MILAN, Italy (AP) — The Italian Soccer Federation wants the state-run television network to stop showing filmed game action in slow motion.

The reason: the slow-motion embarrasses referees by revealing the mistakes they make on the field.

This undermines confidence in referees and often endangers them with physical violence, the Federation says.

The federation made its appeal after a rash of controversies and even riots over referee decisions.

Vancouver Island Open and Handicap Match Play Golf Championships

NAME .....

CLUB ..... Handicap ....

Signature .....

Entry form and fee to be mailed to Leo Derman, Secretary, Gorge Vale Golf Club, Victoria, B.C., and received by April 12.

FEE: Amateurs $5, Professionals $10

(Fee MUST Accompany Entry)

Entry limited to 160, based on low handicaps. Qualifying round (18 holes) at Victoria Golf Club on Sunday, April 18.

Scissors Session First Golf Chore

First chore for the fairway faithful in preparation for this year's edition of the Times Vancouver Island Open golf tournament is an exercise with scissors.

Golfers planning to compete in the annual tournament, which includes a handicap chase for the Hugh Francis Trophy in addition to the Open scramble by pros and amateurs for the Times Trophy, must fill out and submit by mail an official entry form.

That's where the scissors session comes in. Clipping can start today because a copy of the entry form is printed on this page. Completed forms must be received by Leo Derman at Gorge Vale Golf Club no later than April 12.

ENTRY LIMIT SET

Officials have set a limit of 160 players for the 18-hole qualifying round at Victoria Golf Club on Sunday, April, 18. In the event the limit is exceeded, entrants with the lower handicaps will be given preference.

Survivors in the qualifying test will continue at match play in both Open and handicap divisions on successive Sundays as the competition follows the familiar pattern of shifting around Greater Victoria courses.

Qualifying is usually a difficult task, but clipping should present no problems. And once the entry form has been mailed, you can get to work with woods and irons on the practice fairway.

KING OF SOCCER RECEIVES BIG WELCOME, KEYS TO PARIS

All This, and Brigitte, Too!

PARIS (AP) — Brazilain soccer star Pele, supported by a cast including Brigitte Bardot, plays here tonight in a nationally-televised soccer festival which is France's sporting event of the year.

The kickoff was to be made by Miss Bardot, dressed in a French red-white-and-blue outfit.

Though billed as an exhibition match in aid of cancer research between Santos FC and a combined team from St. Etienne and Marseille, the two leading French First Division clubs, there was no doubt who the fans at the Colombes Stadium and millions of televiewers, were out to see.

Pele got a reception worthy of a head of state when he arrived in Paris Tuesday. A welcome at Orly Airport was followed by a parade before massed fans down the famous Champs Elysee and a news conference.

French newspapers commented that it was only fitting that France welcome Pele as it would visiting royalty, because the Brazilain footballer is the unchallenged "King of Soccer" having scored more points in league and international matches than any other player in the history of the sport.

Pele, who received a key to the city, said he felt "very honored" by the welcome and said he would try his very best to give French football fans their money's worth in the friendly match he is scheduled to play with one of the teams.

SAFARI CHAMP FAILS TO PASS DRIVING TEST

LONDON (AP) — Chris Rothwell, 35, the crack international auto rally driver who has twice won the grueling East African Safari Classic, has failed to pass his British driving test.

"I am frankly amazed," said Rothwell after being rejected by the examiner. "The only consolation is that my wife failed, too."

The Rothwells lived in Tanzania for many years. They recently returned to Britain.

Chris had to take the test in Britain even though he passed one in 1952. When he went to Africa he allowed the British licence to lapse.

In Tanzania he was in charge of an army driving school and for two years he ran the police driving school.

The licensing authorities would not comment on Rothwell's failure to pass the test.

Salary Boom Leaves Baseball in Trouble

CHARLES O. FINLEY
. . . predicts price hike

NEW YORK (AP) — A boom in players' salaries has brought baseball to the edge of crisis as it moves toward a new season with spectator dollars tight and costs ballooning.

Once reserved only for a handful of super-stars, the $100,000 club had become crowded, with almost a score of men now in the six-figure pay bracket. More than 100 draw $50,000 and more. Salary budgets of most clubs have jumped 25 to 50 per cent in a year.

Many baseball executives say that if the salary trend continues some teams may face bankruptcy. They contend that players' greed is jeopardizing the structure of the game.

The players argue they are in a short-term profession, have been underpaid for years and only now are beginning to receive their due.

Owners and business managers, facing deficits, are talking about increases in ticket prices, cutting the rosters from 25 to 23 men and even slapping a ceiling on salaries.

"The players are going to price themselves out of the market," says Frank Lane, director of operations for Milwaukee Brewers.

Charles O. Finley, owner of Oakland Athletics, predicts that if "owners continue paying unjustified salaries, the price of tickets will go beyond what the fan can pay."

E. J. Buzzie Bavasi, president of San Diego Padres, said:

"If we keep this up, we're going to kill the goose that lays the golden eggs."

"There will have to be a ceiling or we will have to reduce our rosters," says Dick Walsh, general manager of California Angels.

Several Padres Play for Minimum

"This spring I was negotiating with one of our players who told me: 'I don't pretend to be as good as Yastrzemski or Johnny Bench. But I figure I'm half as good. So I'll settle for $250,000, any way you want to pay it.'

"That's the sort of thing we're up against."

Carl Yastrzemski, Boston Red Sox' .328-hitting outfielder, signed a three-year contract for $500,000, or $167,000 a year, making him the highest-paid player in baseball.

Bench, the brilliant young catcher of the National League champion Cincinnati Reds, asked for a similar contract. He settled for $80,000.

The giants, who reported a loss of $926,413 last season, have three players in the $100,000-plus category, topped by the veteran Willie Mays, who signed a two-contract for $160,000 a year with a third-year option. Pitcher Juan Marichal draws $125,000 and first baseman Willie McCovey $110,000.

A contrast is the San Diego expansion club, struggling for existence.

"The highest paid man on our club is Ollie Brown, $35,000," Bavasi said. "Half our roster is playing at the $12,750 minimum. Four Giants — Mays, McCovey, Marichal and Gaylord Perry — make as much as my entire payroll."

Mays, 39, sought a $750,000 10-year contract but settled for the shorter, fatter agreement.

"It's a two-way street," Mays says. "I've given baseball a lot over 20 years. I don't think I'm overpaid."

Baseball Is Behind, Says McCovey

McCovey, is more outspoken.

"Baseball is behind all other sports in salaries," he said. "Big salaries haven't come quick enough. Look at basketball players just off the campus getting $1 and $2 millions. Football players play just once a week. We play every day. Baseball is supposed to be our national pastime. Our superstars should be the highest paid in the world."

The world champion Baltimore Orioles have one of baseball's biggest payrolls, reported in excess of $1 million.

This year first baseman Boog Powell was boosted from $65,000 to $90,000 and third baseman Brooks Robinson from $80,000 to $100,000. Frank Robinson pays tax on $130,000.

The Orioles, who drew only 1,057,069 would have lost money except for participation in the playoffs and World Series. They face a deficit this year unless their attendance can be boosted above the 1.5 million mark.

"It's almost necessary to draw a million and a half at home to break even," says Bob Scheffing, general manager of New York Mets.

The Mets drew 2,697,479 fans last season, the highest attendance in both leagues.

At least half the 24 major league clubs operated in the red last season and the number would have increased except for television and radio receipts.

Tigers Get Chance; Lonborg Sent Down

JIM LONBORG
. . . off to Louisville

By The Associated Press

Detroit Tigers, shooting for the top of the American League's East Division, and Chicago White Sox, trying to avoid the bottom of the West, have both completed their second trade in as many days as baseball's spring training season nears its end.

The Tigers, searching for more pitching in the wake of the fractured skull suffered by Joe Coleman last weekend, acquired veteran Dean Chance and promising Bill Denehy from New York Mets in exchange for pitcher Jerry Robertson.

That trade came 24 hours after Detroit had acquired Bill Zepp from Minnesota Twins for infielder Mike Adams and a player to be named.

DEAL WITH SENATORS

Meanwhile, the White Sox, who had swapped utility men with Washington Senators Monday, sending Tom McCraw for Ed Stroud, came up with a multi-player swap Tuesday. Chicago sent catcher Duane Josephson and pitcher Danny Murphy to Boston Red Sox for reliever Vicente Romo and first baseman Tony Muser.

In other player moves, the Red Sox optioned outfielder Farvis Tatum and pitcher Jim Lonborg, a 22-game winner in 1967, to Louisville of the International League, Cleveland Indians cut pitchers Mike Paul and Ed Farmer and the Mets optioned pitchers Jon Matlack and Jim Bibby, catcher Randy Bobb and utilityman Mike Jorgenson.

TIGERS HAVE HOPES

The Tigers hope that Chance can regain the touch that won him the Cy Young Award in 1964 and made him a 20-game winner for Minnesota as recently as 1967. The Mets paid $150,000 to Cleveland for the right-hander during last September's pennant drive.

In 16 1-3 innings this spring Chance had a 5.63 earned run average, allowing 10 runs and 17 hits.

The Red Sox hope Josephson can solve a catching problem for them. A .316 hitter last year, he was squeezed out in Chicago by four other catchers including Ed Herrmann and Tom Egan.

"Josephson will be our starting catcher in Boston next Tuesday," said manager Eddie Kasko. "We'll work him into the lineup immediately, and I'm going to try and catch him regularly."

Macdonnell, Rollick Win First Games

MONTREAL (CP) — There was only one upset Tuesday as play opened in the Canadian closed badminton championships.

Ed Yablonski, of Toronto, was the only seeded player to go down to defeat as he was defeated 18-16, 18-17 by Brian Dick of Calgary in the opening round.

Dick did not have time to enjoy the upset victory over the seventh-seeded Yablonski. Wayne Bickel, of Montreal, defeated Dick in three games, 15-9, 12-15, 18-16. Vancouver's Cam Dalgleish eliminated Bickel later in the day.

The two top seeded players in the men's singles, defending champion Bruce Rollick and Wayne Macdonnell, of Vancouver, both advanced easily.

Single Change In Tide Ranks

Only one change is evident in the Victoria Crimson Tide starting lineup which is set to tackle University of British Columbia Thunderbirds for the McKechnie Cup, symbolic of B.C. rugby supremacy, Saturday in Vancouver's Brockton Oval.

Selectors from the Victoria Rugby Union have gone with almost the same team that defeated Vancouver 15-9 in a semi-final at Macdonald Park on March 13.

Thunderbirds nipped Not-West Caps 11-9 last weekend in Vancouver to collect the other final berth.

The lone switch in the Tide's starting lineup involves front-row forward Gaither Zinkan of the University of Victoria Vikings. Zinkan was injured in the match against Vancouver and is still unavailable for duty.

FOSTER TO START

Al Foster of James Bay Athletic Association replaced Zinkan during the Vancouver match and will retain the front-row berth along with hooker Ivor Ford of Cowichan and Paul Bayliss of Castaways.

Pete Simmons of JBAA and Robert Hindson of Castaways make up the second row while Mike Penn and John Wenman of Oak Bay Wanderers and No. 8 Ken Wilke of Uvic Vikings form the back row.

Oak Bay's Don Burgess fills the fullback slot while the three-quarters are Reg Hoole (Vikings), Tom Browne (Castaways), Rick Rollins (Castaways) and Jim Temple (Oak Bay). Gillie Greig of Castaways is the standoff-half and Darryll Noullette of Saanich Velox is the scrum-half.

Time of the Vancouver match is 2:30 p.m.

Bowlathon Opens Friday

Capital City Lanes will be open for 50 consecutive hours beginning at 7 p.m. Friday for the annual Easter Seal "bowlathon."

While some fivepin bowlers will be attempting to go the entire distance, others will be tossing balls for shorter periods at 50 cents per game. Proceeds will go the Greater Victoria Lions Clubs' Easter Seal campaign for crippled chidren.

Each single-game ticket entitles the purchaser to one game as well as a chance to win one of the 50 (or more) draw prizes.

Host bowlers and Lions Club members will be on hand to provide competition, assist in scorekeeping and help keep contestants awake.

Soviets Extended By American Club

GENEVA (CP) — United States, rated as an under-dog in the current world hockey championship, gave the mighty Soviet Union team a tough time before bowing 7-5 on Tuesday.

In the other game of the day, Czechoslovakia blanked West Germany, 4-0.

The Americans, with a single surprise victory over Czechoslovakia after eight starts in the six-team tournament, twice led the Russians, who are gunning for their ninth consecutive world title.

KNOTTED SCORE

United States took a 1-0 lead at the beginning of the first period but the Soviet Union came back to knot the score before the end of the 20 minutes. Americans again led 2-1 early in the second period but the Russians exploded later in the frame to take a 6-3 lead going into the third period.

The Czechs did not extend themselves while recording the shutout over West Germany, apparently conserving strength for the Thursday night battle against the Soviet Union.

If You Sail a Dinghy, Gorge Race Is for You

BOWLER OF WEEK

Returning to victory list for sixth consecutive season is Don Corbett, winner of men's fivepin award in 23rd week of eighth annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest. Don rattled pins for powerful 314 middle game, which was combined with 281 start and 297 finish to produce division-topping 892 series in Monday Classic League at Gibson's Bowladrome.

Any boating buff with a dinghy to sail will be able to test his skill in the annual Gorge Race, due to get the start gun 10:30 a.m. Saturday, April 10 at Craigflower Park.

As in past years, the event is being sponsored by the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces' Sailing Association and is bound to attract some competition from south of the border and the B.C. mainland.

It's pretty hard to estimate how many will be taking part because the 50 cents registration fee is collected just before the race starts, but each year the numbers grow.

Beginning at the park, which is situated at the corner of Gorge and Admirals, the dinghy sailors will race to the Inner Harbor. From there, at 12:30 p.m. there will be a second race, this time to Esquimalt Harbor.

If the weatherman declines to co-operate, however, the course will be switched to a reverse of the first one, ending at Craigflower Park.

A prize-giving will be held at the squadron's clubhouse on Maplebank Road.

More information can be had by phoning Bill Whitby at 388-5063 or Ken McKinnon at 382-6111, local 3444.

Dinghy sailors of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club wound up their winter activities on the weekend with a social 'do' and prize-giving.

As to be expected, there were a fair number to step up and receive their 'flipper' badges, earned by unscheduled dunking some time in the season. New members of the flippers' club are Sheena Smith, Barbara Kidd, Daphne Wheeler, Barbara McCaul, John Hall and Tim Roots. Back as 'repeaters' were Nancy Lovett, Bob Akins and Hugh Brimacombe.

Sybil Lees, as women's champion, received the George Broom Cup. Runner-up was her sailing partner in their Cal 20 Bustle, Elspeth Kerr.

Tony Rose won the Peter Young Trophy for junior champion, being followed in second spot by Mike Williams. The Devonian Cup for men went to Ron Mack and the Ashe-Warlow Cup for men's El Toro racing went to Jim Williams, Champion in the Davidson open racing was Ted Bowers and second place winner, Jim Davis.

Rick McBride captured the prize for highest aggregate in Davidson racing while, at the other end of the scale, the Losers' Cup, donated by Peter Brown, was good-naturedly accepted by Bob Akins.

Top sailors in the three-winter series were:

DAVIDSONS: November — 1, Rocky Rochfort; 2, George Dufour; 3, Peter Townshed. December — 1, Rick McBride; 2, Ted Bowers; 3, Humphry Golby; 4, Jim Davis. February — 1, Rick McBride; 2, Ted Bowers; 3, Humphrey Golby; 4, John Malleson.

EL TOROS: November — 1, Jim Williams; 2, Tim Roots; 3, Mike Williams; 4, Marion Brown. December — 1, Jim Williams; 2, Marion Brown; 3, Tim Roots; 4, John Hall. February — 1, Jim Williams; 2, Mike Williams; 3, John Hall; 4, Tim Roots.

Doug Gray won the class racing in December and came second in the first series, losing out to Bill Van Cuylenborg.

Doug Lee and Bruce Smith jockeyed for top positions in Fireball competition, Doug beating out Bruce for first spot in the November series with Bruce tilting the scales in reverse the second series around. Dave Richardson won himself third position in the December series.

Doug Beer was the big winner in OK dinghies, edging out Dennis Woodward.

Turkey Head Sailing Association members had a taste of everything in the weatherman's book Sunday when they sailed two races in waters off Oak Bay Marina.

Southeasterlies blew between 25 and 30 knots for the first 6.6-mile race which was won by Greg Oliver's T'Weather. After her came J. P. Le Dallic's La Marquise, Dave Hartwick's Spray, John Dewey's Swallow, Jack Woodward's Puff, Frank Rhodes' Rampage, John Booth's Umpka, Stan Cosburn's Wild Thing, Gerry Porter and Mike Kennedy's Aureola and Rary Le Huguet's Tanu.

Class winners in the 28-boat fleet were: Thunderbirds, Swallow; Haidas, T'Weather; Crown 23s, Spray; Cal 20s, Vern Stilborn's Calindigo; Cruising A, Steve Merriman's Vandal and Cruising B, La Marquise.

The afternoon race was a 'drifter' with 26 boats manoeuvring onu waters as slick as oil, wooing northerlies of about three knots.

Puff was over-all winner this time, being followed by Rampage, T'Weather, Ed Chiang's Shamrock, Wild Thing, Umpka, Tom Loney's Hammerhead, Ted Bowers' Hakai, Aureol and Mario Lovricic's Trekker.

Class winners were: Thunderbirds, Shamrock; Haidas, Rampage; Cal 25s, Puff; Crown 23s, Spray; Cal 20s, Calindigo; Cruising A, Hammerhead; Cruising B, George Parks' Runcible.

CALLEY CONVICTION VIEWS SPLIT

War Crimes Lawyers at Odds

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP)—A deputy U.S. prosecutor at the Nuernberg war crimes trial said Tuesday the murder conviction of Lieut. William L. Calley was just, but that the case belonged before an international tribunal.

Another lawyer, who defended Hitler deputy Rudolf Hess at Nuernberg, termed the guilty verdict "macabre."

A former German general supported the verdict while expressing shock that Calley's superiors in Vietnam had not testified in his behalf to explain the psychological aspects of the war.

Dr. Robert M. W. Kempner, former deputy U.S. chief of counsel for war crimes, said here the court martial verdict finding Calley guilty of murdering 22 civilians at My Lai in 1968, conformed to precedents of international law established at Nuernberg in 1946.

"Nevertheless such a case belongs before an international criminal court," he said. "Only in this way can a clear and complete picture be obtained of the total circumstances surrounding the case."

The German-born international lawyer divides his time between his home in Lansdowne, Pa., and Frankfurt, where he has a law practice.

In Munich, Dr. Alfred Seidl, Hess' lawyer, commented:

"The conviction of the little insignificant Lieut. Calley is macabre when one considers that generals and chiefs of state go unpunished for their orders that permit the extermination of people in entire areas through napalm and mass bombing."

He referred specifically to fire-free zones in South Vietnam.

Hess, who is serving a life sentence in Berlin's Spandau Prison, was convicted of plotting against peace and of planning, inciting and carrying out aggressive war. He has been confined nearly 30 years.

In Diessen, former Gen. Ruasso von Manteuffel who commanded the German 5th Panzer Army in the Battle of the Bulge, said the Calley verdict was just.

"I must say I am shocked that his superiors . . . did not testify for him to explain the psychological aspects of a war against an unseen enemy," he explained.

Death Penalty at Issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Supreme Court, although it has not decided whether the death penalty is unconstitutional, currently is considering two arguments that could effectively abolish the penalty in many capital cases.

One of those arguments—whether legislatures should set standards to guide juries—could affect the death penalties given Charles Manson and three of his women followers by a California jury Monday.

The second argument concerns whether the penalty portion of a trial should be separate from the innocence or guilt portion. That argument would not affect the sentences in the case since California law already provides for such separation.

The penalties given the four for the murder of actress Sharon Tate and six other persons bring the number of persons on death row to 624 across the U.S.

The last execution in the U.S. was June 2, 1967. Nine states have abolished the death penalty and five others have severely limited the instances in which it can be imposed.

This Saturday In Weekend Magazine

Does it deal in glamor — or mind pollution? How is the money — your tax money — spent? And what do top people — Bruno Gerussi, Harry Boyle and President George Davidson think of the CBC? Ernest Hillen talked with them to get an inside look at this vast communications link that some say holds Canada together. Weekend Magazine brings you his special report this Saturday.

Canada's Immigration Policy — The Shameful Hoax

Every year thousands of skilled Europeans are lured to Canada—Land of Opportunity. Then they find they can't work at their trade. Plumbers, pipefitters, electricians, auto mechanics and other highly trained people are turned into cheap factory labor by restrictive policies — or wind up on welfare. Why the problem? Weekend Magazine explains this Saturday.

A $30 Million Waterloo

Canadian Christopher Plummer plays Wellington in this spectacular movie. But it was really the Russians who rescued the film. See it in production in Saturday's Weekend Magazine.

Why our lamb is such a good buy right now.

With just about everybody wanting high quality and low prices when they shop for meat, here's why New Zealand lamb should be on the top of your shopping list.

Spring Lamb's the thing

Tenderness is the first good thing about lamb. Particularly when it's spring lamb from New Zealand. Because spring lamb is young lamb. Born in the spring and carefully raised for meat.

Extra tenderness

New Zealand lamb starts out tender. Because it's always spring lamb. But to be extra sure the tenderness comes through to you, we developed back in New Zealand a new natural aging process. So even more now you know you're getting tender lamb every time. With New Zealand Lamb.

A family treat

New Zealand lamb has a mild delicate flavour. Children like it just as much as grownups do. Which makes lamb a nice change. A treat for the whole family.

Last point: the price

Yes, New Zealand lamb is one of the best meat values today. And with everybody trying to hold down the cost of grocery shopping, that's good news indeed.

So next time you shop...look in the frozen meat section for New Zealand Lamb. The tender meat that's a terrific value, right now.

SCIENTISTS STUMPED BY FISH DEATHS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Top scientists have all but given up their drive to find out what caused the massive deaths of whitefish in Lake Kootenay in 1969.

Living and dead samples were sent to laboratories both in B.C. and Washington State, but nothing has turned up.

"We have given up on these (1969) fish," said Dr. Tom Northcot, chief of the B.C. Fisheries Research Branch, "unless, of course, something turns up."

The squad of top fish scientists can only say what did not cause the fish deaths and even here they cannot rule out the possibilities completely.

★ ★ ★

Dr. Northcot said his department intends to keep a close watch on the white fish population, ready to field a team of experts should more deaths occur.

Experts in a half a dozen private and public laboratories examined the possibilities of death by virus, bacteria and fungus. But none of these inquiries paid off.

"We can't even say definitely that they didn't cause the deaths," he said. "But the possibilities have been moved down the priority lists."

He said the possibility of death by carbon dioxide was carefully examined, but it too was all but ruled out.

"We intend to observe," he said. "The whitefish population was by no means wiped out. We still have a good healthy population of fish there."

★ ★ ★

He said that if anything should happen in the future, his branch will be able to field a team of experts right from the beginning.

Dr. A. H. Acara, a former government scientist who claims to have lost his job for making his carbon dioxide theory public, fears that there will be another massive kill later this year.

Since then, however, other scientists have all but thrown out this theory.

The provincial government has also denied that Dr. Acara lost his job in connection with the fish deaths. The government claims he was asked to leave because of his inability to perform tasks assigned to him.

Campbell Accused of Building Base For Future Party Leadership Drive

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell was accused in the legislature Tuesday of building an "enormous power base" of control over B.C. municipalities as the basis for a future leadership drive in the Social Credit Party.

Garde Gardom (L — Vancouver-Point Grey) tossed the charge into a free-wheeling debate in which opposition MLAs from Vancouver complained about that city's treatment at the hands of the province.

Campbell shook his head and laughted at Gardom's charge that his development and use of ministerial power to overrule municipal plans was "a straight push to the leadership of the Social Credit Party."

The minister fired back at other MLAs who said Vancouver should be free to determine its own destiny by saying that history shows the weakness of the "city-state" concept.

He said "nonsense" about independent city states is being talked all over Canada, but it ignores the fact that cities are dependent on their hinterlands and can't go their own way.

Bob Williams (NDP — Vancouver East) said the government isn't allowing Vancouver to develop the "maturity" it should have because it interferes in the city's affairs, such as by removing its authority to impose a licence fee on hotels and motels.

"The cities should be free of rurally dominated legislatures like this one," Williams said, describing the provincial electoral system as giving the rural areas control of the legislature.

Liberal Leader Pat McGeer said the provincial government's attitude toward Vancouver was typified a few years ago when the province refused the city permission to increase its bicycle licence fee from 50 cents to $1.

BROAD POWERS

"The city of Vancouver should have very broad powers to tax, borrow and spend," he said.

He said he was "completely disgusted" with the way the city has been pushed around.

The debate came during second reading discussion of amendments to the Municipal Act and the Municipalities Enabling and Validating Act.

Campbell came in for criticism from Williams and Jim Lorimer (NDP — Burnaby-Willingdon) for an amendment which removes provicial forest reserves and tree farm licences from the community plan control of regional districts.

Williams said Campbell had "gutted" legislation which would have given regional districts a voice in resource management in their areas.

The New Democrat said, however, that Campbell should be commended for introducing the land use contract idea into the Municipal Act in order to strengthen municipal control of land development.

Mobile Home Fee Bill Passes Despite Squall

The New Democrats and Liberals put together a brief squall of protest Tuesday during third reading debate of the Mobile Home Park Fee Act.

But the storm accomplished little as the government brushed off the attack by voting 34 to 17 to adopt the bill.

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett and Liberal Leader Pat McGeer said their parties objected to taxing mobile home lots without giving the homeowners' grant in return.

Barrett said the bill creates a double tax on mobile homes because the purchaser also must pay the sales tax on the whole home, not just the cost of its building materials.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said the bill taxes the owners of mobile home parks, not individual residents.

But Gordon Dowding (NDP — Burnaby-Edmonds) said owners will simply pass the taxes on to residents.

PROVINCE TO BUY LAND

Kootenay Preserve Planned

A game preserve will be created around the Libby Dam reservoir in the Kootenays, Recreation and Conservation Minister Ken Kiernan said Tuesday in the legislature.

Kiernan made the announcement when he was warned by Leo Nimsick (NDP—Kootenay) that 18,000 acres of the winter range will be lost to the reservoir, wiping out 17 per cent of white-tailed deer and 6 per cent of the elk.

Kiernan replied that the government's land use committee will prevent further encroachment by buying up land surrounding the reservoir. This land will not be leased for grazing but will be preserved for game.

Kiernan also warned against people thinking that game is being wiped out in B.C. He said under only fair conditions, deer double their population in three years and elk in four to five years.

THE PILL?

"They have to be harvested," he said. "How else do you propose to get them under control, give them the pill?"

Nimsick, the lead speaker for the NDP as debate of estimates for Recreation and Conservation Minister Ken Kiernan began in the evening, said industrial pollution is ruining fishing streams in the Kootenays.

He told Kiernan that the coal mining has blackened the Elk River and that a pulp mill in Skookumchuck has done the same to the Kootenay River.

TOURISM THREAT

Pollution also exists in the St. Mary's River, he said. This is a threat to tourism in the Kootenays and also harms a prime recreational resource for residents, Nimsick said.

He asked Kiernan to put an end to dumping of waste material on sidehills near mining sites. This practice adds pollution to streams from rainfall and snow run-offs.

ECOLOGICAL RESERVE BILL THROUGH HOUSE

The New Democrats failed on five occasions Tuesday to amend the Ecological Reserves Act before it received third reading in the legislature.

The NDP supported the principle of the bill, but Ernie Hall (NDP — Surrey) moved amendments which would have given the government's environment and land use committee the power to administer the act instead of the lands and forests minister or cabinet.

Hall also proposed that the bill be amended to prevent an ecological reserve from being cancelled except by the legislature.

The bill allows special areas to be set aside as ecological reserves for preservation and study.

Socred Out of Order On Air-Sea Rescues

Socred backbencher Scott Wallace (SC—Oak Bay) was ruled out of order in the legislature Tuesday for continuing to debate a federal matter as though it were a provincial responsibility.

Wallace told the house that Recreation and Conservation Minister Ken Kiernan should assume more authority for air and sea rescues.

He admitted these are Ottawa's responsibilities, but he said Kiernan could at least license boats the way the motor vehicle branch licenses cars.

Committee chairman Herb Bruch told Wallace three times he was out of order. Wallace accused Bruch of being punitive and finally challenged his ruling.

Wallace was defeated and had to take his seat as Bruch's ruling was upheld by a vote.

Measles Running Wild Again Despite the Use of Vaccine

WASHINGTON (WP) — Measles, supposed to be eradicated three years ago with the development of a vaccine, is running rampant again, U.S. Public Health Service figures show.

Communicable disease experts estimate that 65,000 American children will catch measles this year, as many as in 1966 before the vaccine was in wide use. As many as 60 children are expected to die from complications of measles, mainly pneumonia and encephalitis (a brain ailment).

On top of the increase in measles cases, the U.S. National Centre for Disease Control in Atlanta reported there were twice as many cases of diphtheria last year as in 1969. And the number of children adequately protected against polio has dropped 13 per cent since 1966.

Government officials blamed a slowdown in local and state immunization programs for the increase in cases of diphtheria and measles and the lowered number of children protected against polio.

But direct federal funds for these programs ran out in June, 1969. Local governments, though, can get indirect federal money for immunizations from such programs as maternal and child health.

"The answer is once again convincing state health departments and local medical societies that good preventive medicine includes immunizing at least 90 per cent of the children against diphtheria, whooping cough, polio and measles," said Dr. J. Lyle Conrad, assistant chief of the centre for disease control's immunization branch.

MANY DEATHS

The value of immunization programs was strikingly demonstrated during an epidemic in Texarkana, a city of 50,000 divided by the Texas-Arkansas state line.

CDC reported 637 cases of measles there between June, 1970 and last January in Texarkana.

Although measles is generally an innocuous childhood disease, its complications lead to death in about one out of every 1,000 cases.

The centre for disease control reported the largest number of cases of diphtheria last year since 1962. With outbreaks in six states — including large-scale epidemics in Miami and San Antonio — there were 500 cases of diphtheria reported last year compared to 241 cases in 1969.

DECREASE SEEN

Government experts also estimated a decrease in polio immunization levels. In 1966, the centre for disease control said 79 per cent of American children ages one to four had an adequate immunization.

Last year the figure dropped to 66 per cent, with many of the unprotected children living in rural and urban poverty pockets of the country.

Dr. Conrad estimated it would cost between $12 million and $15 million dollars a year to run an active immunization program.

Vaccine for measles is fairly expensive — as much as $1.30 for a single dose. But small pox vaccine costs a penny a dose, a combined tetanus, diphtheria and whooping cough vaccine cost five cents a dose and polio vaccine costs about 25 cents.

NEW LEASE ON LIFE

The old New England Hotel, a landmark from the Victorian era at 1312 Government, has been given a new lease on life.

Its interior has been renovated, painted and refurnished and in a few days will be ready for occupancy. Its exterior also will be painted.

But the old brick and stone four-storey hotel, built in 1892, came close to going under the wrecker's hammer.

When Victoria businessman Kuldeep Bains bought the building from Tom Kaye, he asked contractors for their opinion on what he should do with the 40-room hotel.

"Tear it down," they said.

But Bains felt it could be put to good use again like so many old buildings across Canada.

He took the bull by the horns and ordered complete renovation — a time consuming and expensive project.

"I have never seen a building in Victoria with such high ceilings," he said. "They are over 14 feet. People in those days believed in ventilation and fresh air."

The hotel, laid out after the spacious style of the last century's architectural design, was the most famous on the west coast at the turn of the century.

It catered to a procession of notables through the years and was the scene of memorable banquets. Its restaurant and wine cellars were equally famous.

It was built by John Teague for Young Bros. on the site of the old New England restaurant established in 1858 by the Steitz brothers.

U.S. Pushes Mine Program In Face of Sea-Bed Treaty

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. Navy, in a decision with far-reaching implications, has decided to speed up its effort to develop a mine which could destroy enemy submarines in wartime.

If the new weapon fulfills the hopes of its backers, the navy's anti-submarine-warfare program is likely to be restructured later in the 1970s.

For example, if comparatively cheap mines can stop enemy subs at narrow points — such as straits on the way in and out of ports — there would be less need for expensive submarines to kill other subs.

Another impact would be on the international effort to demilitarize the ocean bottom. While the conventional explosive mines would not constitute the nuclear weapons of mass destruction banned by the sea-bed treaty, some lawmakers are worried that the project may break the spirit of the recent agreement.

The sea-bed treaty, signed Feb. 11 with the U.S. and Soviet Union among its signers, states that "this treaty constitutes a step towards the exclusion of the sea-bed, the ocean floor and the subsoil thereof from the arms race ..."

The Russians proposed originally that the sea-bed be demilitarized completely. But the U.S. opposed this, presumably so underwater devices for detecting submarines and defensive mines like the new one could be used.

THE THEATRE AT U-VIC: SOME ANSWERS TO MRS. AUDREY JOHNSON'S QUESTIONS

Submitted as a personal statement by Ralph G. Allen, Professor and Chairman, Deparment of Theatre, University of Victoria.

By now the somewhat dramatic resignation of Professor Richard Courtney from the theatre department of the University of Victoira to accept an attractive position at Calgary has been widely publicized. The reactions of his students and other supporters have received some coverage in the newspapers. Those reactions ranged from measured and reasoned debate to the carrying of obscene placards. Mrs. Audrey Johnson in her most recent Sounding Board (Times, March 27) has seized on this publicity to launch a general attack on the policy of the theatre department and its priorities, particularly the effort expended on Victoria Fair, the festival of the arts which developed out of various events sponsored originally by the summer session of the University.

I do not consider it ethical to debate the academic and philosophical issues that have led a majority of his colleagues to disagree with some, but not all, of the objectives of Professor Courtney's work in Developmental Drama. (The term seems to have been invented by him; his definition of the field differs in some important respects from what is usually called Creative Drama and Children's Theatre.) I am currently preparing a detailed article expressing my opinions about Developmental Drama for publication in one of the leading professional journals in our field. Such a journal is a more appropriate forum for debates of this sort than is the Victoria Times.

But I cannot remain silent when Mrs. Johnson alleges that Victoria Fair represents "glamorous window dressing" for our theatre department; when she implies that university funds, which might have expanded Mr. Courtney's program were spent on the "luxury of hiring professional actors for extended periods of time," when she suggests that there is little community involvement artistically or financially in the Fair, and when she contends that we neglect our educational responsibilities in order to mount "lavish productions for public spectacle."

Had Mrs. Johnson contacted Dean Garvie or myself before writing her article, as one might expect any objective reporter to do, she might have had the answers that she suggests so rhetorically that she is seeking. Her article appeared, perhaps fortuitously, in the weekend immediately preceding the opening of our production of Lope de Vega's Justice Not Revenge, one of two productions chosen to represent British Columbia at the Dominion Drama-Theatre Canada festival in Ottawa. Mrs. Johnson's article, if unanswered, may influence potential supporters of the Fair, and therefore I feel honour-bound to reply. I have requested that the managing editor provide me with equal space. He responded generously by offering us 1000 words on Saturday, plus an interview about the play. I consulted some of my colleagues who have helped me pay for this advertisement and they felt that our position should be presented in an unabbreviated form and before the opening of our production.

A few facts first. Victoria Fair is not nearly as expensive to the University as Mrs. Johnson suggests. The budget of the Fair is separate from the Theatre Department. The University is not even the major contributor to its support, except in the many supplementary spaces and services it provides at no out-of-pocket cost, i.e., offices not used in the summer, shop facilities, rehearsal areas and so forth. Productions on the scale mounted by Victoria Fair would be prohibitively expensive if undertaken by a professional company, but the Fair's relationship to the University considerably reduces overall costs. The largest cash contribution to the fair comes not from the university, but from thousands of people who bought tickets. Their support is proof that the community is interested in our work. The second largest contributors last year were the Greater Victoria municipalities, through the Inter-municipal committee, and we are all grateful for the endorsement of the principle that our city and our university can effectively co-operate to improve our quality of life. Foundations, businesses and individuals have also lent their financial support. Out of this wide partnership has come a festival which in three short years has won considerable recognition throughout North America. Ben Metcalfe on the CBC called Victoria Fair "the only place to be" in the summer. Henry Hewes, the distinguished critic of the Saturday Review of Literature devoted a full page of lavish praise to our first season, and the late Nathan Cohen, Canada's most distinguished theatre critic, praised our achievements and urged support for the Fair in one of his last broadcasts. In the educational field the Fair is well known, and next month the Educational Theatre Journal, the leading publication of its kind in North America, will carry a laudatory review of last season's performances. In fact, it is not unfair to say that the national critics have been much more appreciative of the achievements of this community project than Mrs. Johnson now seems to be. Why Mrs. Johnson is so unenthusiastic about the Fair may be left to the reader to decide. The question was raised with her city editor at a Community Arts Council meeting last fall.

But all of this fails to touch the central issue raised by Mrs. Johnson: the educational value of the Fair and its relationship to the theatre program of the University. More than 170 students have taken part in these summer productions, a very few in leading roles, many in small supporting roles, some as technical and design assistants. The value of experiencing at first-hand the discipline of such a large-scale artistic project, one requiring an infinite amount of co-operation and work, is surely its own justification. The benefit to a design student of working with Robert Cothran on what Mrs. Johnson rightly calls one of our "opulent" productions is incalculable, and in this one particular at least, the experience could not be duplicated anywhere in Canada. But the educational value of our productions goes far beyond the specific needs of those few of our students who are going to be successful theatre professionals. Indeed, it strikes at the heart of what a theatre program at a University should be, and since I have not had the opportunity during the last few weeks to express my opinions publicly on that subject, let me conclude by giving you some very personal observations.

The theatre is worth studying not because of any narrow career objective, but because for 2400 years it has been central to human concerns. It has the same justification as a subject that mathematics or English literature or history does and requires the same discipline in its study. A theatre program should be consistent with the serious intellectual goals of the university; it should never become simply a laboratory for self-expression. Its faculty should encourage new insights, but be suspicious of any "experiment" that is easy or fashionable.

The serious study of theatre requires that the department sponsor performances, and in this respect I suppose we have a service function which the more traditional disciplines do not share. Our productions must be designed to suit the needs not only of theatre students, but of the whole university community, for in my view, a theatre is as much a necessity in a university as a library and serves a similar purpose.

The productions at a university should be of two kinds: those designed primarily as a teaching device for the participants and those intended to make accessible to university audiences the masterpieces of dramatic literature in productions that will represent them adequately. In the latter kind of performance, guest artists should occasionally be used. Why does Mrs. Johnson feel that this alliance between the university and the profession is inappropriate? The arrangement is traditional in Canada. Witness Hart House and the Frederick Wood Theatre.

Indeed, the alliance must be strengthened. Otherwise the performance of important plays from the past and distinguished contemporary work will survive only at the national theatres, one or two to a country, which can attract massive government subsidy.

The theatre is hard work, but it is finally valued for those moments of joy which it provides for both performers and audience. Joy of any sort is rare enough, but the knowledge that it exists gives us the strength to survive all kinds of disappointments. Thus, I will be disappointed if Victoria Fair does not continue to grow. Its success will depend on the enthusiasm of its audiences, and naturally I hope that all of you will want to see our Ottawa production, JUSTICE NOT REVENGE, in its preview this week. But should Mrs. Johnson have her way, and the University change its perspective about this kind of performance, the theatre department will find other ways to strive in her words "to be a leader for the whole of Canada in this important area". I very much doubt "that the chance is gone forever."

We have in Peter Garvie a Dean whose sense of what a good theatre should be is always an inspiration to me and many of my colleagues. His insights into our field are not surprising since he is himself a distinguished playwright and critic. Mrs. Johnson may question the "straightness of his perspective," but I find it straighter than most others.

Phosphate Content Easiest to Control

LOS ANGELES (CP) — Canada's reasons for going it alone in banning phosphates from washing detergents—a step the United States has refused to take—were disclosed here today.

For the first time, the basis for the phosphate policy is fully revealed in a paper by director Dr. A. T. Prince and J. P. Bruce of the federal government's inland waters branch. It was presented to the annual meeting of the American Chemical Society.

The policy, reinforced by the Canada Water Act, passed by Parliament last spring, was based on several factors.

The first was the scientific judgment that phosphorus rather than nitrogen or carbon was the key element in the growth of microscopic water plants which rob the water of oxygen needed to support other forms of life.

This also was the conclusion of the International Joint Commission, established by Canada and the United States to deal with matters affecting boundary waters.

Canada also agreed with the IJC findings that phosphorus was the most readily controllable of the chemical additions to the Great Lakes waters.

It was determined that detergent phosphates account for about 40 per cent of the phosphorus in the lakes. About half of municipal phosphate discharges in Canada into Lakes Erie and Ontario are from detergents. The U.S. figure is 70 per cent.

Timing, cost of treatment facilities and extent of control over nutrient sources were determining factors in the policy.

Dr. Prince said that with many lakes fast reaching a state where a major change in the rate of deterioration could be expected, it was essential to begin reducing the phosphorus loading without waiting for construction of adequate treatment facilities.

He notes that the IJC's initial proposal was for a phosphate ban in detergents by 1972 followed by nutrient removal from sewage by 1975.

"Many financial and political problems have to be overcome, however, before this objective can be met," he said.

In forecasting the effects of the ban, Dr. Prince notes that Canada contributes only two or three per cent of the detergent phosphates in Lake Erie, adding, ". . . the responsibility for action lies with the United States."

But Canada and the U.S. contribute about equally to the Lake Ontario phosphorus load, excluding what enters through the Niagara River from Lake Erie.

Broadcasters Questioning B.C. Ad Ban

Private broadcasters are questioning the validity of Bill 103, the province's ban on tobacco and liquor advertising.

The B.C. Association of Broadcasters questions the right of the province to "make laws which affect the content and use of broadcasting apparatus," BCAB director Clare Copeland said today. He was a delegate to the association's annual convention at Harrison Hot Springs Tuesday.

Copeland said the BCAB will ask the government to refer the act to the courts to determine its validity, "insofar as it uses the words "broadcast or telecast" and appears to try to control the content and use of broadcast material."

If court action were initiated by the government, it would be the first time it has happened. If it isn't, the BCAB will consider "other measures," Copeland said, and this could include starting their own test case.

DOLLARS GO SOUTH

Because of Victoria's near-saturation by U.S. television via cable, the end result of the act will be to funnel advertising dollars south of the border, he said.

"The man (Premier Bennett) is completely out of touch with modern society," Copeland said. "He appears to be inflicting his own, pre-prohibition feelings on the people of B.C."

Copeland saw a more insidious threat in the crisis being faced by small weekly newspapers.

PAPER TO DIE

One weekly in the province derives 82 per cent of its revenue from liquor, beer and tobacco ads, Copeland said.

"When that is gone, the paper will simply cease to exist —unless the provincial government springs to the rescue.

"Premier Bennett never has been reluctant to spend money on his departments, particularly at election time, and there could be a flood of government ads promoting things like tourism to take up the weeklies' revenue slack.

"Then, however, you have the real concern that the weeklies could become dependent on provincial government advertising for their livelihood — and then you have government-controlled newspapers."

Board's Field Bid In Doubt

Oak Bay's parks and recreation committee remains skeptical about the Greater Victoria school board's attempt to have the municipality share maintenance costs of playing fields in return for increased use of the fields by the community.

At its meeting Tuesday night Ald. Douglas Watts said the board had "missed the whole nub of the thing — the provincial grant."

In a letter received from S. H. Dietze, the board's director of construction and maintenance, the committee was told the provincial government contributes 50 per cent of the maintenance costs.

Dietze also wrote, "We suggest that since your recreation activities may require playing fields to be maintained to a higher standard than our school fields are maintained at present, the cost of this upgrading would be borne by the municipality."

Municipal engineer Geoffrey White said the board now spent $500 to maintain one pitch. It would cost a minimum of $1,200 to maintain a pitch in the standard set by the municipality and that in the agreement being negotiated by the board and Esquimalt municipality, the figure being decided on was $700.

'CRUX OF MATTER'

Ald. Brian Smith said that if the municipality agreed the increased costs would be as high as the entire amount now being spent on recreation.

Watts said: "The crux of the matter is that it is all public money. It seems illogical that the local taxpayer should be picking up the biggest share."

The committee decided White should meet with Dietze Thursday in an effort to gain clarification of the proposed cost-sharing, Smith noting that any agreement would be on certain fields, not all.

The committee agreed to have $500 included in the provincial estimates for the provision of a store and score booth in Windsor Park for use by the Oak Bay Cricket Club.

Trollers Attack Jordan Dumping

The Dison Development Ltd. application to dump one million gallons of waste effluent per day into the Strait of Juan de Fuca at Jordan River has raised strong opposition from the Pacific Trollers' Association.

The company has told the Pollution Control Board the effluent will come from a copper concentrator. There will be no other treatment of the waste, other than the retention of an undetermined portion of the tailings, to be used for backfill in the mine.

SHALLOW WATER

The PTA claims the water off Jordan River is shallow and swift tides and upsurges will prevent settling. They ask for an alternative method of disposal.

Michael Guns, PTA secretary-manager, said the continuous dumping will bring disaster to the marine life.

"Tris area is a rearing ground for immature coho and a feeding ground for herring."

For five years commercial fishermen have been banned from fishing herring because of dimishing stocks. These are now slowly building up again and the department of fisheries is reviewing the situation. It was the fishermen who urged the ban in 1967.

Guns said killer whales are often seen off Jordan River and a crab fishery is conducted along the entire strip of coast from Sooke to San Juan.

He warns of other possible dangers:

"Mature salmon, herring and ling cod pass through the straits on their return migrations. Extensive oyster culture is being done in nearby Sooke."

Guns said that, apart from commercial fishing, the straits is growing in importance as a recreational fishing area.

In its brief to the PCB, the PTA said the water in the area is characteristically clear. Any muddying, it states, will affect the balance of life, which is important to the feeding species of fish. Plankton growth, the brief said, will inevitably be affected by a change in light.

DISCOURAGE SALMON

"A further objection is that the effluent might discourage mature salmon in their migration, either delaying them, as was the case with pulp mill effluent in Nootka Sound, or forcing them over to the American side of the strait."

Guns said salmon net fishing in the straits is governed by international treaty, based on equality of catches. The effluent, he claims, would cause imbalance.

Nearby beaches, such as China Beach, would suffer, and the dirtying of the water would reduce the area's recreational potential.

Hijacked Airliner Returns to Manila

HONG KONG (Reuter) — A Filipino airliner hijacked to China returned to Manila today with all 19 passengers and crew who spent the night in Canton.

The plane and passengers, minus the six hijackers, were released by Chinese authorities early today and came to Hong Kong before flying on to Manila.

The jet was forced across the border to Canton Tuesday after six armed men seized the plane during a domestic flight from Manila.

Sourdough Queen Navy Guest

A slender 19-year-old blonde arrives in Victoria Thursday to keep a date with the navy and perform some light-hearted ambassadorial duties for the Yukon Territories.

She's Judy Crawford of Dawson City, more formally known as Miss Yukon.

She made the date in late February when CPO Henry Gordon and LS Dave Gallo of the destroyer-escort HMCS Yukon represented their ship at the Sourdough Rendezvous in Whitehorse.

Miss Yukon, apart from her good looks, can lay good claim to her title, being a fourth generation member of a sourdough family.

Her first stop on arriving will be to meet the ship's company of Yukon. From then on it will be a whirl of festivities, beginning with a round of the city's night spots that evening.

She will also be attending the ship's company's dance, at Club 44 in CFB, Esquimalt, Friday.

Her visit ends Sunday.

Give Craft Show

The Greater Victoria school board's adult education division will sponsor a public art, craft and fashion display from 1 to 9 p.m., Saturday and 1 to 5 p.m., Sunday at the Institute of Adult Studies, corner of Lansdowne and Richmond.

The exhibits will include oil paintings, woodcarvings, cake decorating, rockhounding, clay modelling and flower arranging.

Dr. Lotta Looks at Southern Africa Needs

By ELIZABETH FORBES

A round robin letter has come to me from Canada's beloved Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova and you'll never guess (unless you too, received the letter) where it was written. In the first paragraph she says "here I am in Caberone, Botswana's capital, 13,000 miles away from home."

Forbes

In that same paragraph Dr. Lotta explains that back in December the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada's board of directors made an historic decision "that I travel to Southern Africa on an exploratory mission, to find out in what ways our agency could assist the three former British dependencies, Botswana, Lesotho and Swaziland."

★ ★ ★

In land area Dr. Lotta writes, Botswana is about as large as Manitoba or Saskatchewan "but the population is somewhat less; only 648,000 which works out to about two people per square mile." At least 95 per cent of the population is engaged in agriculture.

What the country desperately needs is to bring more land under crop production "by improving its dry land farming techniques; so as to produce enough foodstuffs for all its people. This is one of the primary goals of the government over the next decade."

She was told that eastern Botswana has 11 million acres of arable land, but of these only one million are under cultivation or are recent fallow. "Some 600,000 additional acres are considered to be potentially irrigable. The average annual income is less than $100 a year and it is imperative that rural income levels rise as fast as possible."

Present lack of education is the greatest stumbling block. "More and better trained teachers, more schools, more libraries, more scientific equipment is the constant concern of minister of education officials."

Schools are running on a shift system in order to try and accommodate all the pupils. In one place she visited, "children were squatting on the ground learning the basics of arithmetic and to manage simple additions by lifting little sticks of wood and tiny green apples in unison from one pile to the other, while they wainted until a classroom would become available to do their lessons such as writing at a much-shared desk."

★ ★ ★

Dr. Lotta says it will be many years before schools of Botswana have all the standard equipment which we in Canada so much take for granted and until all teachers will be secondary school graduates.

"At this moment only 60 per cent of the 2,037 teachers are classified as having been trained (which means that they have completed secondary education); 37 per cent have no more than six or seven years of primary schooling themselves."

★ ★ ★

To her eyes the school children looked "relatively well" but medical authorities told her there was hidden nutrition only detected when the children are weighted and measured "but on the whole the magnificent school feeding program made possible by contributions of the United Nations World Food program is a complete success."

She describes feeding in the schools on a shift system twice daily and tells of "children who get nothing to eat at home because their parents just cannot provide food" who come in the morning and in the afternoon for their share.

"You should see them licking their plates impeccably clean and shiny; plates which a few minutes earlier had been heaped full with a gruel made from milk powder, cornmeal, oil and egg powder."

★ ★ ★

Tremendous problems lie ahead of Botswana "because it is still so underdeveloped in human and material assets."

As a Canadian Dr. Lotta says she is proud that the largest loan our country has ever made to any African country has gone to Botswana for development of its Shashi River dam project "which promises tremendous returns when mining of recently discovered diamonds, copper and nickel deposits begins."

As executive director of the USC "a truly Canadian agency" she is eager that "we establish a significant program in this country which has so many needs and so much promise."

★ ★ ★

She concludes "to be able to extend our work to a third continent for this immensely worthwhile challenge we shall need the warmhearted backing of our many USC friends, from coast to coast."

18 Nations Book Space At Fair

North America's first computerized trade fair will be Impo Expo 71, the B.C. International Trade Fair scheduled for June 2-12 in Vancouver.

The fair's catalogue is being prepared with the help of a computer, and during the fair information booths will have computer printed terminals to give exhibitors and buyers access to the fair's data bank.

There will be two special exhibits — one by the Port of Vancouver and associated transportation and service industries, which will be linked with an international transportation symposium; the other, organized and coordinated by the Vancouver planning department, will show models of new buildings and developments downtown.

DRAW 200

The symposium is expected to draw more than 200 persons representing 10 nations concerned with B.C. shipping.

At present, there are 18 nations with space booked, more than for any previous BCITF.

A series of draws will choose winners of a truck camper the opening day, an imported car on each of the following nine days and a grand prize consisting of a trip for two by air to any international destination of CP Air or Air Canada, plus $1,000 expense money.

Officers Released

ATHENS (AP) — Six ranking Greek officers were released from exile Monday and permitted to return to their homes, reliable sources reported. Included was Gen. George Koumanakos, much-decorated commanding officer of the Greek Contingent in Korea, who was deported by the ruling junta for 38 months without being charged. charged.

Monday, It Was Too Late

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Mrs. John Salayka realized when she cleaned the basement one Saturday morning that her 15-year-old son and two of his friends had spent Friday evening sniffing glue. She found the glue tubes left on the ping-pong table.

Upset and unsure about her next move, she spent the weekend thinking about what to say to her son to try to stop him.

Monday, it was too late.

She went down to the basement to get some meat pies from the freezer and found her son dead, asphyxiated by the plastic bag over his head.

She agreed to talk about it with reporter Mary Trueman of the Windsor Star in the hope that she might help some other mother prevent a similar tragedy.

"On Friday evening . . . I went down to the basement to finish cleaning the stairs, and saw Chris and two of his friends sitting around a lighted candle at the ping-pong table."

She has since learned that candles are burned to cover the smell of the glue.

FEARED A FIRE

"I didn't mind the candle, but I warned them against playing ping-pong with it lighted. I was afraid they would knock it over and start a fire.

"When I found the glue Saturday morning, the first thing I did was look around to see if they had been building models, but there were none.

"As soon as I realized what they had been doing, I took the glue and put it in my night table and started thinking about the best way to approach Chris.

"I'm 100 per cent Irish and I know I'm likely to flare up and say the wrong thing.

"A 15-year-old kid is touchy.

"I decided it might impress him more if I waited until his two buddies were over again and spoke to all of them together.

"I thought this might prevent them from just going and doing it some place else."

After school Monday Chris did some family errands then came home and went down to the basement. Mrs. Salayka said there was nothing in that to worry her. She had not considered the possibility of his sniffing glue alone, and the basement had for years been his special retreat.

ALWAYS BUSY

"He spent all his time down there with the record player going full volume.

"I'd call down: 'Chris, what are you doing?'

"'Oh, nothing,' he'd answer.

"But he was always busy at something, fixing up his fishing tackle, building models or a dog house or a bird house. His latest project was fixing his youngest sister's bike.

"His buddies were all real nice chaps, most a little younger than him. He was sort of a leader, always getting the other kids out hunting or playing games.

"What he did Monday night he did by his own choice. There were no older boys there pushing him or influencing him.

"I thought of the possibility of suicide but the hospital said it was unlikely and the other kids don't think he was worried about anything."

Mrs Salayka feels her husband, who died in 1963, might have spotted the signs and acted faster.

TALKED WITH OLDEST

She has talked with the oldest of her five other children about LSD and marijuana.

"They told me it was widely available but they weren't interested in it. They don't even drink.

"But I had never really studied up on glue-sniffing. I thought it was something the little kids in grade school do.

"I feel now that what I should have done was call our family doctor right away, or got an appointment with one of the social agencies which deals with the drug problem.

"Even if I had just made an appointment for myself and gone in and got the facts, and then taken Chris in. . . ."

Roadbuilding Upsurge in B.C. Said Unlikely

VANCOUVER (CP) — Only a small increase in roadbuilding this year was forecast Tuesday by Gordon J. Zacharias, president of the British Columbia Roadbuilders Association.

Mr. Zacharias, who is also president of Columbia Bitulithic Ltd., told the association's fifth annual meeting that 1970 was a bad year for the roadbuilders and he was "not too optimistic in regard to the volume of work for 1971."

AUSTRIAN BREAD (Gugelhupf)

Scald ½ cup milk. Stir in ½ cup sugar, ½ tsp. salt, ¼ cup butter. Cool to lukewarm. Meantime measure into bowl ½ cup lukewarm water, stir in 1 tsp. sugar and sprinkle the contents of 1 pkt. yeast on top. Let stand 10 minutes, then stir well. Stir in lukewarm milk mixture. Stir in 2 eggs well beaten, 2½ cups sifted all purpose flour. Beat vigorously, about 5 minutes. Cover with a damp cloth. Let rise in a warm place, free from draft until doubled in bulk, about 1½ hours. Sprinkle fine dry bread crumbs over sides and bottom of well greased fancy mold or 8 cup casserole; shake out the excess crumbs. Arrange on bottom of mold; whole blanched almonds. Stir down batter. Beat thoroughly. Stir in ½ cup seedless raisins, ½ tsp. grated lemon rind. Turn into prepared mold. Cover with damp cloth. Let rise in warm place free from draft until double in bulk, about 1 hour. Bake in preheated 350F oven 40 to 45 minutes.

Doctors Find Speed Helps Slow Down Hyperactive Children

TORONTO (CP) — "Speed kills," says the posters.

It also calms down unruly schoolchildren and is being used increasingly by physicians and parents for that purpose.

Amphetamines and amphetamine-like drugs are the same "speed" that drug abuse campaigns warn against. Overuse can cause progressive mental and physical deterioration and sometimes death.

In adults, ampahetamines act as powerful anti-depressants, stimulants and energizers. The same drugs have the opposite effect on children until about the age of 12: they are soothing and pacifying and can often transform a rowdy student into a well-behaved one within a week. Medical science still can't say why.

Dr. Augusta Rheban of the Hospital for Sick Children's learning clinic, who has recommended speed for 70 children in the last two years, says: "In most cases, it restored peace to the home and classroom."

Dr. Lawrence Rodgers, a North Toronto Pediatrician, says he has prescribed amphetamine drugs for more than 200 children in four years.

"I've had wonderful results," he said. "And there appears to be little danger that the children will be hooked on speed in the future."

The children being treated regularly with speed under medical supervision are those noisy, aggressive, hyperactive ones who keep their classrooms and homes in an uproar.

A commission on emotional and learning disorders in children reported last July that about one million Canadian children have learning disabilities.

Their handicaps may be emotional, mental or physical, but many of them have these traits in common: They can't concentrate for more than a few minutes at a time and they have to keep moving as though they can't turn their motors off.

Jeff Hainsworth, 9, son of Burlington, Ont., pharmacist Richard Hainsworth, has been on methylphenidate (the trade name is Ritalin) for the last four years.

Jeff has a perceptual handicap: He can't calculate distance and space accurately. During his first years at school, he was so angry and frustrated he couldn't sit still. At home he would smash things.

"Have you ever considered what it's like living with a hyperactive child?" said his father.

"My wife and I could seldom go out in the evening because no babysitter would stay with Jeff. Our marriage was under a constant strain. We felt guilty, wondering what we had done wrong. And our other children suffered: They didn't get enough attention."

The Hainsworth's balked when a specialist in Toronto first suggested drug therapy. Later they changed their minds.

"And we're glad we did," Mr. Hainsworth said. "Jeff now is in Grade 3 and doing well. He can concentrate on his studies; he plays hockey; he does all the things other kids his age do."

Jeff takes 20 milligrams of methylphenidate, in pill form, three times a day. A "Speed freak" would inject 50 times that amount into his veins each day. During weekends and on holidays, when he doesn't have to cope with classroom restrictions, Jeff's dose is cut in half.

Methylphenidate is one of two drugs most frequently used in treating such children. The other is dextroamphetamine (Dexedrine). Doctors usually prefer methylphenidate because it causes less insomnia and less appetite suppression.

Mrs. Grant Montgomery, whose eight-year-old triplet sons have been treated with drugs for the last year, says improvement in the children became apparent after a week. The family made the decision to use speed after the lack of peace and quiet at home began to affect Grant Montgomery's health seriously. The children couldn't even sit down long enough to watch a TV program.

But some experts warn that too little is known about the effects of the drugs, especially over the long term.

"Doctors who prescribe the drugs don't really know what happens to these people later on because they're no longer under their supervision," says Dr. Mary Hackney, a specialist in learning disabilities who was for seven years chief psychologist at the Hospital for Sick Children.

"We have a responsibility not to contribute to the spread of the drug culture. I would prefer to treat the child who's a problem in school by other means."

Eight months ago, controversy broke out in the United States over the revelation that five to 10 per cent of all the school-age children in Omaha, Neb., where being given stimulant drugs to calm them down.

Martha Norton, who conducts a special class for unruly children at West Preparatory Public School, requests that drugs not be used until she has tried her own methods of calming the child. Only one of the eight children in her class is pacified by drugs.

When a child grows restless, Mrs. Norton talks quietly to him and massages his neck and shoulders. If he still can't settle down, she will suggest that he go out in the schoolyard and throw a ball around.

At a recent conference on children who are classroom behavior problems held at the Hospital for Sick Children, one physician denounced the use of amphetamines as "sloppy medicine because it doesn't get to the root of the problem."

One difficulty is that nobody's sure what the root of the problem is. The best the medical profession can do at present is to refer to the root cause of hyperactivity as "minimal brain dysfunction," which in plain English means "there's something wrong with the way the brain is working but we can't put our finger on it."

Pacifiers Preferred By Dentist

CHICAGO (AP) — A University of Toronto dental researcher says infants who are given pacifiers after weaning are less likely to suck their thumbs than babies who are denied pacifiers or given teething rings.

Dr. Frank Popovich, associate professor of dentistry at the university, presented his fidings Saturday to a session of the International Association for Dental Research.

His paper was based on a study of 1,258 youngsters in Burlington, Ont., between 1952 and 1871. It focused on the prevalence of thumbsucking, factors associated with it, and the changes in facial structure, including protruding teeth, caused by the habit.

The project, completed this month, showed that 40 per cent of all children in the study group sucked their thumbs but that only 13 per cent of the youngsters who were given pacifiers had this habit.

He warned about letting children use pacifiers indefinitely and said: "When they've finished using them or they break them, that's it. Don't buy a large supply."

He reported that reasoning with children about the bad effects thumbsucking has on their bite proved effective. He said 91 per cent of all youngsters in the study group sucked their thumbs at age three. At six, he said, thumbsucking in a group that received no counselling was 70 per cent, double that for another group which was counselled.

He said the study showed that thumbsucking was associated with an increase in malocclusion, or faulty bite. He said, however, that the prevalance of malocclusion was no higher than normal in children who stopped thumbsucking before age six.

This is because only the front teeth are displaced by the sucking habit at this age, while the entire upper jaw is affected if the habit persists beyond age six, Popovich said.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Doubting Wife

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My wife's sister (I'll call her Myrtle) married a bum who has been AWOL from the service several times. Myrtle spent time, on two different occasions, in a mental hospital, and this last time when she came out, she decided to go back to her no-good husband.

My wife and her whole family tried to talk Myrtle out of it, because this guy will have Myrtle back in the mental hospital in no time. He runs around with other women. (He is a regular sex maniac.)

Myrtle won't listen to anybody. Here is where I come into it: When my wife was trying to tell Myrtle what a louse her husband was, Myrtle said that I was no better — that I had made several passes at HER. This is a dirty, rotten lie. Myrtle is ugly as a bullfrog, and I wouldn't spit on her if she was on fire.

My wife believes her sister. How can I prove to my wife that Myrtle is lying?—True Blue.

DEAR TRUE: You can't. It's your word against Myrtle's. It seems to me that your past record (and Myrtle's) should speak for both of you.

DEAR ABBY: Stan had a beard before we were married so my father was against our marriage from the start, but he decided to be friends with Stan when he shaved off his beard for our wedding.

Well, after five months of being married, Stan decided to grow another beard, so my father told us he wanted nothing to do with me or my "hippie" husband.

Here is my father's reasoning: My younger brother got the courage to let his hair grow long because of Stan's beard. My husband's beard is not a bushy, wild one. It is neat, well trimmed and looks very nice.

Is my father being fair? He doesn't have to kiss my husband or even like the beard on him. I'm the one who has to live with it, and I like it. We would like your opinion and the opinions of others. —Stan's Wife.

DEAR WIFE: Your father is being grossly unfair. But I must admit that I am prejudiced. I find well-manicured beards extremely attractive.

DEAR ABBY: I have three sons under four, and I have a lot of laundry to do. I have no basement or clothes dryer so I hang my clothes outside. It is all right in the summer and spring, but in the winter it's no good because my clothes freeze when it snows.

My husband says, "My mother didn't have a clothes dryer and neither did Columbus, so when it snows, why don't you do what the Indians did?"

My question: What did the Indians do when it snowed? —Froze Out.

DEAR FROZE: They let it snow. But that's an old joke, and doesn't solve your problem. Tell your husband to skip the comedy and take you to the laundromat.

DEAR ABBY: If you could give the young parents of today just one piece of advice, what would it be? —New Mother.

DEAR MOTHER: Start early! A child must learn that no means NO! It doesn't mean maybe. And maybe doesn't mean yes.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Lines Around The Mouth

The mouth area comes in for so much attention, the quicker the lines are smoothed out and made to disappear, the younger you will look. A lotion-like substance 2nd Debut applied nightly will make the lines fill in and the skin become smooth once more. You will probably use 2nd Debut on your entire face to banish dryness, but do use a little extra care around your mouth. After applying the 2nd Debut massage very lightly, until it disappears into your skin. Your drug or dept. store has 2nd Debut with CEF 600 or CEF 1200 in double strength and you'll find it a genuine delight to use.

Cuddling Urge

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — A Vanderbilt University psychiatrist says "women have a wish, or a need, to be held." Dr. Marc Hollender told the Dallas Southern Clinical Society "some women will barter sex interest for the purpose of being held." Men, he said, don't feel the cuddling urge quite as strongly and usually interpret such advances as a desire for sex.

PORK STEAK CASSEROLE ORIENTAL STYLE

Easy Pork Casserole

Pork Steak Casserole, Oriental Style, is quick to make, interesting to eat, economical and nutritious. Blade or round bone shoulder chops can be used instead of pork steak.

PORK STEAK CASSEROLE ORIENTAL STYLE

3 to 4 pork steaks, ½ inch thick
2 cups uncooked rice
1 20-oz. can chop suey vegetables
10½ ounce can condensed cream of mushroom soup
1½ cups water
Soya Sauce
1 cup French fried onion rings, canned or frozen

Place rice in a shallow 1½-quart baking dish 10 by 10 by 2 inches. Drain chop suey vegetables, reserving liquid. Spread vegetables evenly over rice. Spoon soup over the casserole mixture. Add chop suey vegetable liquid and water. Place pork steaks brushed with soya sauce on top. Continue to baste chops occasionally with soya sauce as casserole bakes. Bake in a 350 degree F. oven for 1 hour. Sprinkle onion rings over top of casserole. Continue to bake an additional 15 minutes.

(Yields four to six servings.)

Tripe Pie Is an Economical Dish

By HILDA BEASTALL

If we could call it Ambrosia of Roses it might be more popular, but plain Tripe has lost whatever prestige it ever had. Yet with more conventional meats priced out of everyday buying range, for many people, there's comfort in finding tripe at 29 to 39 cents a pound.

The flavor of tripe is hard to describe for it depends to a great extent on the seasonings. Its texture is tender, and has some resemblance to very tender veal, chicken, or some say to mushrooms.

References to nutritional values of tripe are hard to find, although the product has been recommended for economical and nutritious meals in most wartime and "depressed era" homemakers' books. Minerals and vitamins are believed to be comparable to those in sweetbreads, another animal product. The protein content is accountable for the wonderful thick jelly formed when cooked tripe cools.

Tripe will make a delicately flavored soup, a hearty baked casserole, an Italian stew or an unusual Tripe Pie. Attractive jellied molds are easily produced to serve with salads.

Creamed Tripe and even Tripe a la King will appear on the menu at some time if you once start using this economical food.

One pound of honeycomb tripe (the kind seen locally for sale at meat counters) will serve two or three, according to the recipe followed.

The initial preparation is the same for most of these dishes. Wash tripe in cold salty water; pat dry with a cloth; cut into roughly one-inch square pieces with sharp kitchen scissors.

Cover the pieces with salted cold water, half teaspoon salt to a pound of tripe. Bring to a boil and then simmer for 1½ hours with lid on. This is done most economically in a corner of the overn when baking, using a covered casserole.

After this cooking, the casserole can be put into the refrigerator to use in making up a special dish the following day, or you can make a delicious Tripe Pie while the oven is still hot.

Add:
1 stalk of celery cut finely with its green tops
1 large carrot or 2 medium, grated
1 tablespoon mixed chopped parsley and chives from the garden or a half teaspoon mixed dried green herbs, mint, savory.

Salt and black pepper to taste.

If you like onion, add a small one thinly sliced.

While this is being brought back to boiling point in the casserole or pan of tripe, make a plain pastry:
2 cups unbleached flour
1 teaspoon salt
3 teaspoons baking powder
6 tablespoons shortening
⅔ cup skim milk

When mixed, divide into two parts. Roll out between two sheets of wax paper, and line a nine-inch pie plate with pastry.

Pour in the tripe and vegetable fixture. It should have a little liquid. Add a half cup of cooked brown rice and a quarter cup of wheat germ to thicken, and to increase total food value.

Cover with second half of pastry, rolled to fit. Wet the edge and build up with moistened pastry trimmings for form a ridge. Bake in a 400 deg. oven for 10 minutes, then lower to 350 deg. for about half an hour. Cover top with foil to prevent scorching if necessary, but the lower crust must be cooked too.

Serve hot with a green vegetable and carrots or winter squash.

sew simple

By EUNICE FARMER

Dear Eunice Farmer,

Many patterns call for top stitching to be done with buttonhole twist. I have used my largest needle, and experimented with tensions, but the twist still frays and breaks. Can you suggest anything that would help?

Mrs. S.S.

Dear Mrs. S.S.:

Unfortunately, some sewing machines simply aren't geared to working with buttonhole twist. We have experimented in many ways and some women have had good luck with one method, others used other methods.

Try using mercerized thread in the bobbin and see if this helps. Use a long stitch length, perhaps you will have to loosen the tension slightly. If it won't work perfectly with the buttonhole twist, the detail may be done with more success by using the twist and handpicking this detail. Many tweeds are stitched with ordinary thread and are also effective. Usually, your buttonhole twist is used on solid colored fabrics and this could be equally effective when done by hand.

recipe

APPLE PANCAKES

2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
1 cup finely chopped, unpeeled apple
2 beaten eggs
2 cups milk
1 tablespoon butter, melted

Mix dry ingredients and stir in apple. Combine eggs, milk and butter. Add to dry ingredients and stir quickly until mixed but still lumpy. Pour small amounts of batter (2 to 3 tablespoons) onto lightly greased hot griddle and cook until bubbles form on surface (about 3 minutes). Turn and brown other side (about 3 minutes). Serve with hot apple cinnamon sauce. Makes about 18 pancakes.

APPLE CINNAMON SAUCE

1 cup brown sugar
¾ cup apple juice
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ cup butter
1 cup finely chopped apple

Combine brown sugar, apple juice and cinnamon and boil to a heavy syrup (about 5 minutes). Stir in butter and apple. Makes about 1½ cups.

Whitton Blasts Youth-Cult Sell-Out

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Charlotte Whitton, the fiery, 75-year old political battler who has been five times the mayor of Ottawa and is still an alderman there, took on the country's youth as guest speaker at the Canadian Club Monday.

Miss Whitton attacked what she described as Canada's "most misleading fallacy today: the notion that half the population of this country is under 25 years old."

"This sell-out of the 60s to the youth-cult is the greatest of Canada's fallacies," she said. "We older people have been too easy; we've taken the souped-up publicity and we've taken it in the neck."

Canada had a population of about 21 million and it did not divide into clear-cut blobs. Miss Whitton said the group between 25 and 64 carry the nation, with the heaviest taxes and work load.

"Of the population under 25, there are seven million who range from babes in arms to age 14. There are about one and a half million from 15 to 19 and one and two-thirds million from 20 to 24."

OVER-25S ANXIOUS

Miss Whitton said the middle group over 25 was becoming anxious and worried about the state of things.

"Having succeeded in reducing the infant mortality rate and lengthening life expectancy we now don't know what to do. We are providing more and more humans equipped for use but we are increasingly less able to come up with something for them to do.

"We are retiring people into subsidized idleness. We are allowing industrial and technological research render more and more human effort obsolete. We seem to be heading for a lay-off of life at age 40.

"We are extending education and training into the late 20s and even the 30s and then we are laying people off at age 40. But we older people—most of us have had, say, 40 years of experiencing life, against only a promise to Canada to come from the youth group.

"The sell-out has not only been to ourselves but it's been a sell-out of youth itself. The present is cut out of the cloth of the past. We are not suffered to dissipate or waste our experience. It is our job to criticize and improve things."

Miss Whitton said that today's youth do not represent something that has not been seen before.

"We haven't known what to do with our youth. We have been selling-out in the face of technological developments. It's time for people who have accumulated a lifetime of living to put their argument forcibly.

"It's time for maturity and age to make a stand and say: so far and no further."

THE GALLUP POLL

Many Feel Future Won't Be Better

By THE CANADIAN INSTITUTE OF PUBLIC OPINION

Canadian adults are by no means sure that today's children have a better chance for a happy life, than their own generation did. Difference in opinion is very close, with about the same number believing the chances are less, as those who hope they will be better.

Despite the advantages of progress, and higher standards of living, 38% think today's children will have more chance of a happy life, but 34% think they will have less.

Family income makes little change in how a man or woman thinks on this question. While those with the lowest earnings are a little more apt to think their children's future will be better than their own, at the same time, more of them predict it will not be as good. Reasons for this is that more of the well-to-do consider that the chances are about the same as their own.

Men and women see eye to eye on this question:

"Do you think that children, on the whole, have more chance, or less chance of a happy life than children of your generation had?"

A check on how men versus women, and the main income levels think, is compared with the national average of opinion in the table below.

	More Chance	Less Chance	About the Same	Undecided
CANADA	38%	34%	21%	7%
Men	39	34	19	8
Women	37	34	23	6
Under $6,000	42	37	15	6
$6,000 to $7,999	37	30	26	7

Psychologist Urges Mothercraft Lessons

TORONTO (CP) — Education programs must be started within the family at the time a child is born if the poverty circle is to be broken, a Toronto psychologist said recently.

Dr. David Jackson urged the Canadian Mothercraft Society to make its infant-care and infant-development program available to others.

He recommended at its annual meeting the development of new tests to assess the gains of pre-schoolers on special stimulation programs.

There should be research to show "the number and effect of various types of environment on pre-schoolers," he said.

"I'd like to compare the effects of a traditional pre-school program, such as the one operated at Mothercraft, with a program where people go out to work with families in their homes."

He urged Mothercraft to develop a curriculum to teach people skills necessary for returning to their own neighborhoods to assist parents of pre-schoolers.

Women's Lib Topic Of Truckers' Talk

By LYNN ZIMMER

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — It's great to hear tough truck drivers talking favorably about women's liberation, says 22-year-old Donna Fraser.

Donna works in her mother's coffee shop, a favorite stop for truck drivers, and the pair have converted untold numbers of men to the cause.

"The funniest part is that I never start a conversation on women's lib," said Donna. "I just wear a little pin on my lapel with a fist in a women's sign — it gets them every time."

When truck drivers and men from local offices drop in for their morning break, the coffee shop erupts into lively discussion, sometimes with raised voices and pounding on tables.

"Our customers must like it. They keep coming back. Sometimes perfect strangers come in asking for liberation headquarters. And if I'm not doing well in a conversation, Mum can always pitch in and help."

"Mum" is Irene Maio, 45, called that by all the regulars.

Mrs. Maio said she comes from a long line of fighters. One aunt in Wales, Jenny, was actively involved in the Welsh labor movement while another aunt, Katy, was a determined suffragette.

Donna said her husband and her father were skeptical at first when the women started their campaign, especially the call for removal of abortion from the Criminal Code.

"Then Dad was completely converted by a TV program and he's been a campaigner for abortion law repeal, day care and equal job opportunities for women ever since."

Donna said she was influenced by the report of the royal commission on the status of women.

"I suddenly realized that report could make a big change in the lives of women and in my life. I realized that women's liberation affects every woman."

Just then the coffee shop's baker walked in, and Mrs. Maio said he opposes her arguments every time.

"You're right — I still don't think abortion is right, except maybe for a woman who's already had three or four kids," the baker said.

"But can't you see that would be forcing your opinion on other people?" asked Mrs. Maio.

"Who are you to judge who can have a legal operation?"

The baker was unconvinced.

"What would you do if your 15-year-old daughter became pregnant?"

Mrs. Maio said later that this question is one her customers don't like to consider. "Everyone assumes that illegitimate pregnancies will never happen in their own family."

Mother and daughter both joined a march when members of the Peterborough Women's Caucus presented a brief asking doctors' support for removal of abortion from the Criminal Code.

"I'm a shy person but this is one topic I feel obligated to discuss," said Mrs. Fraser, who has a young daughter of her own.

Women's lib isn't the only concern in the coffee shop. Mum Maio scolds teen-agers when they refer to their mothers as "my old lady" and pours coffee into them when she thinks they've had too much to drink.

"I threaten to put their livers on display in a glass pickle jar after they've been shrivelled up by booze or even speed," she said with a smile.

Women's Clubs To Set Stand On Abortion

TORONTO (CP) — National women's organizations have been asked to decide by April 30 whether they want references to abortion deleted from the Criminal Code.

The decision to poll the organizations came out of a meeting Monday night of the National Ad Hoc Action Committee on the Status of Women in Canada, attended by 60 representatives of national organizations.

Margaret Hyndman, representing the Canadian Federation of Business and Professional Women, suggested that a clause be retained in the Criminal Code to deal with abortions performed by unauthorized practitioners. But other delegates said the unauthorized practice of medicine is dealt with elsewhere in the code.

The session was called to discuss which of the 167 recommendations in the report of the royal commission on the status of women should be given legislative priority. Most of the debate concerned the recommendation that all sections on abortion be removed from the code.

Bookmobile Head Retires Today

Bookmobile patrons are losing a friend.

Dora Maude Payne, bookmobile librarian since 1954, retires today.

Miss Payne played an important part in the development of the bookmobile, a big, green lending library on wheels that makes over 30 stops, most in Saanich and Central Saanich. Also under her immediate supervision is the book depot in Brentwood.

She first joined the staff of the Victoria Public Library in 1937. In 1942, she resigned to do war work in Vancouver.

After working a while at the Vancouver Public Library, she opened a library and gift shop in Duncan.

Miss Payne is a life member of the Victoria Camera Club, a gardener and lover of nature.

She plans to retire to her property in Sooke where she has had a cabin built recently from hand-hewn logs. She plans to build a more permanent residence there.

PELLETIER'S BOOK 'SHOWS CONSCIENCE'

VANCOUVER (CP)—Parti Quebecois Leader Rene Levesque says his "old friend" Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier seems to be looking for a way to quit the federal Liberal government over its handling of the FLQ crisis.

"Pelletier with his book (The October Crisis) shows he has a conscience about the whole affair," Levesque said. "He seems to be looking for a way to get out—the way he has been doing things."

Wave of Welfare Fraud Charged by Gaglardi

SURREY (CP)—Provincial Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi said Tuesday a province-wide wave of fraud had been brought into the open by the decision of one B.C. municipality to hire a welfare investigator.

He said in an interview that lenient courts deserve much of the blame for the "fantastic amount" of fraud in the province, which he said had jumped "up to 200 per cent in the last six months."

Gaglardi said the inter-provincial fraud case which prompted Surrey's action Monday is just one of many his department knows about.

Surrey council decided to hire an investigator after welfare administrator Wally Merner disclosed a scheme involving four adults with several children who applied for welfare in a number of places in both B.C. and Alberta, then went from place to place collecting money.

He said the scheme was uncovered with the aid of Gaglardi's department, the social development department in Alberta and RCMP in Surrey and Calgary.

Gaglardi called Surrey's situation "one of the worst in the province."

"There is something wrong there and we know it," he said, adding that his department had long felt the municipality's welfare payments were out of line

He said his department's investigators will continue turning over information to the RCMP for fraud charges.

In the Surrey case, one man and three women are believed to have travelled together, along with an undetermined number of children, collecting welfare benefits at various times from Calgary, Penticton, Burnaby and Vancouver, as well as Surrey.

Merner said a check of about 110 families on welfare living in motels in the Surrey area had turned up about two dozen involved in some sort of welfare fraud.

NO HINTS SEEN IN THRONE SPEECH

Early Ontario Election Unlikely

By The Canadian Press

The possibility of a spring election being called by the new premier of Ontario, William Davis, seems unlikely, opposition parties agreed Tuesday after hearing the throne speech which opened a new session of the legislature.

The legislature, the ninth in Canada to sit, heard of plans to provide 130,000 jobs in an expanded housing program, aid for small businesses and programs to clean up the environment.

In other legislatures, co-operation among the Maritime provinces was discussed, Newfoundland opposition members heard closure invoked, Quebec approved interim credits, Alberta had an emergency debate on a rail strike and Saskatchewan also heard of the same strike.

In Toronto, Opposition Leader Robert Nixon said he expected a good many programs that would point to a spring election but "I don't feel that way now."

Stephen Lewis, leader of the New Democratic Party, said: "I wouldn't have thought it was an election manifesto; it was a much more cautious document." He said there was an "astonishing absence" of reference to regional government or to urban problems.

The Ontario government in an unprecedented move announced its budget will be brought down April 26. Date of the budget had never before been disclosed in a throne speech.

Nova Scotia legislators joined their counterparts in New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island in approving a resolution to establish a committee to consider certain recommendations of the Maritime Union Study. The study had recommended full political union within 10 years.

The resolution called for appointment of five members of the Nova Scotia house to serve on a joint committee with five members each from the N.B. and P.E.I. houses. Those legislatures also approved establishment of the committee Tuesday. The resolution carefully avoided any reference to the principle of Maritime union.

In another New Brunswick development, Louis J. Robichaud, the first Acadian to be elected premier, said in an interview he will step out of provincial politics when the current session ends.

At St. John's, the Newfoundland legislature voted 22 to 8 to invoke closure of the debate on the government's record $99.78 million interim supply bill. The closure rule limited speakers to 20 minutes each on each item. The opposition at one point walked out in a body.

CREDITS APPROVED

At Quebec the national assembly approved interim credits of $717.6 million to cover governmental expenses during April and May. The credits were necessary because the Quebec budget, brought down last Thursday, has not yet been passed by the assembly.

The Alberta house conducted an emergency debate on a railway tieup in British Columbia and parts of Alberta. The house unanimously approved a resolution asking the federal government to spare no effort in stopping the walkout.

At Regina the legislature heard that replies had been received to its telegram Monday demanding an early end to the walkout which is tying up grain shipments. Canadian Pacific Railway officials said every effort was being made to end the strike.

Mass Media Report Comes Under Fire

HALIFAX (CP) — Senator Keith Davey, chairman of the Senate committee on mass media, came under attack Tuesday for the committee's harsh comments about Halifax daily newspapers.

Jim Moore of the Chronicle-Herald and Mail-Star editorial staff accused the senator of unethical standards and conduct in dealing with testimony given the committee last year about the two papers.

The committee's report, although critical of Canadian newspapers and broadcasters in general, gave special attention to the Halifax dailies. It described them as "either mediocre or dreadful, depending on the rigor of your standards." Mr. Moore, taking part in a press panel with Senator Davey, said the committee's report did "a grievous injustice" to The Chronicle-Herald and Mail-Star.

Elementary justice, he said, demanded the senator give the papers a chance to reply to all allegations made about them in submissions by competing papers given to "hostile criticism" of the Chronicle-Herald.

SAYS RULES BROKEN

Mr. Moore said the Senate committee had "violated the rules of every court in Canada." A brief from The 4th Estate, a Halifax weekly strongly critical of the Halifax dailies, had been heard after the Chronicle-Herald's own submission to the committee.

"We could have refuted those allegations if we had been asked to do so. . . . I suggest, sir that your conduct and your standards are unethical."

Senator Davey said all briefs to the committee, including that of The 4th Estate, were made public after submission. It would have been a simple matter for The Chronicle-Herald to write a letter to him. To the best of his knowledge the committee had not heard from the Halifax papers again.

Mr. Moore also contended the commitee's report was inconsistent in dealing with the morning Chronicle-Herald and the evening Mail-Star, both published by the Halifax Herald Ltd. In volume one the report accused them of "lazy and uncritical journalism." In volume three the report said 76 per cent of Nova Scotians believe newspapers are concerned with social problems. Since the Halifax papers dominated in Nova Scotia this figure must refer to them.

The committee's own poll by the Goldfarb organization had found that 51 per cent of Nova Scotians think newspapers represent the interest of the public at large, a higher percentage than in Quebec.

PAPERS OPPOSED

The same poll found that most Nova Scotians chose newspapers as most biased against government and television as most biased in favor of government

Senator Davey said polls provide interesting figures but they should not be taken too seriously.

"You read the polls literally," he said. "I take them as indicating a direction."

He said he did not intend to debate the committee's report with The Chronicle-Herald but Mr. Moore's comments seemed to indicate "you are prepared to sleep on." The real interest should be in the report's recommendations for improving the press of Canada.

These included establishment of a press council to receive the public's criticism of the media and to promote higher journalistic standards.

DIDN'T DIG ENOUGH

Nick Fillmore, managing editor of The 4th Estate, said he did not think the committee had probed deeply enough into operation of The Canadian Press, the national news-gathering co-operative.

"For instance, I don't think you got into the back rooms of CP . . . and found out about the high staff turnover rate they have." Mr. Fillmore said he is a former CP staffer.

He said Canadian Press dependent largely on local dependent largely on loacal news enterprise of the Irving papers in that province, papers he said were found wanting by the Davey report.

Senator Davey said the committee concluded that CP is not perfect, that it should do more foreign reporting for Canadians, and that newspaper publishers should provide more money to CP to make this possible. CP was sometimes weak in cultural and economic matters.

"But we did come to the conclusion that, on the budget they have they are doing a pretty good job." Both publishers and the working press were generally agreed on that.

Isis Launch Today

Special to the Times

LONPOC, Calif. — Barring an act of God in the earthquake-plagued state of California, Canada's fourth satellite is set to be launched from Vandenberg Air Force Base, between 6:30 and 7:15 p.m. today.

The weather is expected to continue to be balmy with temperatures in the mid-60s here at NASA's western test range, 60 miles north of Santa Barbara.

Isis B will follow three highly successful predecessors, Alouette 1 and 2 and Isis 1 into a near-polar orbit around the earth.

* * *

Its mission will be to provide scientists with additional information on the vagaries of the ionosphere, the electrically-active portion of the atmosphere stretching from 50 miles above the earth to near space.

The 582-pound spacecraft is the largest and most complex satellite produced to date for the joint U.S.-Canada international satellite for ionspheric studies program.

It was built by RCA of Montreal and contains eight Canadian and more American scientific experiments.

Communications Minister Eric Kierans is heading a Canadian delegation to the launch.

* * *

The western test range will be used for launching a series of earth resources technology satellites between 1973 and 1975.

Canada is expected to participate indirectly in this program by receiving important photographic information from the satellites.

Air Canada First

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lockheed Aircraft Corp. went knocking on the doors of its airline customers and bankers today with a plan in hand to retain Rolls-Royce egines for its jet-powered air bus.

First on the list for a visit from Lockheed's top brass was Air Canada, which has ordered 10 Lockheed L-1011 TriStars which can fly up to 350 passengers at 600 miles an hour.

Terms have not been disclosed for the tentative agreement announced Tuesday, after two weeks of private talks between Lockheed and the British government on behalf of the bankrupt Rolls empire.

The plan could jack up costs and alter deliveries of the 178 TriStars on order. But a switch to another power plant at this point would require costly redesign of the plane's tail assembly where the third engine is located. The other two are wing-mounted in pods.

Take Off Fat With Home Recipe Plan

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drugstore and ask for Naran. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoonsful twice a day as needed and follow the Naran Reducing Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

Opponent of SST To Fight STOL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator William Proxmire, leader of the successful fight to end federal financing of the SST, is questioning a proposed multi-million-dollar government-industry venture to develop another commercial plane.

The new project involves another breed of airplane—a short-haul craft with a range up to 500 miles—named Short Take Off and Landing Transport, The STOL.

George M. Low, acting administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, asked the Senate aeronautics committee Tuesday to approve the first $1.5 million-instalment of a project scheduled to cost $100 million during the next four years.

Proxmire, a Wisconsin Democrat whose seven-year battle to stop SST spending ended last week in a 51-to-46 Senate victory, told a reporter he will do what he can to prevent the STOL from getting government financing.

In a letter to Low's office, he asked for complete justification of government involvement in STOL research and development.

"As far as this senator is concerned," Proxmire said, "Congress must not again become involved with some vague open-ended, potentially very costly 'joint undertaking' with the aircraft industry."

The SST program involved government subsidies totalling more than $1,000 million to develop two working prototypes to be used as models for later commercial production.

Low has promoted the STOL as part of an air-ground transportation system between nearby cities and to ease airport congestion.

Because of the shorter runway required by such a plane, it theoretically could operate from airports much closer to the central cities, sharply reducing time spent travelling to and from airports.

"If we are going to assist development of a STOL aircraft," Proxmire said, "we should know precisely what we are getting into, how much it will cost, how far we are prepared to go and what are the limits on our involvement."

The de Havilland Aircraft of Canada Ltd. at Toronto is working on the design for a 48-seat STOL aircraft designed for short-haul passenger use.

The federal government has given financial assistance for the project. If the project continues as scheduled, the plane could be in production by 1973.

Edmonton Grows

EDMONTON (CP) — The city's population increased by 13,085 during 1970 to a total of 435,503, an increase of 3.1 per cent compared with 1969, the city election office said Tuesday.

A census report on the result of a survey last fall showed the area population for the city area north of the North Saskatchewan River increased by 12,546 during 1970 compared with a growth of only 539 persons on the south side.

The total figure shows the city has almost doubled its population during the last 15 years. In 1956 the population was 223,549.

Atlantic Polluted

EDMONTON (CP) — The Atlantic Ocean is polluted by more oil than can be effectively dealt with, Dr. Patrick McTaggert-Cowan, executive director of the Science Council of Canada, said Tuesday.

There is "pretty good" evidence that the Atlantic Ocean is "chronically polluted by oil," Dr. McTaggert-Cowan told University of Alberta science students.

"Bermuda beaches are chronically polluted," he said, adding that "300 million tons of oil are annually spilled into the ocean."

Appeal Expected

HIGH RIVER, Alta. (CP) — An appeal and further tests by Hutterites of the Alberta School Act is expected following a decision Tuesday when a member of the sect was convicted of keeping his daughter out of school.

Paul Stahl of the Cayley Colony, 50 miles south of Calgary, was fined $25 and costs on a charge of unlawfully preventing his daughter Martha from attending the Colony school last September.

The charge was made when she was 15 but she is now 16 and legally not required to attend school. The Hutterite faith maintains that children should not attend school after age 15.

Publicity Backed

Calgary (CP) — The president-elect of the Alberta Medical Association said Tuesday he doesn't regard the publishing of medical care payments to doctors as an invasion of privacy.

"Any good citizen has the right to know if he's getting his money's worth," said Dr. C. J. Varvis of Edmonton, who becomes president in September.

He told a news conference, however, that the government could use doctors as whipping boys if medical costs get high — quoting gross figures and confusing them with net amounts.

OMAHA — If 22-year-old Mark Inserra hadn't had a witness, he might never have convinced police what actually happened: His car was struck by a runaway bowling ball. The witness said he saw what even Inserra couldn't figure out — a 16-pound bowling ball came rattling down a hill and smashed into the side of the car, causing more than $100 damage. Nobody claimed the ball.

HURTIG
. . . pre-long-hair days

MONCTON — Publisher Mel Hurtig of Edmonton, a founding member of the Committee for an Independent Canada, refused to sign Moncton's guest book Tuesday after Mayor L. C. Jones reportedly commented on the length of the visitor's hair. Hurtig said in an interview he walked out at the guest book signing ceremony after an exchange with the mayor. He reported the mayor said he didn't believe "anything I might have to say." "I asked him: "Why?" "He said: 'I don't believe anybody whose ears I can't see.' "

GREENWOOD, S.C. — Strom Thurmond, 69-year-old Republican senator from South Carolina, and his wife Nancy, a 24-year-old former South Carolina beauty queen, became the parents of a seven-pound, 11-ounce girl Tuesday. Thurmond said mother and baby "are doing fine."

NEW YORK — The Duchess of Windsor said Tuesday she thinks hot pants "aren't so hot," and the duke dubbed them "ridiculous." The duchess, who wore a knee-length jersey blue dress and a blue cotton coat, said hot pants are permissible "on a tennis court or out in the country." The 75-year-old duke is in New York for his annual medical checkup.

TORONTO — Two Toronto architects have proposed building a $1,000 million flating airport on Lake Ontario as an alternative to a new land-based international airport in the Toronto area. The architects, James Crang and George Boake, unveiled their plans for the world's first floating airport before city officials Tuesday.

THE WEATHER

Skies will be generally sunny over the interior and southwestern B.C. today but rain and gale-force southeasterly winds are expected to reach the northern B.C. coast today as the next major Pacific storm moves toward the coast. Rain will spread over Vancouver Island to the south coast tonight. The strong southwesterly flow of cool Pacific air behind the front will give showers to coastal areas Thursday.

Mind 'Diseased'

CRANBROOK (CP) — A Vancouver psychiatrist said Tuesday he had examined Dale Merle Nelson and reached the conclusion that Nelson was suffering a "disease of the mind."

Dr. Robert Halliday was testifying as the first witness for the defence in Nelson's non-capital murder trial in British Columbia Supreme Court.

He is charged in the deaths of Tracy Wasyk, 7, and Catherine St. Amand, 8, two of eight persons brutally slain last Sept. 5 in the West Creston area of southeastern B.C.

NDPer Wants More Respect For Women

OTTAWA (CP) — The government was challenged in the Commons Tuesday to show more respect to two significant institutions: Parliament and women.

Both questions were raised by New Democratic Party members during committee-of-the-whole debate on a clause of the government's omnibus reorganization bill that would give the government arbitrary power to create up to five new secretaries of state without the approval of Parliament.

Doug Rowland (NDP—Selkirk) was most concerned that the government would be able to adjust its structure without comment from the opposition, while Grace MacInnis (NDP—Vancouver-Kingsway) wanted assurance that one of the proposed ministries would be designated to guard women's rights.

The bill would allow the cabinet to establish up to five ministries to develop policies in specific areas, such as housing, over a flexible period of time with whatever public service assistance granted to it by the cabinet.

Mr. Rowland said he did not oppose the establishment of such ministries to augment the traditional departments.

MORE CONTROL

"What I should like to know is how an enhanced measure of parliamentary control over the establishment of ministries of state would militate against the beneficial effects. . . .

"Why must every response of this government to a given problem involve the strengthening of the cabinet, and more particularly of the prime minister's office, rather than Parliament?

"That is not efficiency. That is the machine gone mad."

Surely efficiency in a democracy meant more than simply doing a job.

"Surely it implies doing the job that the people want done, and doing it with the full knowledge and understanding of the people."

This in turn implied acting through Parliament wherever possible, so the opposition could criticize and offer alternate solutions for the public to consider.

Mrs. MacInnis, the only female MP, showed her strongest disgust to date at the male political attitude towards women.

Her plea was that one of the ministers of state would be appointed to deal only with the question of implementing the recommendations of the royal commission on the status of women brought down earlier in the year.

Liberal members felt "that women are such suckers that you just have to promise them something and look as though you have some pleasant surprise waiting for them and they will do anything for them," said MacInnis.

"Women are getting tired of eating out of the hands of the government. Their frame of mind is to bite that hand that is extended to them unless there is something in it besides empty promises."

PENSIONS DISCUSSED

Earlier in the day members dealt with a section of the wide-ranging bill that would adjust the public service pension scheme.

Clauses were given committee approval that would allow full pensions to be paid to public servants 55 years old who retired or were dismissed with 30 years service, and partial pensions to persons over 50 who left the public service either forcedly or voluntarily.

Also passed was a clause allowing public servants of deputy minister rank with 10 years service to remain in their pension plan after leaving by paying both employer and employee shares until they were 65.

Chief government whip Lloyd Francis accused Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) of introducing a motion that would encourage malingering when Mr. Knowles urged that anyone forced to retire over 50 get a full pension—based on two per cent of earnings over his best six salary years times the number of years service—instead of having deductions for years served under 30.

Mr. Francis said an employee wishing to retire would be encouraged to make himself obnoxious enough to be dismissed.

SEEN AS COSTLY

Treasury Board President C. M. Drury said the proposed amendment would cost too much, and it was defeated with all government members opposed and all opposition members in favor.

Mr. Drury said the retirement plan would not be used to increase the normal number of government dismissals.

In face of opposition claims that the deputy minister pension extension would create a privileged position for these senior public servants, Mr. Drury said they were designed to permit "a greater degree of interchangeability" of senior executives between the public and private sectors.

"This prevents the public service from becoming too ingrown, too out of touch with what is happening outside. . . ."

New Policies Shadowed by Leadership

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — With all the publicity being focused on the leadership campaign, little public attention is being given to New Democratic Party policies —which will be allotted more discussion time than the leaders when the party holds its convention here next month.

With the campaign in full swing for the leadership, the nearly 500 resolutions being submitted from local riding associations and member organizations are well out of the spotlight this time.

This is in sharp contrast to the 1969 convention in Winnipeg when there was no leadership contest, and policy matters represented the over-riding issue.

Also, the Winnipeg convention created more excitement on policy issues because each resolution was processed through open workshops that could be packed by certain elements or factions within the party.

This time, all the resolutions will be processed by a 60-member committee, appointed by the party's federal council. They will eliminate, condense, rewrite and approve until the resolutions are boiled down to manageable proportions, perhaps 50 to 70 of them. Then they will come before the 2,000 official delegates for a decision.

NO WORKSHOPS

There won't be any workshops here. Instead, 14 hours will be devoted to policy discussion by the full convention.

Many of the resolutions submitted by local associations are similar, and the committee will be expected to eliminate duplication and produce single resolutions that cover the various viewpoints.

This will not be difficult in areas where there is obvious unanimity, such as advocating an end to the Vietnam war, the establishment of day-care centres and more open abortion laws.

While the initial resolutions on Quebec and Confederation contain little controversy, the committee is expected to devote a good deal of time to preparing a final resolution that won't be open to misinterpretation in the next general election campaign. Several party officials have described this as one of the most delicate subjects facing the convention.

A booklet containing some 200 resolutions has been sent out to delegates for study. And another 267 will be processed before the convention opens April 21.

The resolutions committee will begin meeting here behind closed doors April 18 under the co-chairmanship of Marion Bryden of Toronto and Robert Cliche of St. Joseph de Beauce, Que.

The final resolutions will come before the full convention April 21, and they will dominate discussions until the night of April 23 when the leadership candidates will address the convention.

Balloting on the successor to retiring T. C. Douglas will begin at 2 p.m. Saturday April 24.

Park Advocates for Nitinat Depicted as 'Lunatic Fringe'

Howard McDiarmid (SC—Alberni) told the legislature Tuesday the people who want the Nitinat Triangle included in the boundaries of the Long Beach national park speak for the "lunatic fringe" of the environmentalist movement.

McDiarmid said the area has no recreational value. And he urged Recreation and Conservation Minister Ken Kiernan to ignore pleas to keep loggers out of the area.

The Socred backbencher singled out Ken Farquharson, the head of B.C.'s Sierra Club, as advocating the "sheerest kind of nonsense." The Sierra Club had opposed logging in the area.

The true recreational value in the Nitinat Triangle is in the beach area, McDiarmid said. He proposed that a trail be built along the beach and a two-mile conical region surrounding the mouths of rivers in the area be protected from logging.

"No one in his right mind is going to want to penetrate inland from the beach," he said. "This particular area of Vancouver Island is as rugged as any African jungle."

McDiarmid said the lakes there are brown with cedarwater, cold, ugly and choked with brush. And he accused those who want the area included in the park as being city dwellers who would be the first to want out if they were flown in and let down to explore the terrain.

★ ★ ★

McDiarmid said timber there is worth $20 million in stumpage fees alone, notwithstanding corporation and income taxes that would result from logging.

Because the area is relatively free from snow, it is ideal for winter logging, McDiarmid said. Most logging there would be done in the winter because the companies operating under the government's sustained yield policy would need a winter area.

McDiarmid added that the Nootka sustained yield unit is already over-logged.

Those who want to prevent logging in the area are doing the cause of environmentalism a disservice, he said.

AGENT IN DUNCAN

He Weds, Taxes, Pops Up at Death

SANDS
. . . 'never boring'

DUNCAN — When Lyman Sands, 45, was a a young man he thought he knew "pretty well everything." Now, realizing the contrary, he does pretty well everything.

He's Duncan's government agent, for one thing.

But he's also district registrar for births and deaths, marriage commissioner, registrar of voters, provincial collector, registrar of small claims court, county court and Supreme Court, and is automatically in charge of the motor-vehicle licence department for the Chemainus, Malahat and Lake Cowichan areas.

Actually Sands is slowing down. When he was government agent in Atlin 13 years ago — where he first began working for the government some 25 years ago — he held in addition to all these the jobs of coroner, mining recorder, gold commissioner and official administrator.

But Sands doesn't feel harried. "My job is never boring and there is always something new cropping up that creates a bit of a challenge."

Of the 191 marriages performed in 1969 and 229 in 1970 within the Cowichan Valley Sands conducted 95. The birthrate has risen from 416 to 454 in those years as well as the deathrate from 157 to 168.

"Contrary to common belief, a justice of peace or a judge cannot perform the marriage ceremony," Sands said. By his appointment as marriage commissioner, Sands said he is the only other person empowered to conduct the ceremony outside of church clergy in the area.

As well as keeping the provincial voters list up to date in the Cowichan-Malahat electoral district and setting up special registration centres in the event of an election, he also collects land and school taxes in unorganized areas.

Decision in Week On Teacher Hearing

DUNCAN — A second department of education investigation was held here Tuesday into an incident where a Cowichan school teacher is alleged to have struck and injured a 14-year-old student.

The nine-hour public hearing was conducted by a board of reference set up by the department.

Members were: chairman Kenneth Fawcus, Vancouver lawyer; T. M. Chalmers, also of Vancouver, representing the B.C. Teachers' Federation; and Fred Gingell of Ladner, representing the B.C. School Trustees' Association.

The board will determine if the Cowichan school board was justified in dismissing teacher Louis Trapler, 38, of Duncan, after he allegedly struck and injured Joseph Cook, of Westholme, at Mount Prevost Junior Secondary Jan. 26.

The board will submit its recommendation within a week to the council of public instruction.

A closed hearing was held by a three-man committee set up by the department of education on Feb. 15 but failed to reach a unanimous decision. The school board then appealed to the council of public instruction for another investigation. The board of references' decision does not have to be unanimous.

A charge of assault causing bodily harm against Trapler has been laid by the student's father, Nicholas Cook. Trapler was remanded until April 30 in Duncan provincial court Monday after pleading not guilty.

Magic-Making Rat Race Refugee

By PAT MUNSON

The magic market is a worldwide affair whose shareholders are people like Al LaCoste of McDonald Park Road, North Saanich, an accomplished magician known to audiences here and in Calgary as Alla.

In private life, Al LaCoste is a self-employed car upholsterer who came to the Saanich Peninsula from Calgary last year to escape "the rat race."

On stage, resplendent in red silk hat and swirling cape, he is a professional entertainer who had given shows since 1962 and, while president of the Calgary Magic Circle, won the western zone trophy of the International Brotherhood of Magicians.

Increasing leisure time and the boost given to entertainers by Ed Sullivan on television has resulted in an upsurge of interest says LaCoste. Membership in the worldwide brotherhood has doubled over a 10-year period.

'NOTHING NEW'

But although there are millions of magical effects and tricks, there is really "nothing new in magic, just new ways of doing it."

LaCoste himself possesses a considerably library of magic, three books of which describe effects achieved with "silks." He has invested thousands of dollars in apparatus and is at the moment perfecting an effect which came from Germany with instructions in German.

Professionals avoid the word "trick" explains LaCoste, who describes himself as an illusionist. There are also conjurors and those who do pocket magic which includes sleight-of-hand and jugglery effects known in the trade as prestidigitation.

A cheerful vigorous man who can, with equal zest, produce silver dollars from the ear of his listener or serenade an audience with music produced on his handsaw (by means of a violin bow) LaCoste has found an apt pupil in his youngest son, D'Arcy.

At 12, D'Arcy is on his way to becoming Canada's youngest ventriloquist and with his dummy, Jose, is part of his father's act.

Father and son practise effects and "patter" at home and, when the occasion arises, on visiting magicians.

GREAT PARTIES

"You should see this house when we have a party," says Mrs. LaCoste who manages to maintain an air of domesticity amidst the paraphernalia of magic.

LaCoste developed his own version of a well-known illusion called "Spiderella" to win the western zone magician's trophy. In this effect, a spider web is suspended about 18 inches above a flight of stairs. In the middle of the web (fashioned of tinsel rope) hangs a spider with apparently disembodied human face.

LaCoste does not encourage people who ask how his efforts are achieved. "Just be entertained; don't try to find out how it is done."

Part of the Hey Presto! success is audience involvement. Everyone has a bit of natural ham and it takes very little coaching to produce plenty of reaction when the volunteer finds a broken egg dripping from his fingers!

Occasionally an effect backfires, such as the time an uncoached volunteer watched with unbelieving horror as Alla scissored his tie to pieces.

Although the tie was magically restored, the volunteer was not. "Smart alec," he muttered as he stalked offstage amidst audience laughter.

A magician is traditionally supposed to appeal to children but LaCoste finds that adults from the largest and most interested part of his corwd.

"But some people don't like to admit they have been fooled."

LaCoste . . . big in magic market

Little Man With the Big Beat Still Tops

By JOHN CUNNINGHAM

TORONTO (CP) — A small, wiry Buddy Rich slouches down in the command position behind one of the most widely heard jazz drum outfits in the world.

A cigarette dangles from the corner of his mouth as he begins, almost carelessly at first, to work a stick over the top cymbal of his hi-hat.

He gains momentum but little volume, and soon he's executing a complicated cymbal rythm with one hand that all but the most skilled of drummers could only do with two.

There is a solid rim shot and a kick beat on the bass drum, and the 14-piece Buddy Rich band is off for 45 minutes of solid, unrelenting contemporary jazz.

It only takes about two bars of an up-tempo arrangement from the group's new album, Keep the Customers Satisfied, to see how Buddy Rich has survived nearly five decades in the highly competitive world of professional jazz.

As one Toronto entertainment critic put it during his recent appearance here, Buddy Rich presides over his young band "like a judge at an inquisition."

For after the band is under way, the drummer — who has topped every jazz poll in the world during his career — appears to be concentrating with his every fibre to provide a solid, yet tasteful pace for his musicians to follow.

GEARED TO HIS TASTE

The band, made up of highly skilled musicians whose average age is 23, is definitely a band geared to a drummer's taste.

But even Rich will be the first to admit he needs that big brass sound provided by his group.

"Now, I would by lying to say that I don't understand that people come to a club to hear Buddy Rich. But after they've heard me, they hear my band and some good jazz. We all know I play well. I'm a very fine drummer. But if it was just me, I would play alone and keep all the money."

Rich, 54, who has been playing drums since his parents bought him an outfit when he was two, has no intention of slowing down the hectic pace that took him 175,000 miles 11 different countries last year. The fact that he led the 1971 Playboy All Stars' polls is a good indication that he's managed to keep pace with the times.

Despite his long years of travel and exhausting performances, Rich said in a harried interview between sets at the Imperial Room of the Royal York Hotel here that he still loves his work.

"It's never been hard work," he said. "If it got to be hard work I'd quit. This is the only business in the world where you get to see the world and have fun doing it."

LOOKS TO FUTURE

It was with Joe Marsala in 1938 that his jazz career fully got under way. He later appeared with Bunny Berigan, Artie Shaw, Tommy Dorsey, Benny Carter and Harry James before forming his own bands.

Rich said emphatically that he was never tempted to change his style drastically during the years when rock 'n' roll began to eclipse jazz in general popularity.

"Jazz has always been here. It's the people who've left it, not the other way around. It's our fault that Americans are barbarians and don't realize that jazz is the only true American art form."

PRETTY PATROLWOMAN NOT A PUSHOVER

DENVER (AP) — Ann Thompson's the prettiest thing in Denver's police department, but she's no pushover.

Patrolman Thompson, working with a radar speed unit, flagged down a motorist and said the one-sided conversation went like this:

"Lady, if you give me that ticket, this is what's going to happen:

"I'll lose my licence . . .

"I won't be able to drive my wife to work . . .

"If my wife can't get to work, she'll lose her job . . .

"We'll lose the house . . ."

The blue-eyed blonde apologized and handed him the ticket.

And, if it had been her husband?

"I'd write the ticket," she said, "but I'd hand it to my partner to give to my husband."

Statue Returned

Centennial Directory Sparks Legal Action

SASKATOON (CP) — Poor binding of the British Columbia centennial directory published by Western Canada Directories Ltd. of Saskatoon ruined the company's name in B.C., Harry Lyone, the firm's president, testified Tuesday in Court of Queen's Bench.

He made the statement during the second day of hearing in the multiple action suit involving his firm, Midwest Litho Ltd. and the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool's Modern Press.

The action, being heard by Mr. Justice A. L. Sirois, started Monday with Western Canada suing Midwest and Midwest suing Modern Press and Western Canada.

POOR BINDINGS

It was launched by Western Canada against Midwest after copies of the B.C. and Manitoba Centennial directories fell apart because of allegedly poor bindings.

Lyone told the court three or four years of groundwork went "down the drain and the goodwill shot out of the window" when the B.C. books were returned to his office from Pacific Coast subscribers.

Asked about their condition when returned, Lyone said they broke into pieces because they were not put together properly.

He said he discovered the poor condition of the books in a telephone conversation with R. H. Gillespie, executive assistant to the B.C. centennial committee's general manager.

FORM LETTER

Lyone said he then sent a form letter to all subscribers asking them to return the books.

Because of the situation, he said he had been unable to do business under the Western Canada name and has started on a new B.C. project under the name Lyone Publications.

Of the 100 publications handled by his firm, it was the first problem experienced in binding.

Lyone said his firm had been doing business with Midwest for the last 25 to 30 years and up to now "their performance has been 100 per cent."

Asked how much the venture had cost his firm, Lyone said it probably was a $100,000 gamble but he was unable to provide an exact cost breakdown.

He said the first small run of both the Manitoba and B.C. books was a "sample, if it went well then we would have ordered a rerun."

If the B.C. book had sold well, his firm anticipated selling between 7,000 and 10,000 across Canada, Lyone told the court.

The civil action continues.

SUMMER EMPLOYMENT FOR STUDENTS

Nearly 3,400 jobs are open to post-secondary Canadian students under the new International Student Summer Employment Programme . . . working holidays in Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, The Netherlands, Norway, Sweden, and the United Kingdom. Low-cost travel arrangements are also available through three Canadian student organizations.

Students must agree to work for at least two months beginning mid-May or early June. The work week is generally longer in Europe and, although wages are often lower than Canadian standards, in many cases room and board is provided.

To be eligible, students
☐ must be Canadian citizens
☐ must be registered at/or attending full-time a college, university or technical institute
☐ must be 18 years or more by their departure date (21 for Belgium)
☐ must apply by April 19, 1971.

Although a working knowledge of the language of the host country would be helpful, a very basic ability to communicate will often be sufficient. If in doubt, inquire further.

APPLY NOW! As final selection will be made by the host country, earlier applications will receive preferential consideration. Make your inquiries at your Student Placement Office, or at your nearest Canada Manpower Centre.

CAN PICKETS SOLVE SOCIAL PROBLEMS?

Labor Leaders Discuss Their Role

TRADE UNIONS: lower-middle class repositories of false consciousness which leads to an insane preoccupation with bread and butter.

(Dictionary for the Disenchanted, by Bernard Rosenberg, Harper's, December, 1970)

By BOB MITCHELL

Labor unions have always been regarded as the backbone of the political left in Canada because they alone are in a position to challenge the economic strength of the Canadian capitalist class.

But are the unions and their leaders really committed to radical social change?

Most of the social problems this country faces in the 1970s go far beyond the limited scope of labor-management relations. They won't be solved at the negotiating table or on the picket line.

SLOT MACHINE

The Times recently interviewed several labor leaders on the subject of social change. It soon became evident through talking to them that most rank-and-file unionists believe their interests and society in general will be best served through the preservation of the status quo.

In North America, says John Fryer, executive secretary of the B.C. Government Employees' Union, unions serve the function of a workingman's slot machine:

"You put your dues in the slot, you pull the fruit machine handle and you get better wages out of the bottom. That's really what most people belong to unions for. They do not belong to unions to change the world. It would be naive in the extreme to think that they did."

If that sounds shamelessly materialistic, then it should be remembered most unions and their members are still looking over their shoulder at an era of bad wages, when a decent wage was the objective of every union.

SOME SUCCESS

Larry Ryan, secretary-treasurer of the Victoria Labor Council:

"If we didn't have this identity it would show, I think, that we'd failed. The whole premise of the trade union movement was to build into the lives of our members certain elements of income security, improved working conditions. We have achieved this."

It would be wrong to assume union leaders are unaware of, or unconcerned about the rank-and-file's apparent complacency and conservatism toward, for example, the problems of this country's youth-unemployed-welfare population.

"Now there are some people within the trade union movement who have a little bit of social consciousness, who do things for the other fellow," said Murray Drew, president of local 1-118 of International Woodworkers of America. "The majority don't. So long as he's making a living, as long as he's comfortable, he couldn't care less about the other guy."

NOT TO BLAME

Larry Ryan thought the unions were not to blame for the situation:

"It might really be the fault of the educational system and the value system of the society which it inculcates into the population."

Someof the labor spokesmen were asked why in British Columbia, the most unionized province in Canada (almost 50 per cent of the work force around 1955), a pro-labor government has never been elected. Why, in fact, do dues-paying unionists vote Social Credit in defiance of their leaders, many of whom are active New Democratic Party supporters?

Murray Drew: "I think basically — and I'm not talking about the IWA in this instance — a lot of unions are pretty conservative. I think a lot of the members are pretty conservative too. I don't think the working man really has grabbed hold of the NDP or really wants to be a socialist because he's had things so good for a number of years that he just doesn't want to lose that which he's got."

INTIMIDATION

Ray Haynes, secretary of the B.C. Federation of Labor, said workers were intimidated by Bill 42, passed in 1961, which made it illegal for union dues to be contributed to the political campaign of an individual or party.

"That had a psychological effect, that legislation, in fact, the psychological effect of that legislation, is as bad or maybe worse than the legislation itself, because it perpetuated this idea that labor and politics don't mix."

Haynes also said some union leaders have found it doesn't pay to become too involved in non-union activities because their members may not approve.

There's something painfully ironic about the admission that unions, after 25, 40 or 50 years of struggles, have come full circle and now are an integral if reluctant component of their original adversary, the establishment.

SOCIAL ACTION

John Fryer, who left the post of research director for the Canadian Labor Congress in 1969 to take over the government employees' union, is one leader who is trying to do something about the situation.

Last year Fryer and several young unionists from eastern Canada formed what became known as the Reform Caucus with the avowed aims of helping unions regain their relevancy by getting involved in social action, and of pushing for the development of a distinctively Canadian labor movement that would deal with problems of Canadian people.

The caucus saw labor leadership as hamstrung by an age problem, and with the age problem went an attitude problem, Fryer said.

The situation originated during those years just prior to and immediately after the Second World War when most of the mass union organizing took place in Canada. The men who took over leadership of these new unions were relatively young, in their late 20s and early 30s, Fryer said.

"These men still run the labor movement today. The generation that grew up in the 1950s and the 1960s find themselves stymied because there's nowhere to go within the trade union movement because the leaders are still too young — they're old in our judgment — but they're still too young to go. They're in their fifties and they've got 10 or 15 years to go.

CATALYST ROLE

The Reform Caucus is proposing an active role for unions as catalysts of social change, and this is one area of conflict with traditionalists. Up until now in the NDP-labor alliance it was always held that labor was responsible for economic gains and funding the party, while the party was responsible for changing the world.

"Now we don't buy that as a group," Fryer said. "We say the labor movement itself should change the world, not the NDP. They can help if they like. Our job is to change the world right here."

A major area of disagreement between the Reform Caucus and the labor establishment is autonomy for Canadian unions within the structure of the parent international. Here's what Fryer had to say about it recently.

KEPT IN POWER

"We felt that even when union leaders in Canada become very unpopular they are maintained in power because of the international union connection. They way they do this is they are elected at international conventions by American delegates, and it doesn't really matter what the Canadian fellows think. Now this didn't mean that we wanted a Canadian labor movement autonomous from the United States and that we wanted to get rid of the international link, it didn't mean anything of the sort.

"But we felt there was a real case for an democratization of the Canadian section of the American labor movement to permit greater mobility and to permit the development of a distinctive Canadian trade union movement that dealt with the problems of the Canadian people and of the Canadian society.

CAN THEY ADAPT?

"And it goes as simple as having your own newspaper in Canada, having your own research staff, not having guys coming up from Detroit or Chicago or Washington, D.C., or having the paper printed in New York City with 25 pages of American news and half a page of what happened in Canada."

The greatest organizing drive by unions in the decade ahead will be in the service industries which now employ about 60 per cent of the Canadian work force. A big question in the minds of some labor leaders is will the unions now in existence be able to adapt themselves to the needs of the low-paid white and blue-collar workers who until now have been outside the scope of industrial unions?

"We need a new structure, a new model to deal with the post-industrial labor force," said Larry Ryan. "The models we're using, some of them are pre-industrial, such as the construction trades, so I think this is going to tax the imagination of the leaders of the American and Canadian trade union movements."

The six-month-old strike by workers at the Sandringham Private Hospital is symptomatic of the kind of resistance service industry workers may encounter in their efforts to secure basic collective bargaining rights. It's a small strike by most standards, but since it started at the end of September it has brought about the gradual mobilization of support not only from local unions but also a wide segment of the general public.

Jim Beaubien, a member of the Hospital Employees' Union and the man who last year helped organize workers at four private hospitals — three of which negotiated contracts — thinks the industrial unions will have to undergo considerable changes in attitude to be successful on the service industry front.

BIGNESS SCARES THEM

"People are interested in the service area in organization but I think they're somewhat scared by the image that big unions have.

"They consider themselves maybe professionals, they're getting paid less than janitors, so the approach to an organization has to take that into consideration."

Beaubien said unions as they now are set up are not really ready to listen to suggestions for reform because their top-down structure is essentially authoritarian.

JOINT STUDY

"It's almost impossible to think about reform if you haven't got people in your power structure who are willing to sit down and try to really listen. And they're not willing to listen because a lot of those reform ideas threaten anything that exists, and the people in the leadership are comfortable with what exists, that's why they're leaders.

Recently Beaubien was a member of a union-management committee at St. Joseph's Hospital which decided to undertake a survey of employees' attitudes toward their work, the union and hospital management.

A University of Victoria psychology student prepared the questionnaire and the university agreed to provide free computer time for analysis of the responses. Information pertaining to the union would be handed over to the union, and likewise for information pertaining to management.

The provincial department of industrial development, trade and commerce was persuaded to underwrite half the estimated cost of $2,000, and the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service was willing to share in the cost on condition approval was obtained from the union head office. That approval never came, and the project died.

"What really annoyed me later was that a directive came out from the office to all unions that they should be very careful about getting sucked in by management into attitude surveys that weaken the union's position," Beaubien said.

"I think the unions are scared of taking advantage of technical knowhow, of the developments in human relationships which are really important.

"Why should you pay someone $1,000 a month to do a structured type of job? If you're willing to take a few people, help them develop, then give them the power to do things, then you can have your organization quickly. But if you think you're going to have to do everything yourself, then you'll never have an organization."

John Fryer talked about the effects of the economic crisis from which Canada now is said to be emerging:

OIL FOR MACHINE

"The whole of society is in jeopardy because all those people who lost their jobs were part of this consumption-oriented society we live in. Not only were they earning $100 or $200 a week — that was insignificant — they were carrying three, four, five, ten, twenty thousand dollars of debt. That's what was oiling the machine."

Beaubien said the federal government for several years has been subsidizing farmers not to grow things, but has not yet come to the realization that it must begin to pay people to stay home and not go to work. Many people, including some provincial welfare ministers still see a job as a form of self-worth, while social assistance still carries the stigma of worthlessness.

"Everything could be automated," Beaubien said. "The only reason it isn't is we wouldn't know what to do with all the extra people. What is the position of unions on automation? You're talking about social change and whether unions facilitate it. The unions have always struggled against it, by keeping an oiler on trains.

Crime Syndicates Get Cut on Exams

By TAKASHI OKA

TOKYO (NYT) — The annual frenzy of examination time in Japan — cram schools, angling for introductions to college officials, contributions to schools to assure students' admissions — has been accompanied this year by a scandal, a murder and widespread questioning of the nation's values.

Because of the nerve-racking competition to get into government or private schools and universities — and especially medical schools — entrance examinations are printed under maximum security in 48 of the country's 66 state prisons.

★ ★ ★

Several weeks ago, the police, investigating what appeared to be a gangland murder in Osaka, uncovered a syndicate that stole medical school exams from Osaka prison and sold them, mainly to wealthy doctors eager to get their children into medical school, at prices up to 10 million yen, $28,000.

Since the scandal erupted in the press, editorials and letters columns have been filed with protests over corruption in the prison system, the alleged mercenary nature of the medical profession and the "examination hell" that subjects most ambitious youngsters to a long, difficult road to competitive exams from kindergarten through university.

As the police, prison authorities and medical schools have pressed their investigations, details of the scandal have been unfolding in the press just at the time when the examination season is in swing in Japan, where the school year ends in March and begins in April.

★ ★ ★

On Jan. 30, the body of a man who had been strangled and stabbed was found in an expensive car parked near a Korean restaurant in Osaka. The man was identified as Kang Wook Sang, a Korean, and the police discovered that he was the ringleader of an exam-stealing syndicate.

The syndicate employed model convicts to steal examination forms, bribed one of the prison's wardens to get the forms out of the prison and used reputable persons, including doctors, teachers and businessmen, as brokers to introduce parents of prospective applicants.

★ ★ ★

During one year, exam forms were hidden in a volleyball and tossed outside the prison yard to a syndicate member.

In 1970, the syndicate apparently ran out of accomplices inside the prison and sent two members to scale the prison walls, break into the printing factory and steal the examination forms.

Two subjects, however — English and mathematics — were missing from the forms, and none of the applicants buying the stolen forms that year are believed to have gotten into the schools they desired.

For both government and private schools and universities, entrance is by competitive examination. For the top schools, there are from three to five times as many applicants as there are spaces.

The competition to enter medical schools is especially severe.

★ ★ ★

Parents send their children to special cram schools to prepare them for the exams and hire tutors to coach them on weekends. They try to get introductions to college professors and officials who they hope will spell the difference between acceptance and rejection should their children's exam results be borderline.

They inquire discreetly how much in contributions to the school would be sufficient to get their children in.

These tactics will not usually work in the case of government universities, where the entrance fee is a straight 4,000 yen, or $11, and annual tuition is only 12,000 yen, or $33.

But in private institutions, even the most reputable, monetary contributions can get an applicant in if he is a borderline case.

Police Probe Report to Get 'Dusty End'

MONTREAL (CP)—It is one week since the Quebec police commission unveiled its report on the Montreal police strike of Oct. 7, 1969, and if reaction so far is indicative, the ultimate fate of the document will be to gather dust.

The policemen's union leader brushed it off as "mild," city hall officials had no comment and newspapers were openly scornful.

Rioting and looting broke out during the 16-hour walkout and a provincial police corporal was killed by sniper fire. The walkout occurred during a contract dispute between the city and the police.

The commission's major recommendation was the establishment of an auxiliary police force in case of another strike by members of the regular force. But it did not specify who should make up the emergency squad and avoided speculation on the reaction of the Montreal Police Brotherhood to the "scabs."

The passing of legislation to make police strikes illegal, division of the existing union into two divisions—one for officers and one for constables—and disciplinary action against six officers were also recommended.

SETS A CONDITION

With reference to the last suggestion, however, the commission went on to say that penalties should be imposed only if the police department's disciplinary committee agreed.

Guy Marcil, president of the brotherhood and first to comment on the report, said it did not constitute a severe attack on the union or its membership.

Probably not much attention would be paid to it, he said, because both the civil administration and the union consider it time to "move away from Oct. 7—a dark page in history which we hope will never be repeated."

He was adamant that the union would never accept the recommendation that it be split into two groups and was critical of the commission for making the suggestion.

"They had a mandate to investigate the moral conduct of Montreal policemen on Oct. 6, 7 and 8—not to pry into the way the brotherhood works.

"The union has been around for nearly 30 years and there have never been any complaints."

HITS RECOMMENDATION

With regard to the commission's pinpointing of six men whom it said spearheaded the walkout, Mr. Marcil commented:

"When the commission made its report, it didn't have the policemen's records. I'm sure the men's records will speak for themselves and the city will just turn the black page over as Mr. Lucien Saulnier has suggested."

Mr. Saulnier was chairman of the city's executive committee at the time of the police strike and now is chairman of the executive committee of the Montreal Urban Community.

The union leader would not discuss what action the brotherhood might take if the six men were disciplined, but he emphasized they would be backed "to the end."

Marcel St. Aubin, director of the Montreal police department, refused comment on the report and city hall authorities said they could not comment because they had not read it.

The report put even Justice Minister Jerome Choquette in an awkward position. Its recommendation that police be denied the right to strike contradicted another inquiry commission finding that they should be allowed to strike.

The first report, written by Judge Yves Prevost, said policemen might as well be allowed to strike because they would do so anyway if they felt like it.

MINISTER SILENT

So far, Mr. Choquette has refused to comment on either recommendation.

At present, Article 93 of the Labor Code forbids police and firemen to strike.

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, MARCH 31, 1971 —PAGE 45

'Irresponsibility' Charged in Acara Firing

By BRUCE YEMEN and PETER McNELLY

Liberal Leader Pat McGeer and Recretation Minister Ken Kiernan clashed in the legislature Tuesday night over the firing of a government scientist who warned that a B.C. Hydro dam may be threatening Kootenay Lake fisheries.

McGeer said the firing earlier this month was "scientific irresponsibility of the worst kind" and accused Kiernan of a "conflict of interest" between his duties as a B.C. hydro director and as minister of conservation.

Kiernan accused McGeer of "crucifying" the scientist in question, Dr. A. H. Acara, for purposes of political gain and rejected McGeer's conflict of interest charges as "a hollow mockery and completely unsustained by facts."

McGeer gave a lengthy review of the case, including pointing out that Acara's scientific project at Kootenay Lake was financed by B.C. Hydro.

McGeer repeated earlier charges that Acara was fired for warning that the Duncan Dam may be causing the problems with fish in Kootenay Lake, including death of a million whitefish and some trout.

He suggested Acara was dismissed because he failed in his task which was "to whitewash the Duncan Dam."

"We don't know what poisons are leeching out from that rotting vegetation," McGeer said of the reservoir behind the dam.

He called for the reinstatement of Acara and his research team at Kootenay Lake.

Kiernan, who said he neither personally hired nor fired Acara, charged that Acara had been "very unscientific on a number of occasions."

"A scientist presumably comes to his decisions after making tests, not before," Kiernan said.

NO REPORT

He said the fish and wildlife branch had been unable to get Acara to compile a report based on data collected at Kootenay Lake in spite of strong efforts to get him to finish the job.

Kiernan said his reaction on hearing of the continuing problem was to express wonderment that Acara hadn't been fired sooner.

He said he didn't want to see Acara "belabored" on the issue in the press and told McGeer:

"You crucified that man because you thought you could establish some conflict of interest in my thinking."

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett said he accepted Kiernan's explanation and said he had not chosen to debate the issue because he cannot professionally evaluate Acara's data.

Barrett said McGeer had made "unfair accusations" against Kiernan.

"The Liberal leader, for better or for worse, had decided to make it a matter for attack against the government," he said.

But Barrett said Acara's hypothesis needs a thorough study.

MORE STUDIES

He said Acara has pointed out that the B.C. Research Council study of carbon dioxide levels in Kootenay Lake was not done at times which would disprove his thesis.

Kiernan said this was one time when he and the Opposition Leader were in full accord, and he announced that on Monday he had ordered continuing carbon dioxide studies "throughout the season in the whole area."

McGeer outlined the history of Acara's work with the fish and wildlife branch from 1965 until he was fired on March 5, 1971, with two hours' notice.

He said government press releases suggested that Acara would be finished at the end of April, when in fact it was only his salary that was being continued through next month.

He said the government further suggested Acara was incompetent and was being fired because he had not completed his work. How could he, asked McGeer, when the memorandum which told him he had been fired ordered him to surrender all his data to the department.

HYDRO FUNDS

Acara, McGeer said, was hired in 1965 to study how to save the Kokanee salmon fishery in Kootenay Lake which was to be severely damaged by construction of B.C. Hydro's Duncan Dam above the lake.

McGeer noted that it was significant that Hydro had put up the more than $500,000 needed for the project. This was done because Hydro recognized that its dam was the cause of damage to Kootenay Lake's fishery.

Duncan Dam was completed in 1967, and work on an artificial spawning channel at Meadow Creek begun. Before the dam was completed, he said, there were 14 million fish in Kootenay Lake in 1965.

The effects of Duncan Dam reduced this number to three million fish, he said.

McGeer quoted E. C. Vernon, chief fisheries officer as having said that Acara was hired only on a temporary basis and that he didn't have the proper qualifications to study trout ecology.

SENSITIVE WORK

"If a man was hired for this sensitive work even though he wasn't qualified, then it seems to me that the B.C. Hydro was putting the fishery under far greater jeopardy than the construction of the dam," McGeer said.

But the fact is that Acara was competent, McGeer added.

He cited references to support his claim that Acara was a "scientific detective" who did creditable work and was considered good in the use of English 10 years before provincial officials suggested he had difficulty in English.

McGeer said he doesn't know whether Acara's theory about the dam is right but his theory was interesting enough to demand further study through a "crash program."

New Oath Of Allegiance Considered

OTTAWA (CP) — Changes in the Citizenship Act, including a new oath of allegiance, are being considered by the government, the Commons broadcasting committee was told Tuesday.

Robert Stanbury, minister without portfolio responsible for citizenship, said no firm decisions have been taken yet.

One suggestion from political parties and citizenship groups was for an oath of allegiance to Canada rather than to the Queen. Immigrants also had trouble with the present oath because of the language used, he said.

Stanbury also said he will not allow opposition by municipal and other levels of government to interfere with his department's grants to grass-roots citizen groups to help them organize.

There would be consultation with other governments but his department would continue to try to bring about collaboration between the government and these groups.

Agriculture Group Urges Food Council

A provincial food council to make recommendations to government on all questions of food production and marketing was urged Tuesday in the report of the legislature's agriculture committee.

The committee, which had been asked to study food prices, also proposed that the agriculture department be renamed the department of food and agriculture.

NEW NAME

The report said the renamed department should be able to "administer all laws of the province with respect to the production, processing, distribution and marketing of food."

The food council should be under the minister of food and agriculture and include other department staff.

The committee also recommended that dairy and grain products be eliminated from the jurisdiction of the proposed Synthetic Food Products Act.

Witnesses before the committee said the Act could result in banning of foods like milk and bread because they contain vitamin additives and other synthetic materials.

The report also called for the bill to be a proclamation bill that would come into effect only by cabinet order.

The committee had been told that federal legislation was coming in this field and that only one set of laws should be required to deal with synthetic foods.

Rail Rapid Transit Advantages Cited

An ounce of preparation today is worth a pound of expense tomorrow in planning for rapid rail transit, says the new Canadian National vice-president for the Pacific region.

A. H. Hart, who is the CN Railway's first appointee to the Vancouver-based post of senior vice-president, met business and government leaders in Victoria Tuesday at receptions at the Empress Hotel.

He agreed the establishment of rail transit is a costly undertaking, especially for a community without population density to ensure maximum return.

ALTERNATIVES

"But look at the alternatives," he remarked, suggesting it is vastly more expensive to create elaborate highway systems and interchanges, parking lots and other auto-oriented amenities in today's cities.

It therefore makes more sense to anticipate rapid rail-transit needs early, rather than pay the higher cost of building such facilities when the need becomes desperate.

Hart said the Go Trains operated jointly by CN and the Ontario government as a fast commuter service in Metro Toronto and along the Lake Ontario shore is a good example of rapid rail transit that works.

COSTS MONEY

It hasn't made any money yet; in fact it costs money to run. But it is cheaper than expanding the highway system.

The vice-president regrets the CN turbo-trains have been less successful than hoped for.

However, the concept is still valid and it remains only for the technology to improve. Hart feels it was an error to wed automobile-type suspension to rigid rails, although he hopes a workable system can be evolved.

In transportation of the future, Hart sees great possibilities in air-cushion type vehicles, particularly in areas that have been considered wasteland such as the frozen Arctic and the unresilient sub-Arctic, where industrial undertakings risk damage to the environment.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to express sincere appreciation to our friends for their sympathy and kindness in the loss of our beloved mother, and grandmother. Special thanks to Dr. J. S. P. Lane, Dr. J. D. Stenstrom, Bishop D. A. G. Rankilor, nurses at the St. Joseph's Hospital, and Mr. Stuart Campbell of Sands Mortuary at Colwood. — Edna Van Dercreek, Dorothy Morley and family.

9 IN MEMORIAM

GREEN—In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Henry George Green, who passed away March 31, 1963.
"In the Garden of Remembrance."
—From his wife, son, daughter-in-law and grandchildren.

GRIFFITHS—In loving memory of our beloved son, Don, who passed away March 31, 1970.
One year has passed since that sad day
When the one we loved was called away.
God took him home, it was His will;
Within our hearts he liveth still.
Little we knew when we woke that morn
The sorrow the day would bring;
The call was sudden, the shock severe.
To part with one we loved so dear.
—Ever remembered by Mom, Dad, Beverley, and Keith and grandparents.

TRELOAR—In loving memory of a dear brother and brother-in-law, Albert, who passed away March 31, 1969.
Today recalls a memory of a dear one gone to rest.
And those that think of him today
Are those that loved him best.
—Ever remembered by Ida, Ett, Fred and Elsie.

BEN FRANKLIN'S UNUSUAL COPY

Benjamin used advertisements for everything and anything. This amusing example from the July 14, 1737, issue of his newspaper, The Pennsylvania Gazette, illustrates his unusual copy:

"TAKEN OUT OF A PEW IN the Church some months since, a Common Prayer Book, bound in red, gilt, and lettered D.F. (Deborah Franklin) on each cover. The who-took-it is desired to open it and read the eighth Commandment, and afterwards return it into the same Pew again, upon whice no further Notice will be taken."

Tonight's Top Television Shows

CABLEVISION 10 PROGRAMS. 7 p.m., Ladies First; 7:30 p.m., Project Travel; 8 p.m., sports series; 8:30 p.m, Victoria Outdoorsmen, Motor Sport Edition; 9 pm., Salute to Flight — In the Beginning, a Wilderness of Air (debut); 9:30 p.m., Our World — Let's Face It.

BASEBALL SPECIAL. 5:30 p.m., Channel 2 and 6. The Montreal Expos meet the Winnipeg Whips farm club in an exhibition match at West Palm Beach, Fla. This game will preempt all regular programming until approximately 8 p.m.

THE MEN FROM SHILOH. 7:30 p.m., Channel 5. (Rerun). It's a Stewart Granger night As Colonel Mackenzie, he investigates the hanging of a man believed to be a cattle rustler. Guest stars are Elizabeth Ashley as the victim's sister and Martha Hyer as the leader of the cattlemen's association. Don Defore and John Larch are also featured.

TO ROME WITH LOVE. 8:30 p.m., Channel 7. (Rerun). This one should be called "My Three Sons" meets "To Rome with Love." The stars of the former — William Demarest as Uncle Charley, Tina Cole as Katie and Don Grady as Robbie — stop off in Rome and get help from the stars of thelatterinfinding Charley's First World War girl friend and in arranging a second honeymoon for Robbie and Katie.

GREAT AMERICAN DREAM MACHINE. 8:30 p.m., Channel 9. Here's your chance to tune in on ethe seamy face and satrical verse of W. H. Auden. Auden reads his updated 1940 poem "The Unknown Citizen," about the dehumanization of man in modern society. Also appearing are Brenda Vaccaro ("Midnight Cowboy") and Robert Klein ("The Owl and the Pussycat").

MEDICAL CENTRE. 9 p.m., Channel 12. (Rerun.) Guest star William Devane portrays the maverick director of a ghetto clinic. The problem is he refused to report his patients to the police. Dr. Joe Gannon (Chad Everett) confronts Devane when he finds him shielding both a 12-year-old drug addict and stabbing victim.

KRAFT MUSIC HALL. 9 p.m., Channel 5. Bette Davis is tonight's hostess for "A Salute to the Oscars" two weeks before the live telecast April 15 of the Academy Awards presentation. Her guests are Frank Gorshin, Michele Lee and Jerry Stiller and Anne Meara. Although only Miss Davis can claim an Oscar in this group, there are plenty of skits and songs for everyone.

FOUR-IN-ONE. 10 p.m., Channel 5. (Rerun). "San Francisco International Airport" stars Lloyd Bridges as the airport manager who discovers a shipment of deadly gas is to be detoned by a frustrated scientist as a protest against the war. James Olsen is guest star.

TONIGHT'S MOVIES

5:30, Channel 12: Wyoming Mail (1950 Western) Alexis Smith, Stephen McNally. This Western tells the story of the men whose job it was to keep the railways safe from mail looters.

8:30, Channel 8: Oliver Twist (British; 1948 Drama) Robert Newton, Alec Guinness. Dickens' classic about an orphan boy struggling against a hostile world.

9:00, Channel 7: Away All Boats (1956 Drama) Jeff Chandler, George Nader. Action fans who like their war movies paced at breakneck speed will go for this one.

11:00, Channel 13: Man of Courage (1934 Drama) Barton Maclane, Lyle Talbot. This banal drama is about a governor who becomes sentimentally involved with a woman jailed for the murder of her husband.

11:30, Channel 7: Charlie Chan at the Circus. (1936 Mystery) Warner Oland, Keye Luke. The wily inspector solves crimes at the midway with the aid of two midgets.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

For years I have been protesting against the tendency of many physicians to allow elderly patients with scattered cancer to go on suffering without adequate medicinal relief. When I ask the doctor why he isn't giving the old patient enough medicine to give relief, he says, "I might give him a habit." I have several answers to this. One is that if the cancer is widely scattered through the man, it is very likely to kill him within two or three months, and he won't have time to develop a habit. Also, even if at the age of, say, 88, he were to develop a habit, that, to my way of thinking, would be immensely better than to let him go on suffering day and night without the help that we could and should give him.

Another point which does not seem to occur to my friend the doctor is that commonly the elderly man who is dying of some pain-producing disease, is largely, or entirely, confined to his bed or his room, and there is almost no chance of his going out and hunting up a pedlar of morphine or heroin; hence, we who are taking care of him can see to it that he does not quickly start running up the dose.

There is another reason today why in many cases we doctors are not giving enough medicine to relieve pain, and this is our fear of criticism. Actually, only once in my life have I felt the need for getting approval and backing. I had a man who, after an injury to his spine, was left with pain so severe that, as he said to me, "I can stand it during the day, but at night I can't sleep with it, and if I can't sleep at night, I can't do my work well and my wife and I will soon be on relief." I immediately wrote to the Bureau of Narcotics, explaining that the man was a brilliant chief engineer of a big company, and I thought it was far better to run the risk of his getting a habit than to ruin him by denying him relief from his severe pain. I got back a kindly letter, saying that the doctor in Washington agreed with me heartily.

★ ★ ★

Another thing that I have often done is that when I have had a patient who much needed a strong-pain-relieving drug, I did not make any charge. This showed that I was not giving the drug for money, but just to help the person. Actually, the strong willed engineer did not get a habit for many years.

ZINNIAS NEED LOVE, LABOR

By HILDA BEASTALL

Not often do we see a really fine showing of zinnias, either in gardens or in late summer and fall shows. With the range of colors and types in today's hybrids it should be possible to put on a complete zinnia flower show if we started the seeds early enough and provided the culture the plants need.

Hilda

In this coastal climate, zinnias are not a natural; but neither are chrysanthemums, roses or gladioli, yet we see shows devoted almost entirely to these flowers.

Knowledge, experience and labor must be put together before the results can be tabled in competition.

Zinnias have a warm country origin, and will do their best if given a sunny open garden spot. But to give the plants a fair start, our slow springs and wet soils demand that we sow the seeds indoors just about the end of March.

With a slightly heated greenhouse, or one attached to the south side of the home, seed can be sown up to April 7.

Set the seeds half an inch apart in seed boxes of sandy soil. They will collapse from the dease called damping-off if seedlings are crowded into wet soil.

Inside of 10 days, have ready flats of well-rotted compost with about one-fifth volume of sand. The mixture should be sun-warmed when pricking out the seedlings, so as to reduce shock.

Shield the newly-pricked-out seedlings with thin gauze for a couple of days, but give them overhead light. Never overwater, sprinkle only with tepid water when needed.

Once established, give zinnias all the sunshine available; the flats should be on benches in full sun all day. Ventilation is needed as for most other plants, but close the door and vents by about four p.m. to keep warmth as long as daylight is good.

A night temperature not below 50 degrees F. will be suitable for zinnias, and daytime can go up to 75 degrees F.

Large flowered hybrid zinnias can be grown to really huge sizes if you want them by pinching out the tops of seedlings when three leaves have grown. Restrict the stems to three, and later remove all side buds, allowing one blossom to a stem. Careful feeding of balanced fertilizer after buds begin to color will aid in strengthening the plants to carry the extra weight of bloom.

Although zinnias are hot summer plants, they need a rich soil too if they are to make their full growth and quota of flowers. By removing fading blossoms promptly a long succession is assured.

The dwarf kinds smother the plants in tiny blooms and make effective groups in sunny patio beds or planters.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

In today's deal, our South declarer committed a costly error in his play, an error that a more experienced player would not have made. As a result, he failed to fulfill a makeable game contract. Can you find South's mistake?

Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

♣ A K J 10

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ◇.

After winning the opening diamond lead with his ace, South led his queen of trumps and finessed against West's hoped-for king. East won this trick and returned his singleton seven of hearts. South put up the king, which West captured with the ace. The queen of hearts came next, East discarding the club deuce. A third heart lead was then made, East ruffing with his remaining trump. And so declarer incurred a one-trick set. What was his mistake?

As declarer should have viewed his combined assets, he had a guaranteed contract, provided that the opposition would not ruff any of his winners. Assuming that trumps would be drawn, South had not losing tricks in either clubs or diamonds. In hearts, there were just two losers, plus one in trumps to the defenders' king.

Declarer's approach to the play of his four spade contract should have centered on eliminating, or minimizing, the danger that one of the defenders might ruff away one of Souths winners.

At trick two, South should have led the queen of spades (To intice West into covering with the king if West possessed that key card). When West would follow with a low spade, South would overtake the queen with the board's ace. He would then return a trump, East winning his king.

With the adversely held circulation, South's only losers from here in would be two heart tricks, to West's queen and ace.

Actually, South was a bit unlucky in his play in that East had to have the spade king and a singleton (or a doubleton) heart to defeat the fourspade contract. Nevertheless, South had only himself to blame for his defeat. He had recognized the danger inherent in the hand — the same danger being inherent in all trump contracts — namely that one of the opponents might ruff one of declarer's winners, he would have spurned the trump finesse. Thus, by forsaking a possible overtrick, he would have brought his contract home safely.

BY FAY HENDIE

We have 1258 for the game today. Using all four digits each time, one of each and no other digits at all, you form expressions for consecutive numbers from one up.

Any arithmetical signs may be used, but no summation (that's not the simple plus) or factorial symbols. Don't forget decimals, roots and powers (no extra digits).

For example, 28 plus 5 minus 1 is a solution for 32.

The limit without a breakin continuity seems to be 110. I shall be glad to check solutions, and will send hints to help in future games if requested.

Kiniski to Clash With Little Bear

Steven Little Bear will attempt to snatch the Pacific Coast title from Gene Kiniski in the feature bout of a professional wrestling card at Memorial Arena Tuesday.

In other bouts, starting at 8 p.m., Eric Frolich will partner Babich in a tag-team tussle against Bill Cody and Anson, Duncan McTavish will face Johnny Quinn and Dean Higucki will take on Gorky.

GAMBLING PAYS

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec's government-run lottery earned the province $25,664,656 in its first fiscal year of operation. Maurcie Custeau, head of Lotom-Quebec, noted that 1970-71 revenue from the lottery operation was well in excess of the anticipated $22 million.

CONTRACT TALKS DEADLOCKED

National Rail Strike Called

Liquor Ad Ban Passes House

By BRUCE YEMEN

A ban on liquor advertising was approved by a 37-13 vote that fractured party lines in the legislature Tuesday.

A warning from Premier Bennett that in spite of a free vote a defeat of the government would mean an election appeared to keep a number ofundecided Socreds in line.

Three government members voted against the ban, which takes effect Sept. 1. They were Evan Wolfe (Vancouver Centre), Howard McDiarmid (Alberni) and Ernie LeCours (Richmond).

Herb Capozzi (SC—Vancouver Centre) spoke against the bill but abstained from the vote. Capozzi's family runs a winery.

FAVOR BAN

Others in favor of the ban were New Democrats Eileen Dailly (Burnaby North), Jim Lorimer (Burnaby-Willingdon), Bill Hartley (Yale-Lillooet) and Bob Strachan (Cowichan-Malahat) and Liberal Garde Gardom (Vancouver Point Grey).

The key vote was actually taken on an amendment by Ernie Hall (NDP—Surrey) which would have killed the proposed ban.

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson and Premier Bennett spoke in the debate on committee stage approval, with Bennett praising a Victoria Daily Times editorial and Peterson calling some of Capozzi's arguments "just a lot of hogwash."

Bennett said free votes have often been extended to members of his party but a defeat of the government means there will be an election.

SAME PATTERN

This brought a reply from Barrett who said he regretted that Bennett had reduced the issue to party politics. Both opposition parties had free votes for their members.

Arguments for an against the proposed ban followed the same pattern as those heard Monday during second reading debate.

Opponents said it wouldn't work, it was hypocritical because the government has failed to encourage moderation in its liquor sale policies, it was unfair to private enterprise and it had im-

Tobacco Also Gets Cut-Off Treatment

A total ban on cigarette advertising in the province effective Sept. 1 received unanimous final approval in the legislature Tuesday after some MLAs complained about unanswered questions raised by the bill.

Liberal Leader Pat McGeer said the bill, the Tobacco Advertising Restraint Act, is a "pretty stinky job of drafting" and urged Attorney-General Leslie Peterson to give more precise answers to opposition questions.

Peterson indicated it is "not the intention" of the bill that distributors of publications from outside B.C. should be considered in violation of the act if cigarette advertisements are contained in them.

TIME UNANSWERED

But he didn't answer McGeer's question about whether Time Magazine's edition published in B.C. for distribution in other provinces would be affected by the ban.

When Leo Nimsick (NDP — Kootenay) repeated McGeer's questions and asked whether the bill would force Time to publish outside of B.C. Peterson repeated earlier statements that the bill is intended to apply to areas of provincial jurisdiction.

McGeer said it is obvious that the province has jurisdiction over Time and then snapped:

"The attorney-general drags the whole legislature down to his level by bringing in sloppy legislation."

Gordon Dowding (NDP — Burnaby-Edmonds) said he doubts the value of the bill's reliance on injunctions by citizens to enforce the ban. The courts couldn't move fast enough to prevent the offence, he suggested.

CONCERNED

Alex Macdonald (NDP — Vancouver East) expressed concern that the injunctions might be used by "some bluenose" to have Playboy magazine taken off the newsstands, ostensibly because it contains cigarette advertising.

Peterson told Barrie Clark (L — North Vancouver-Seymour) that the bill covers cablevision programs but he said that this would be "subject to some question" in its application.

"All of the provisions of this statue must be read in the light that the province can only legislate in its own jurisdiction," Peterson said.

Premier Bennett said the reason for the Sept. 1 date for the ban is to allow existing advertising contracts to run out "so free enterprisers will have six months to go out and get additional business."

India Charges Genocide, Offers Support to Rebels

Times News Services

NEW DELHI — India today levelled charges of genocide and the "massacre of defenceless people" against Pakistan in an emotional resolution passed unanimously by the lower house of parliament.

The resolution, moved by Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, pledged India's wholehearted sympathy and support for East Pakistan in its bid for secession from ruling West Pakistan and charged the government based in Karachi is engaged in "the systematic decimation of people which amounts to genocide."

SUPPLY GUNS

This has increased speculation in the Indian capital that the Gandhi government will supply arms covertly to Bengalis fighting the Pakistani army.

In the battle zones of the eastern Pakistani state, meanwhile, government troops seem to be winning the struggle to regain control, after a bloody campaign which has killed an estimated 15,000 Bengalis since it began six days ago.

One United States correspondent who left the eastern zone Sunday reported troops were firing on people at what appeared to be the smallest provocation, buildings were being destroyed indiscriminately and the army was determined to assert its control over the 73 million Bengalis in the eastern state.

REBEL STATIONS

Information coming out of embattled East Pakistan remained fragmentary and there was no way of checking all the claims and counter-claims broadcast by the official radio and clandestine rebel stations.

While spokesmen express hope that other nations, particularly the United States and Russia, will play a role in ending the fighting, Indian officials refuse to rule out Indian support for the East Pakistanis should a prolonged guerrilla war become the pattern in East Pakistan.

Partly in an apparent attempt to goad Washington and other capitals into action and partly out of genuine bitterness, some officials are complaining that the west cares less about the deaths of brown-skinned men that it does about whites. "The conscience of the west was much aroused by Hungary in 1956 and by Czechoslovakia in 1968," one Indian official said Tuesday. "There is much more human suffering in East Pakistan today but the killing and maiming of poor brown Bengalis does not seem to stir the west."

SENTENCED to life imprisonment at hard labor today is Lieut. William Calley Jr. for the massacre of civilians at My Lai. The jury had a choice of the life term or a death sentence. See background story page 5.

New Quake Hits

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A sharp aftershock of the massive Feb. 9 earthquake rocked a wide area of the San Fernando Valley today, seriously damaging about 25 homes in the area hardest hit in last month's tremor which killed 64 persons and caused millions of dollars in damage.

DISCRIMINATION CHARGED IN TENANT ACT CHANGE

The New Democrats accused the government Tuesday of discriminating against people in low-income housing projects by removing them from the protection of the Landlord and Tenant Act.

They spoke during third reading of the government's omnibus bill, a part of which eliminates tenancy agreements signed for government subsidized housing from jurisdiction under the act.

Jim Lorimer (NDP— Burnaby-Willingdon) said the act should apply to all tenants and charged that the government was discriminating against the poor who live in subsidized housing.

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett agreed and asked Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell to reconsider that section of the bill. Barrett said the Landlord and Tenant Act appears to have been brought in to protect only the interests of the middle class.

Campbell, angry at Barrett, accused the NDP of cynically jumping on the issue for political reasons.

He said the amendment cannot be interpreted as discriminatory because tenancy agreements in housing projects are set by the federal government and follow the same provisions as provincial law as far as the required three months' notice for rent increases are concerned.

12,000 in B.C. Face Layoffs

MONTREAL (CP)—The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers called today for strike action against Canada's two largest railways Monday, April 5.

A CNR spokesman said shortly after the strike call the railway would immediately begin evaluating the effect on its national service.

The CPR curtailed both passenger and freight service in Western Canada as work stoppages by enginemen began to increase.

The walkouts have affected more than 5,000 workers in British Columbia so far, and it is expected that within a week 7,000 more will be laid off because of lack of rail cars.

Most of the workers affected are on the mainland and the interior.

SPREADS

The CPR's first reaction to growing work stoppage was to announce that transcontinental passenger service would operate only between Winnipeg and Eastern Canada.

In addition, the work stoppage forced an end to daylinr passenger service between Calgary and Edmonton.

The CPR said 95 engineers spread the walkout to five Saskatchewan points—Regina, Saskatoon, Moose Jaw, Wynyard and Wilkie.

The walkout crippled CPR operations in Regina, but the CNR continued to operate normally in Saskatchewan at that time.

All CPR operations in southern Alberta were halted Tuesday night when 26 firemen and engineers stopped working at Red Deer.

STOPPED IN B.C.

Work stoppages began a week ago in British Columbia and spread to Alberta, with more than 800 CNR and CPR employees booking off.

By today, an estimated 6,000 CNR and CPR employees were laid off in the West because of reduced traffic.

In Vancouver, engineers voted 162 to 15 to reject a personal telephone plea from Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey to return to work.

Previous talks in the dispute broke off last week after a three-man conciliation board reported it was unable to reach a wage settlement for a new contract.

Meanwhile, Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey told the Commons today that he considered it premature for him to participate in negotiations between Canada's major railways and striking employees.

E & N SERVICE ENDS THURSDAY

Victoria-Courtenay passenger service on the E & N is expected to end Thursday, a CP Rail spokesman said today in Montreal.

At the same time the railway announced its transcontinental passenger service will operate only between Winnipeg and Eastern Canada until further notice.

Breakthrough Seen in Geneva

GENEVA (Reuter) — A major breakthrough during the current session of the Geneva disarmament conference appeared possible today after the Soviet Union and its allies offered conciliatory proposals for a ban on germ warfare.

In a sudden change of line which coincided with a speech on disarmament by party leader Leonid Brezhnev at a Communist congress in Moscow, Russia and its allies introduced Tuesday a draft convention outlawing biological weapons and toxins without waiting for an agreement on chemical weapons.

Previously, the Eastern bloc nations had insisted that biological and chemical weapons should be lumped together under a single banning agreement.

Conference sources said negotiations now will centre on aligning the two texts.

Wildcat Strike At CBC Outlets

TORONTO (CP) — Television production employees at CBC stations across Canada walked off their jobs today, but their union immediately began advising members to return to work.

A CBC spokesman here said the return-to-work call was agreed upon after a meeting in Montreal between representatives of the CBC and the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

VIET PULLOUT DATE SET BY DEMOCRATS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic party members of the House of Representatives approved today a compromise resolution calling for United States troops withdrawal from Indochina not later than Jan. 3, 1973.

The action at a party caucus is not binding It commits House Democrats to work toward the goal of troop withdrawal and prisoner release during the 92nd Congress, which expires on Jan. 3, 1973.

ECOLOGICAL DISASTER NEAR KITIMAT

Pulp Mill Suspected in Huge Fish Kill

KITIMAT (CP) — Dead needlefish are piled two feet along a half-mile section of beach in this north-coast British Columbia community, and residents fear the headwaters of Douglas Channel have been struck with an ecological disaster.

"We have known there has been something wrong since the beginning of December when the runs of winter spring salmon failed to show up," says John Jensen, chairman of the community's pollution committee.

"I suppose the death of the needlefish could be from natural causes, but there are too many other things going wrong around here.

"The algae has stopped growing on the boats in the marina and kelp and other seaweed are dying off as far as four miles down the channel."

Jensen said things have been going wrong in the inlet ever since the Eurocan Pulp and Paper plant went into operation last year.

"Even the Indians who live three miles across the inlet are only catching a fraction of the usual number of salmon in their nets," he said in an interview Tuesday.

"I don't know of a sports fisherman who has caught a salmon this year and this is one of the last frontiers of this continent. Even the cod have disappeared."

Jensen said his committee has sent a telegram to Fisheries Minister Jack Davis and arranged through the Society for Pollution and Environmental Control to have toxicity tests made on some needlefish in the United States.

He said the local fisheries inspector is in Vancouver and no official investigation is under way.

"I don't know how long it will take to get results of the tests from the U.S. We had to go to the south because it seems no one in Vancouver wanted to do anything about it.

"The dead fish are stacked up like mounds of hay on the beach."

Shadow Mischief

Hydro Ups Price To Major Users

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Hydro has increased electrical power rates to 20 large industrial customers, including Ocean Cement in Victoria and Utah Construction and Mining at the northern end of Vancouver Island, by 12.5 per cent effective April 1, it was announced Tuesday.

The increase, announced by Dr. Gordon Shrum, Hydro chairman, will mean an additional $1 million a year in revenue for the Crown power utility.

In addition, Dr. Shrum said, Hydro has given a two-year notice to a group of large bulk power users of rate increases effective April 1, 1973. The notice was necessary because of contract terms.

He said there was no increase for general commercial and residential power users and no boost in natural gas prices.

Last spring, the traditional time for announcing power rate changes, Hydro boosted its charges between 13 and 20 per cent for residential users.

The industrial users whose rates go up Thursday are those with a load requirement of more than 5,000 kilowatts and running up to about 8,000 kilowatts. They were given the requisite one-year notice of rate change last spring.

Some of the companies involved in the increase are Utah, the refineries of Imperial Oil, Shell Canada, Standard Oil and Gulf Oil on Burrard Inlet, Canadian Forest Products Pacific Veneer plant at New Westminster, MacMillan Bloedel's White Pine plant and Ocean Cement in Vancouver, Westminster Paper, Molybdenum at Alice Arm and Kaiser Resources and Fording Coal in the East Kootenays.

The large bulk users who have received two years' notice are pulp and paper mills and chemical firms who take electrical power directly off Hydro's high-voltage transmission lines.

B.C. Hydro in the fiscal year ended on March 31, 1970, showed a loss of $408,118. Its figures for this year have not been announced, but a profit is expected.

. . . LIQUOR AD BAN

properly been put forward as a moral issue.

Several MLAs indicated they had been having a great deal of difficulty making up their minds on how to vote.

Capozzi argued that regulation of liquor advertising in print media is already sufficiently tough to ensure that no "pushing" of alcohol goes on through advertising.

Bennett rose to show the house a copy of an advertisement in a B.C. magazine which showed a pretty woman and a bottle of liquor with the words, "Guinness is an old softy . . ."

'BRAB ADVERTISING'

He asked whether members considered that the kind of "drab" advertising that some MLAs had indicated is the only kind that goes on.

"That ad was approved by the Liquor Control Board," Capozzi snapped.

Bennett replied "that's why" the bill was brought in.

Bennett went on to say he wanted to compliment the Victoria Daily Times for its lead editorial in Tuesday's paper.

He read from the editorial which was sympathetic to the proposed ban on cigarette and liquor advertising and then he said:

"For a paper that will lose some advertising, at least temporarily, this is a very heartening type of editorial."

He added that in the past he has condemned the Daily Times as a "Liberal newspaper" but he said "they show courage . . . that there is something above the dollar sign."

Barrett said that unless Bennett follows the ban with a program of "enlightened" liquor sales policies including elimination of barn-like beer parlors, "one could suspect that this was done for political motives."

Gardom indicated he was supporting the bill but called for an end to B.C.'s "behind-the-barn attitude" to alcohol.

He suggested that an alternate way of controlling the problem would be to require liquor advertisers to match their advertising budgets with equal donations to the government's efforts to fight alcholoism.

McDiarmid said he didn't believe advertising of alcohol was related to the problem of youth using liquor and termed the ban "almost a petty move." He called for a positive program to combat alcoholism.

SUPPORT

Burt Campbell (SC—Revelstoke Slocan) said his father, the publisher of the Castlegar News, had expressed support for the ban despite the fact that the amount of lost revenue from the government's policies would be exactly equal to the profit of the newspaper last year.

Bob Williams (NDP—Vancouver East) said Bennett's position was "the ultimate in hypocrisy" and he criticized "stupor-markets" tolerated by the government and the "hotel monopoly."

"The position of the premier is as unreal as the position of the WCTU (Women's Christian Temperance Union)" said Williams.

George Mussallem (SC—Dewdney) said that even if the bill was "just a little step forward . . . we must stand together."

Wolfe said he is concerned about the introduction of "measure after measure" which cuts into the area of free enterprise. The bill is a "further encroachment of the freedom of the individual," he said.

YOUTH TURNED OFF

Hall, who said he moved the amendment in an effort to force a clear-cut vote on the issue separate from other liquor amendments, said anybody who suggests there is a moral question involved in the matter "has got to be out of his head."

He also said that if members looked closely they would discover that youth is "turning off alcohol."

"What you're advocating is darkness and ignorance and I can't stand for it," he said.

Peterson hit hard at Capozzi after the MLA had read a list of government controls already in effect on liquor advertising.

He said Capozzi was trying to minimize the advertising that is currently allowed and added:

"These suggestions that you are just trying to sell your brand to the exclusion of somebody else's brand (by advertising) are just a lot of hogwash."

Partridge Suggests Internal Tribunal

With the threat of censure hanging over the University of Victoria, president Bruce Partridge met senior faculty members Tuesday to offer a counter-proposal to the recommendations of the Canadian Association of University Teachers.

Partridge and his academic deans were reported to have put forward a proposal for an internal tribunal to hear the cases of Dr. William Goede of the English department, Dr. Tikam Jain of Chemistry and Toby Graff of Philosophy.

The three faculty members have been denied either tenure or promotion and are the central issue in a contract and tenure dispute involving nine other faculty tnat has disrupted the university since before Christmas.

MEET TONIGHT

The 42 tenured full professors, highest ranked academics in the university community, were reportedly meeting again tonight to discuss Partridge's proposals and the CAUT recommendations more fully.

Meanwhile Tuesday afternoon the CAUT reiterated its stand that external rather than internal tribunals represent the best solution "on a campus where extreme polarization of opinion" has developed.

Uvic Faculty Association president Don Harvey expressed pessimism, however, that the CAUT would accept Partridge's proposals.

"I do not believe that the association will countenace, nor do I believe that the CAUT executive will countenance, any proposals presented which are contrary to the recommendations of the CAUT executive.

CENSURE

"Unless such proposals are before the CAUT executive on April 2 and 3, I firmly believe they will recommend censure to the council of the CAUT in May," he said.

Dr. J. G. Kaplin, president of CAUT, said Tuesday that "no proposals were made and no agreements reached," but that Partridge requested from the CAUT members "preliminary reaction" to a plan he was intending to submit to the full professors.

He said Partridge asked the CAUT members to make no comment on the Saturday meeting until after he had met his senior faculty Tuesday.

"This condition they have scrupulously fulfilled," Kaplin said.

FREE DISCUSSION

"The CAUT believe that any proposal brought forward by any of the parties to the dispute should henceforth be subject to free and open discussion."

Partridge's plan apparently calls for the 42 full professors to form a review committee to look into all aspects of the three cases.

Harvey, speaking as faculty association president, said he has "no detailed knowledge of the plan and neither does the CAUT."

"It would be difficult, if not impossible, to find a fair tribunal after such prolonged argument," he said.

The Graduate Students' Society at Uvic Tuesday night joined the undergraduate students, AMS, faculty and faculty association in calling for acceptance by the administration of the CAUT proposals.

"Believing that natural justice has not been served by the outcome of recent discussions between the university administration and the executive committee of the CAUT concerning Goede, Jain and Graff, (the society) urge the board of governors to accept the CAUT recommendations in these cases," the motion said

Meanwhile, a four page brief issued by Dr. S. A. Ryce, head of the chemistry department, claims the "allegation that Dr. Jain had no opportunity to defend himself is completely false."

It goes on to say Dr. Jain was voted down 10-1 by his department on the matter of granting of tenure. A 99-page file outlining reasons for not granting tenure was transmitted to arts and science dean Dr. John Climenhaga.

FINE STAGES

The document listed five stages as follows: The chemistry department voted 10-1 against tenure; the dean's advisory committee (elected by faculty) first voted against and then for tenure with a majority of one vote; the dean voted against tenure; the president opposed tenure; and finally the university review committee (also selected by faculty) ruled that both the department and the university had fulfilled all procedural requirements of the tenure document.

"Personally I am greatly concerned about the enormous waste of time, money and effort on a matter as clear-cut as a departmental recommendation against granting tenure on a 10-1 vote," Dr. Ryce concludes.

"If it is claimed that I or my department in any way denied natural justice to Dr. Jain in this application for tenure, then I demand that I be properly challenged in a court of law."

Dr. Jain refused comment when contacted this morning.

Voter Apathy Tied to Size Of Area

A University of Victoria political scientist says larger municipalities get lighter votes in referendums.

Dr. Mark Sproule-Jones, in a joint paper with Adrie van Klaveren, bases his claim on results of a survey of 109 local referendums in British Columbia municipalities between 1964 and 1968.

"Our evidence shows . . . that the greater the size of a municipality, the lower turnout in any referenda held," the paper, bublished in the current issue of B.C. Studies, says.

"Of the 56 referenda held in municipalities smaller than 3,000 population in size, over three-quarters (75.8 per cent) of these referenda had a turnout in excess of 50 per cent.

"In contrast, at the other end of the scale, the turnout in the 24 referenda held by municipalities varying in size from 12,000 to 60,000 only exceeded 50 per cent on seven occasions (29.2 per cent of the 24 referenda)."

South Viets Renew Raids Inside Laos

SAIGON (AP) — United States helicopters landed a small force of South Vietnamese commandos in southern Laos today for a raid on a North Vietnamese base believed to be about five miles from the border.

The North Vietnamese struck back about 125 miles to the southeast, seizing and burning most of the district capital of Due Duc, 25 miles southwest of the northern base city of Da Nang.

President Nguyen Van Thieu told reporters the South Vietnamese raiders "attacked a North Vietnamese base in Base Area 611."

"Operation Lam Son 719 is still going on and the South Vietnamese army is still on the attack, despite the pull-back of some units into Vietnam."

Lam Son 719 was the code name for the 22,000-man South Vietnamese drive into Laos, now ended. The base area he referred to is south of the region swept during the incursion.

CIVILIANS KILLED

Two battalions of North Vietnamese troops carried out the attack on Duc Duc, launching a heavy barrage and ground attack Sunday night and seizing and holding most of the town Monday and Tuesday. They were withdrawing today.

At least 200 South Vietnamese civilians were reported killed or wounded, and 18 regional militiamen were killed and 36 wounded.

Field reports said about 1,000 houses were burned but the North Vietnamese failed to penetrate the U.S. district advisory team compound. They blew up the team house and a senior adviser's bunker outside. One American was wounded slightly.

In the raid into Laos, U.S. and South Vietnamese officers said, the 200-300 men taking part were members of the elite Hac Bao or Black Panther Strike Force and the 1st Reconnaissance Company.

NATHAN'S STORY

For Hate or Love —Do It Your Way

By Jack Scott

It's been gratifying this week to read the many tributes to Nathan Cohen, the Toronto Daily Star's outstanding drama critic, who died last Friday at 47. No one would have been more surprised at the depth and sincerity of their feeling than Nathan, himself.

Few people outside the newspaper business would know it, but Nathan paid a high price for integrity. He had decided very early in his career as a critic that he would do it his way. If a production or a performer did not meet his standards he could be merciless. It was a philosophy we argued about many times when I worked in an adjoining office.

Then, and now, I favored a double standard of criticism. Local or amateur theatre, as I saw it, should be given every possible encouragement, however awful their offering. Only big-city professional productions should be exposed to the full critical treatment. Nathan could never agree. Excellence was the goal. Therefore there could be no equivocation.

The inevitable result was that a great many people, in every branch of entertainment that he touched, had him enshrined as Number One on their hate list. Nathan was not only aware of this, but far more sensitive to it than he would admit. Once, in the last month that I worked with him, a time when he was managing his prodigious output with the full knowledge that he was a very sick man, he joked, "Really, I'd hate to be the guy who has to do my obit. He'll have to look under rocks to find anyone with a kind word."

Scott

That, of course, has not been the case. Many of these tributes are from men and women who had every reason to think of him as "Nasty Nate." They demonstrate, perhaps, that however acerbic a critic may be he will be respected if he is consistently honest. There was never any question of that with Nathan.

But I wonder, too, if he could have anticipated this and I find myself thinking of one of his favorite show business stories, a story he told to illustrate the diminishing returns of affection that may come from uncompromising dedication.

The story concerned the long-time head of one of the major Hollywood studios, a man of genuine brilliance, but ruthless in his pursuit of plaudits and profits. With just a scribble of his pen he made and broke some of the great stars of his day. He drove his producers, directors and casts without mercy. He was a man totally devoid of loyalty, compassion or kindliness in his single-minded goal of turning out box-office hits.

When the great man died, said Nathan, the studio public relations department was given the task of preparing an obituary for the press. One after the other, every producer, every director, every actor adamantly refused to say a charitable word about the man. He had been a monster in life, let him remain a monster in death.

In desperation the public relations men went to the studio barber. For every working day through two decades the same barber had shaved the studio boss. It was widely believed that he, alone, knew the real man beneath the impenetrable facade. Surely he would have some final eulogy to fill this void of affection.

The barber pondered long and deeply when the question was put to him, as Nathan told the story. Finally his face brightened and he made his last judgment.

"Well," the barber said, "he was not hard man to shave."

Another Toronto celebrity who has made a career in abrasive controversy yet somehow built up a vast reservoir of affection is the redoubtable 71-year-old Gordon Sinclair, though he may never know it for a certainty until it is too late. I give him no more than 30 years.

Wherever he goes in Canada, a newspaperman who has worked in Toronto is always asked: "What is the real Gordon Sinclair like?" Victoria is no exception.

Someone once called him "The Prince of Phoneys" and that may explain why he is so cherished by those who know him. The world is full of hateful, mean-tempered men aspiring to be lovable. When you find a lovable man aspiring to be hateful you have something very special.

Gordon works hard to keep Canada's worst-kept secret that he's everybody's sweetheart. Someone sometime has put the notion in his head that if he ever dropped the mask and revealed himself as nothing but a wonderful little guy he'd be left without an act. But the truth is, we all know the secret.

I never ran into Gordon in Toronto without reflecting that there was a Sinclair in every man's childhood, a fat, flat-faced, jug-eared Alfred E. Neuman kid who was always thumbing his nose over the fence and pulling the girls' pigtails, the kid with the only football in the block, the only rotten kid in your life that you ever remembered in later years with something very close to love. There are kids who just can't get hated no matter how they try.

Almost anyone in newspapering, radio or television seems to have a personal story of some kindness or helpful gesture by the diminutive ogre.

★ ★ ★

My own memory involves the first morning I was to begin writing a daily column for the Star. I was as tense as a schooboy about to be issued with his lined scribblers, his 3-b pencils and eraser. The idea I was nouristing for my first piece had suddenly begun to seem as forlorn as a little lost lamb.

I had arranged to have a coffee that morning with Gordon and he instantly sensed my mood.

"There's no question about it," he reflected, his bow-tie trademark bobbing and weaving. "First things are always the hardest. You gotta remember, though, that they're often the most rewarding as well. I remember in '35, the year after Lou Marsh died, the Star put me on sports. I was the world's worst sports writer, bar none. They sent me down to New York to write a feature about the New York Americans. On the train coming back that night I just sat in front of my typewriter staring at all that blank paper. Hell, you've had that happen. Stared all the way to Buffalo and then the idea came to me. Filed my story in Welland, right on deadline. And d'ya know, it wasn't a bad story at all. So you see, there's really nothing to give you the yipes

"First things—boo, boy," the Prince of Phoneys went on. "They're the richest of the experiences we ever get. There's a line in Shelley I remember — 'the first sweet sleep of night.' That's what life is like. The openers are the sweetest. You just never recapture that first, fine, careless rapture. By God, Jack, I envy you starting out on this thing."

I know now that it was entirely for my benefit — sort of a gift, you might say — but it got me through that toughest of all days.

Some phoney. Some ogre.

Dale Kuster: was it short sight or long hair?

Kuster's Last Stand

Fired Fireman Pickets for 'Justice'

By PAT DUFOUR

A fired fireman took up his stand outside the Saanich firehall today and began picketing the department and the union to which he'd belonged for four years in a last-ditch stand to "get justice."

Dale Kuster, 25, was quiet-spoken when he stated his case — but determined.

Kuster was hired in January 1966 and fired June 30, 1970.

The reason for his dismissal, the department said, was that he wore glasses.

Kuster thinks otherwise.

"There are at least half a dozen men in the department who wear glasses, including the chief (Fire Chief Joe Sutherland)."

Kuster contends that it was because he started to wear his hair a little longer and grow a moustache.

•

Local 967 of the International Association of Firefighters at the outset were solidly behind Kuster.

As he talked to reporters today the ambulance he used to be assigned to dashed out in answer to an emergency call, the man he used to work with, Arthur Fryer, at the wheel.

Kuster said: "By rights I should be in the back of that ambulance. I really loved my job — helping people — I gave it everything I had."

Unemployed since June, Kuster has been forced to give up his part-time studies at the University of Victoria where he was majoring in political science and economics.

He's picketing the union because it's done a complete turnaround, he said.

"After voting to back me all the way, the president, Bill Holmes, told me in October that I was no longer eligible for assistance.

•

"He gave me no real reasons — it was a very ambiguous thing."

Sutherland said Kuster's allegation that it was dislike of his long hair and moustache that caused his firing is "just a red herring."

Kuster was dismissed because his eyes were not up to the standard required for firemen, he said.

"We told him when we took him on that his eyesight didn't meet the standards. We said that if he could tolerate wearing contact lenses while he was on duty this would be all right."

Sutherland said Kuster wore contact lenses up "until about the August before he was dismissed" and then returned to wearing normal glasses.

Asked why the union supported Kuster's claims at the time of dismissal, Sutherland said, "I imagine they went along with this red herring."

Waterfront Funds On Way—Haddock

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

Mayor Courtney Haddock said today the city will get from the province the urban renewal money needed to spring construction of the Reid waterfront development.

Haddock made the statement following a half-hour meeting in his office with Vancouver developer J. A. Reid.

Asked to confirm a report that Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell today asked the city to submit its urban renewal fund request within 24 hours, Haddock would only answer that "he wants to know what we're thinking."

DRAWINGS READY

But he added, "we are going to get it."

The money is needed to help the city buy the Ocean Cement Ltd. waterfront property to make way for Reid's $25 million commercial-residential complex.

Reid confirmed that he will present drawings of his revised complex April 8 to city council.

He later invited Ald. Peer Pollen to examine sketches of the new plan in the city's planning department offices.

The city is hoping that at least part of two Vancouver urban renewal projects will be turned down by the province, making money available for Victoria.

Campbell has stated he gave Vancouver until the end of April to complete its plans or else lose the initiative to Victoria. He has also said money may be available to Victoria over and above the amounts originally promised to Vancouver.

'Include Me in Lunatic Fringe'

David Anderson, MP for Esquimalt-Saanich said today if Albrni MLA Howard McDiarmid wants to include him in the "lunatic fringe" it's fine with him.

He was commenting in statements by McDiarmid in the legislature Tuesday that people who want the Nitinat Triangle in the Long Beach National Prk represent the "lunatic fringe of the environmentalist movement." (See Page 38

"If he wants to include me in the lunatic fringe, I have no objections," he said.

Anderson said McDiarmid's statements did not make sense.

He said McDiarmid is handling the controversial issue badly and isn't helping to settle the matter amicably.

"The matter of including in the park the three lakes in the Nitinat area should be discussed on a reasonable basis by both sides," he said. "The logging companies and the people both have good cases."

Parks are held in perpetuity and are a continual asset, he said.

ST. JOSEPH'S STILL IN DOUBT

Hospital Board Strives for Fall Building Vote

By DON VIPOND

The Capital region's hospital board may be ready to present ratepayers with a building program they can vote on this fall.

But it will depend on whether the board can pull together an orderly image of solid progress in hospital development, something it feels is vital before ratepayers are likely to approve a multi-million dollar spending program.

"We have to be able to present a sensible and reasonable plan to people," Jim Cumming, chairman of the regional hospital board, said Tuesday.

The fall, he said, is the earliest that may be possible.

Royal Jubilee Hospital and the new hospital to be located in Central Saanich are at work on plans to be covered in the referendum. Gorge Road Hospital and Lady Minto Hospital at Ganges may have plans ready, said Cumming.

•

But plans at St. Joseph's Hospital are the unknown quantity and if they aren't ready they may have to await another referendum.

Talk of a referendum underlines two developments in area planning of hospital expansion since the regional hospital board took on that task three years ago.

The first is that the lengthy differences between the regional board and St. Joseph's Hospital have done more than delay development at that hospital. They have been a factor in stalling the referendum, thus contributing to the delay in hospital growth throughout the region.

•

There has been a general conviction on the regional board that all the concusion and bickering has left a bad taste in the mouth of the public, making it unlikely any referendum could gather the 60 per cent majority needed to launch Greater Victoria on the next stage in hospital improvement.

Summarizing the differences between the regional board and St. Joseph's directors is like trying to explain the theory of relatively in 30 words or less. But a core issue is the question of control, more accurately degree of control, both of the present hospital and proposed additions.

Even intervention by Health Minister Ralph Loffmark hasn't been able to untangle the problems.

The second development bearing on the next referendum came last week when the regional board announced it was looking for another site for the 150 extended care beds which had been slotted St. Joseph's under a program to build 600 beds in the region for chronic care patients.

•

At the same time the board said it wants to consolidate on a new site the 75 beds earlier allotted to St. Mary's Priory.

That move, with apparent blessing of Loffmark, means the regional board may soon be in a position to say to ratepayers:

"The 600 beds we proposed for extended care patients are now on the way. There are 300 under construction at Gorge Road Hospital. There are 75 firmly planned for the new hospital in Central Saanich. And there will be 225 on the third site.

"So let's get on with building badly-needed additions for acute care patients."

Before the regional board can paint this picture, it has to find the third site and it is hard at this right now. After the difficulties trying to acquire land alongside St. Joseph's, it will likely seem easy.

Where does all this leave St. Joseph's Hospital?

The regional board has made it clear there's no thought of abandoning the hospital as a major acute care centre, scheduled for extensive expansion.

But as matters stand, it will have to expand on its present site, meaning it will physically rise rather than spread.

Arthur Mayse...

AT THE START OF THE month, a Victorian I know wrote a business letter; in English, to the Montreal-based branch of an American company.

He got a reply this week. When he showed it to me, he was angrier than I've ever seen him before. This surprised me, because he isn't a hothead. In a lengthy acquaintance, I've found him to be tolerant and open-minded.

The fact that the outfit had sent him a form letter which failed to answer his specific questions was merely annoying. What burned this English-speaking, British Columbia-domiciled Canadian was the language of the form.

It was written in French.

"If they'd used both languages, I wouldn't have minded," he said. "We aren't a bilingual country, and nothing they do in Quebec or at Ottawa is going to make us so. But if they want to pretend, I'll go along. Not with this, though. This sort of thing — this crazy attempt to force French on us as the working language of Canada, turns my stomach."

He then showed me a letter which, along with the French-language screed, has now sizzled its way through the mails to company headquarters in Washington, D.C.

It does more than convey his sense of outrage and insult. It states certain facts as opposed to the Quebec-Ottawa fiction. It also makes plain that any firm seeking to do business in all provinces had better not ignore those facts if it wants to keep his business.

The chief of them is that French-speaking Quebec is but one province of Canada, and that the vast majority of Candians elsewhere communicate and expect to be communicated with in the language of their daily use.

The writer asks for a non-form reply, in English.

Did this normally mild citizen blow his cork without sufficient reason?

I don't think so. I'm inclined to regard the form letter in French as a last minor straw in a lang that began with Pearson's folly and continues, accelerated, through Trudeau's reign.

We will survive recession or depression.

I hope we can hold together in spite of the arrogant claims of one province to nationhood, and at the attendant blackmail, haste, panic and assorted nonsense that have stemmed therefrom.

None of these manifestations are likely to make any thoughtful Canadian forget the fact of Quebec need.

We ask only that other needs be also recognized — that British Columbia, a province not without its troubles — get her share of job-producing contracts dealt from the federal deck. Also that other provinces be similiarly recognized.

Prince Edward Island badly needs her causeway to the mainland. She should have had it long ago. Cheated of that vital link, her prospects grow steadily poorer.

The Maritimes at large and the prairie provinces could use heftier transfusions.

But if anything can break our union, it will be this Quebec-inspired, Ottawa-fostered insistence in the teeth of sense and reality that English-speaking Canadians submit to having the French language rammed down their throats.

We can handle political differences. They keep us heathier and liveller.

Religious differences pose no problem: Canadians take them in stride.

This matter of instrusion on language rights is something else again.

Ten years back, perhaps even five, my easy-going friend might have laughed off the form letter from Quebec.

The fact that he didn't reflects a state of mind and conveys a warning that Ottawa would do well to heed. The wise old saw sums it up pretty well — you can lead a horse to water, but you can't make him drink.

I hope we escape the national tragedy that continued failure to heed by those with power to remedy a dangerous situation may be preparing for us. But each incident involving language, a commodity of explosive potential, leaves me less optimistic that we will.

A. 53 Hillside Avenue, Winsted, Conn., U.S.A.

VICTORIAN AIR of "other worldliness" is lent to Montreal's downtown core by Windsor Station. The departure point for many of Western Canada's early settlers, the first part of which was completed in 1889, could be demolished to make way for a new real estate development. The 15-storey tower at the rear of the photo was completed in 1914.

MONTREAL'S WINDSOR STATION

Historic CPR Office May Go

By PAUL WHITELAW
Times Montreal Bureau

MONTREAL — With the crash of falling masonry being heard in Canada's cities as old buildings are demolished to make way for new and more profitable structures, architeet Michael Fish says there is new hope that some of the country's most interesting landmarks may be saved.

Fish, who has been practicing in Montreal for ten years since he received his architecture degree from McGill University, is spearheading a campaign to save downtown Windsor Station.

Just how successful he will be remains to be seen, but he has been encouraged by sympathetic letters and considerable coverage in Montreal's French and English-language newspapers.

He believes the current stress on the environment may lead people to worry about their architecture as they do about phosphates and clear air.

Fish's ire was raised in early December when the CPR announced that its investment division and a real estate subsidiary would undertake a $250 million office tower and hotel development, and that its Windsor Station would disappear in the process.

He admits that the 82-year-old landmark does not qualify as an historic monument on the basis of its relatively young age. But, he notes that the station houses the head office of the CPR, and cannot be disassociated from the railway and its historic role in opening up Canada's West.

Fish is also convinced of its architectural merit, although there is some dispute on this point. Other architects say it is built in no particular style, and Philip Freedlander, past president of the Association of Architects of the Province of Quebec, says the project would be a logical extension of the recent development of downtown Montreal such as the Place Ville Marie complex and the Place Bonaventure trade centre. He describes the core area of Montreal as one of the world's finest.

The Montreal Society of Architects sides with Mr. Fish, and John Bland, a McGill University architecture professor, who believes Windsor station is a fine example of the railway architecture of the late Victoria period. The so-called baronial style in which the staion is built, notes Fish, is identified with the development of Canada in such buildings at Quebec City's Chateau Frontenac and the Banff Springs Hotel, along with numerous government structures.

The Montreal Society of Architects in an open letter to the CPR stated, "The stones of Venice or the Doges Palace are not more important to the spirit of Venice than the stones of Windsor Station to the spirit of Montreal."

Bland and Fish believe there is no reason why the station cannot be incorporated into the planned modern development. The station's concourse is sutable for development into an enclosed square, expecially suited for Canada's winters because it is covered by a roof.

So far, the CPR has remained silent on whether it will give the station a reprieve.

Veto powers over the planned new development lie with the Quebec cultural affairs department and the City of Montreal planning department, which can withhold building permits. So far, neither has chosen to intervene.

"I'm terrifically excited that Windsor Station and other landmarks can be saved because people are beginning to see that they have a stake in the ownership of their city . . . that the way their city will look is not only a corporate but a community responsibility," said Fish.

When the first stage of Windsor Station was opened in February, 1889, the second president of the CPR, Sir William Van Horne, coined the slogan: "Beats all creation, the new CPR station."

If Fish's campaign isn't successful, future generations of Canadians will never see it.

Sourdough Queen Navy Guest

A slender 19-year-old blonde arrives in Victoria Thursday to keep a date with the navy and perform some light-hearted ambassadorial duties for the Yukon Territories.

She's Judy Crawford of Dawson City, more formally known as Miss Yukon.

She made the date in late February when CPO Henry Gordon and LS Dave Gallo of the destroyer-escort HMCS Yukon represented their ship at the Sourdough Rendezvous in Whitehorse.

Miss Yukon, apart from her good looks, can lay good claim to her title, being a fourth generation member of a sourdough family.

Her first stop on arriving will be to meet the ship's company of Yukon. From then on it will be a whirl of festivities, beginning with a round of the city's night spots that evening.

She will also be attending the ship's company's dance, at Club 44 in CFB, Esquimalt, Friday.

Her visit ends Sunday.

Dissident Arrested

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet police searched the home of Vladimir Bukovsky, a prominent member of Moscow's small dissident community, Monday night and arrested him, dissident sources reported. It appeared part of a crackdown on dissident activity before the opening Tuesday of the Soviet Communist Party's 24th congress.

Isis Launch Today

Special to the Times

LONPOC, Calif. — Barring an act of God in the earthquake-plagued state of California, Canada's fourth satellite is set to be launched from Vandenberg Air Force Base, between 6:30 and 7:15 p.m. today.

The weather is expected to continue to be balmy with temperatures in the mid-60s here at NASA's western test range, 60 miles north of Santa Barbara.

Isis B will follow three highly successful predecessors, Alouette 1 and 2 and Isis 1 into a near-polar orbit around the earth.

★ ★ ★

Its mission will be to provide scientists with additional information on the vagaries of the ionosphere, the electrically-active portion of the atmosphere stretching from 50 miles above the earth to near space.

The 582-pound spacecraft is the largest and most complex satellite produced to date for the joint U.S.-Canada international satellite for ionspheric studies program.

It was built by RCA of Montreal and contains eight Canadian and more American scientific experiments.

Communications Minister Eric Kierans is heading a Canadian delegation to the launch.

Canada is expected to participate indirectly in this program by receiving important photographic information from the satellites.

Air Canada First

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lockheed Aircraft Corp. went knocking on the doors of its airline customers and bankers today with a plan in hand to retain Rolls-Royce egines for its jet-powered air bus.

First on the list for a visit from Lockheed's top brass was Air Canada, which has ordered 10 Lockheed L-1011 TriStars which can fly up to 350 passengers at 600 miles an hour.

Terms have not been disclosed for the tentative agreement announced Tuesday, after two weeks of private talks between Lockheed and the British government on behalf of the bankrupt Rolls empire.

The plan could jack up costs and alter deliveries of the 178 TriStars on order. But a switch to another power plant at this point would require costly redesign of the plane's tail assembly where the third engine is located. The other two are wing-mounted in pods.

Opponent of SST To Fight STOL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator William Proxmire, leader of the successful fight to end federal financing of the SST, is questioning a proposed multi-million-dollar government-industry venture to develop another commercial plane.

The new project involves another breed of airplane—a short-haul craft with a range up to 500 miles—named Short Take Off and Landing Transport, The STOL.

George M. Low, acting administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, asked the Senate aeronautics committee Tuesday to approve the first $1.5 million-instalment of a project scheduled to cost $100 million during the next four years.

Proxmire, a Wisconsin Democrat whose seven-year battle to stop SST spending ended last week in a 51-to-46 Senate victory, told a reporter he will do what he can to prevent the STOL from getting government financing.

In a letter to Low's office, he asked for complete justification of government involvement in STOL research and development.

"As far as this senator is concerned," Proxmire said, "Congress must not again become involved with some vague open-ended, potentially very costly 'joint undertaking' with the aircraft industry."

The SST program involved government subsidies totalling more than $1,000 million to develop two working prototypes to be used as models for later commercial production.

Low has promoted the STOL as part of an air-ground transportation system between nearby cities and to ease airport congestion.

Gov't Buys Hydro Bonds

Provincial government agencies will take up two B.C. Hydro bond issues, totalling $30 million, approved by cabinet order today, according to Resources Minister Ray Williston.

The money will be used to finance construction in the five-year Hydro plan announced in the legislature two weeks ago.

Two issues were approved, one for $20 million and the other for $10 million. Both issues are sinking fund bonds, both pay 6.9 per cent interest and mature March 30, 1996.

The bonds will pay interest twice a year on March 30 and Sept. 30. They will be sold in denominations ranging from $1,000 to $100,000. The bonds are payable at the holder's option.

But the first issue of $20 million can be redeemed by the government after March 30, 1991. The $10 million issue may be redeemed after March 30, 1981.

Liquor Ad Ban Passes House

By BRUCE YEMEN

A ban on liquor advertising was approved by a 37-13 vote that fractured party lines in the legislature Tuesday.

A warning from Premier Bennett that in spite of a free vote a defeat of the government would mean an election appeared to keep a number of undecided Socreds in line.

Three government members voted against the ban, which takes effect Sept. 1. They were Evan Wolfe (Vancouver Centre), Howard McDiarmid (Alberni) and Ernie LeCours (Richmond).

Herb Capozzi (SC—Vancouver Centre) spoke against the bill but abstained from the vote. Capozzi's family runs a winery.

FAVOR BAN

Others in favor of the ban were New Democrats Eileen Dailly (Burnaby North), Jim Lorimer (Burnaby-Willingdon), Bill Hartley (Yale-Lillooet) and Bob Strachan (Cowichan-Malahat) and Liberal Garde Gardom (Vancouver Point Grey).

The key vote was actually taken on an amendment by Ernie Hall (NDP—Surrey) which would have killed the proposed ban.

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson and Premier Bennett spoke in the debate on committee stage approval, with Bennett praising a Victoria Daily Times editorial and Peterson calling some of Capozzi's arguments "just a lot of hogwash."

Bennett said free votes have often been extended to members of his party but a defeat of the government means there will be an election.

SAME PATTERN

This brought a reply from Barrett who said he regretted that Bennett had reduced the issue to party politics. Both opposition parties had free votes for their members.

Arguments for an against the proposed ban followed the same pattern as those heard Monday during second reading debate.

Opponents said it wouldn't work, it was hypocritical because the government has failed to encourage moderation in its liquor sale policies, it was unfair to private enterprise and it had im-

Tobacco Also Gets Cut-Off Treatment

A total ban on cigarette advertising in the province effective Sept. 1 received unanimous final approval in the legislature Tuesday after some MLAs complained about unanswered questions raised by the bill.

Liberal Leader Pat McGeer said the bill, the Tobacco Advertising Restraint Act, is a "pretty stinky job of drafting" and urged Attorney-General Leslie Peterson to give more precise answers to opposition questions.

Peterson indicated it is "not the intention" of the bill that distributors of publications from outside B.C. should be considered in violation of the act if cigarette advertisements are contained in them.

TIME UNANSWERED

But he didn't answer McGeer's question about whether Time Magazine's edition published in B.C. for distribution in other provinces would be affected by the ban.

When Leo Nimsick (NDP — Kootenay) repeated McGeer's questions and asked whether the bill would force Time to publish outside of B.C. Peterson repeated earlier statements that the bill is intended to apply to areas of provincial jurisdiction.

McGeer said it is obvious that the province has jurisdiction over Time and then snapped:

"The attorney-general drags the whole legislature down to his level by bringing in sloppy legislation."

Gordon Dowding (NDP — Burnaby-Edmonds) said he doubts the value of the bill's reliance on injunctions by citizens to enforce the ban. The courts couldn't move fast enough to prevent the offence, he suggested.

CONCERNED

Alex Macdonald (NDP — Vancouver East) expressed concern that the injunctions might be used by "some bluenose" to have Playboy magazine taken off the newsstands, ostensibly because it contains cigarette advertising.

Peterson told Barrie Clark (L — North Vancouver-Seymour) that the bill covers cablevision programs but he said that this would be "subject to some question" in its application.

"All of the provisions of this statute must be read in the light that the province can only legislate in its own jurisdiction," Peterson said.

Premier Bennett said the reason for the Sept. 1 date for the ban is to allow existing advertising contracts to run out "so free enterprisers will have six months to go out and get additional business."

India Charges Genocide, Offers Support to Rebels

Times News Services

NEW DELHI — India today levelled charges of genocide and the "massacre of defenceless people" against Pakistan in an emotional resolution passed unanimously by the lower house of parliament.

The resolution, moved by Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, pledged India's wholehearted sympathy and support for East Pakistan in its bid for secession from ruling West Pakistan and charged the government based in Karachi is engaged in "the systematic decimation of people which amounts to genocide."

SUPPLY GUNS

This has increased speculation in the Indian capital that the Gandhi government will supply arms covertly to Bengalis fighting the Pakistani army.

In the battle zones of the eastern Pakistani state, meanwhile, government troops seem to be winning the struggle to regain control, after a bloody campaign which has killed an estimated 15,000 Bengalis since it began six days ago.

One United States correspondent who left the eastern zone Sunday reported troops were firing on people at what appeared to be the smallest provocation, buildings were being destroyed indiscriminately and the army was determined to assert its control over the 73 million Bengalis in the eastern state.

REBEL STATIONS

Information coming out of embattled East Pakistan remained fragmentary and there was no way of checking all the claims and counter-claims broadcast by the official radio and clandestine rebel stations.

While spokesmen express hope that other nations, particularly the United States and Russia, will play a role in ending the fighting, Indian officials refuse to rule out Indian support for the East Pakistanis should a prolonged guerrilla war become the pattern in East Pakistan.

Partly in an apparent attempt to goad Washington and other capitals into action and partly out of genuine bitterness, some officials are complaining that the west cares less about the deaths of brown-skinned men that it does about whites. "The conscience of the west was much aroused by Hungary in 1956 and by Czechoslovakia in 1968," one Indian official said Tuesday. "There is much more human suffering in East Pakistan today but the killing and maiming of poor brown Bengalis does not seem to stir the west."

New Quake Hits

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A sharp aftershock of the massive Feb. 9 earthquake rocked a wide area of the San Fernando Valley today, seriously damaging about 25 homes in the area hardest hit in last month's tremor which killed 64 persons and caused millions of dollars in damage.

SENTENCED to life imprisonment at hard labor today is Lieut. William Calley Jr. for the massacre of civilians at My Lai. The jury had a choice of the life term or a death sentence. Calley is appealing the sentence. See background story Page 5.

DISCRIMINATION CHARGED IN TENANT ACT CHANGE

The New Democrats accused the government Tuesday of discriminating against people in low-income housing projects by removing them from the protection of the Landlord and Tenant Act.

They spoke during third reading of the government's omnibus bill, a part of which eliminates tenancy agreements signed for government subsidized housing from jurisdiction under the act.

Jim Lorimer (NDP— Burnaby-Willingdon) said the act should apply to all tenants and charged that the government was discriminating against the poor who live in subsidized housing.

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett agreed and asked Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell to reconsider that section of the bill. Barrett said the Landlord and Tenant Act appears to have been brought in to protect only the interests of the middle class.

Campbell, angry at Barrett, accused the NDP of cynically jumping on the issue for political reasons.

He said the amendment cannot be interpreted as discriminatory because tenancy agreements in housing projects are set by the federal government and follow the same provisions as provincial law as far as the required three months' notice for rent increases is concerned.

12,000 in B.C. Face Layoffs

MONTREAL (CP)—The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers called today for strike action against Canada's two largest railways Monday, April 5.

A CNR spokesman said shortly after the strike call the railway would immediately begin evaluating the effect on its national service.

The CPR curtailed both passenger and freight service in Western Canada as work stoppages by enginemen began to increase.

The walkouts have affected more than 5,000 workers in British Columbia so far, and it is expected that within a week 7,000 more will be laid off because of lack of rail cars.

Most of the workers affected are on the mainland and the interior.

SPREADS

The CPR's first reaction to growing work stoppage was to announce that transcontinental passenger service would operate only between Winnipeg and Eastern Canada.

In addition, the work stoppage forced an end to dayliner passenger service between Calgary and Edmonton.

The CPR said 95 engineers spread the walkout to five Saskatchewan points—Regina, Saskatoon, Moose Jaw, Wynyard and Wilkie.

The walkout crippled CPR operations in Regina, but the CNR continued to operate normally in Saskatchewan at that time.

All CPR operations in southern Alberta were halted Tuesday night when 26 firemen and engineers stopped working at Red Deer.

STOPPED IN B.C.

Work stoppages began a week ago in British Columbia and spread to Alberta, with more than 800 CNR and CPR employees booking off.

By today, an estimated 6,000 CNR and CPR employees were laid off in the West because of reduced traffic.

In Vancouver, engineers voted 162 to 15 to reject a personal telephone plea from Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey to return to work.

Previous talks in the dispute broke off last week after a three-man conciliation board reported it was unable to reach a wage settlement for a new contract.

Meanwhile, Mackasey told the Commons today that he considered it premature for him to participate in negotiations between Canada's major railways and striking employees.

E&N SERVICE ENDS THURSDAY

Victoria-Courtenay passenger service on the E&N is expected to be halted on Thursday as effects of the engineer bookoff spread.

At the same time the railway announced its transcontinental passenger service will operate only between Winnipeg and Eastern Canada until further notice.

Switch Crews In Victoria Out of Work

Canadian National Railways today reported about 20 persons laid off in its Victoria operations as a result of a shutdown of rail movements in the province since last Thursday.

Layoffs by the railways and associated companies were expected to accelerate next week with the calling of a national strike by locomotive engineers.

CN had about 800 laid off in its B.C. operations up to today. Those in Victoria were mainly switch crews at Point Ellice and Ogden Point yards, and some office personnel.

Meanwhile, efforts to expand the highway-oriented operations of CN Express were being made during the embargo on railway shipments in and out of the province.

HOFFA LOSES APPEAL BID

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Parole Board denied today Teamster President Jimmy Hoffa's second request for parole.

The decision ruled out any chance that Hoffa, 58, president of the nation's largest union, can seek re-election at the Teamsters' July convention in Miami.

ECOLOGICAL DISASTER NEAR KITIMAT

Pulp Mill Suspected in Huge Fish Kill

KITIMAT (CP) — Dead needlefish are piled two feet along a half-mile section of beach in this north-coast British Columbia community, and residents fear the headwaters of Douglas Channel have been struck with an ecological disaster.

"We have known there has been something wrong since the beginning of December when the runs of winter spring salmon failed to show up," says John Jensen, chairman of the community's pollution committee.

"I suppose the death of the needlefish could be from natural causes, but there are too many other things going wrong around here.

"The algae has stopped growing on the boats in the marina and kelp and other seaweed are dying off as far as four miles down the channel."

Jensen said things have been going wrong in the inlet ever since the Eurocan Pulp and Paper plant went into operation last year.

"Even the Indians who live three miles across the inlet are only catching a fraction of the usual number of salmon in their nets," he said in an interview Tuesday.

"I don't know of a sports fisherman who has caught a salmon this year and this is one of the last frontiers of this continent. Even the cod have disappeared."

Jensen said his committee has sent a telegram to Fisheries Minister Jack Davis and arranged through the Society for Pollution and Environmental Control to have toxicity tests made on some needlefish in the United States.

He said the local fisheries inspector is in Vancouver and no official investigation is under way.

"I don't know how long it will take to get results of the tests from the U.S. We had to go to the south because it seems no one in Vancouver wanted to do anything about it.

"The dead fish are stacked up like mounds of hay on the beach."
